Perkins held the Orioles to six hits and clouted a home run with three on base in the third inning. Beryl Richmond also pitched well, yielding seven hits and fanning 11 men.

B. OF Q. TENNIS CLUB IS READY

Expect Successful Season With Jamieson Bone as Head

Jamieson Bone was unanimously chosen as president of the Bay of Quinte tennis club at their annual meeting held at the Y.M.C.A., last night. Considerable business was transacted by the executive of the club present and it was finally decided that the Inter-city match should affiliate with the Eastern Ontario Tennis League this year.

The E.O.T.L. takes in all affiliating senior clubs from Oshawa to Brockville on the north side of the east and from Peterboro, southward. All intermediate points have affiliated too. It was polished out, although the final date of the season will be set in the E.O.T.L. last year they had been hoodooed for the finals and a drive for new members is now in the making. It was the feeling of the executive that there are many enthusiastic tennis players in the community who have had no chance appearance at the courts of late and it is intended to allow the club officials to appoint a special drive for new members.

The officers for the ensuing year are—President, J. Bone; Vice President Lawrence Wren; Secretary-Treasurer Norman Clarke; Men's Captain Clarence Bryant; Ladies' Captain Mrs. Al Walters and Organization Chairman R. Wickerson.

To officially open the season the members present voted that a special tennis tournament would be held at the Bay of Quinte tennis courts on May 24th commencing at 10 a.m. A small entrance fee will be charged to defray the expenses of the trophies to be awarded.

PONIES ARE REAL THREAT

Opening Game Promises Many Thrills For Fans

Opening Day—To lovers of the baseball game, each opening day is the big day of the season. It means not only the first ball game, but everything more, when all the notables and the ancient game gather together, and hours before the game is played baseball fandom will be present. Belleville will be no exception to the rule when many baseball notables will be present when the Kingston Frontenacs play their opening game of the season of 1932 when league championship honors go to last and the Belleville Nationals take the field for the ball-lifter game of the year. No official announcement has been sent out from either camp as to the starting batteries for Tuesday's game but it is the thought of many that Gordon Gillespie will be the ball-toy for the Belleville club and Jackson will be the starting pitcher for the visitors. Captain "Penney" Mills, who is also Manager Conroy's right-hand man, will do the receiving for the locals while either Tetro or Jimmie Arnel will do the catching for the Ponies.

Personnel Changed

The personnel of the Nationals will be picked from players the calibre of Scarlet, Chapman and Shuter, from Trenton, Skinner Simpson of Stirling, who needs no introduction to the local fans, Conroy, Darrah, Morgan, Flagler, Ethier, Tice and MacDonald all hailing from while Alex Weir will lead the pack of outfielders which includes erry Hurley, Latchford, Walsh, Jack Marshall, Smith Ridley, Carter and others. Belleville fans there are pitchers the calibre of Casey, who looks to be in for a real season behind the tutoring of Peeney Mills, Huston and Perkins from Trenton, Ryan, Eisle Smith and Gerow of Belleville. Herbie Morris has not been with the club as yet but is expected to join their ranks before many days have past. Morris is an excellent hitter and while not on the mound may be used for outfield duty to help bolster the Nats hitting power.

Many new and young faces will be seen in the Nationals' uniforms this season and the fans will receive many surprises in the calibre of these new youngsters, when they once get started. Manager Conroy is a ball atmosphere. Manager Conroy is quite optimistic over the results of the Nat's spring training period and has the boys already to face fans for championships at the local ball park on May 24th.

CONNIE MACK LOSES FAITH IN R. WALBERG

Started Five Games and Five Times Batted Out

SENATORS WIN

Heavy Slugging Wins a Double Bill From Yankees

BY GAYLE TALBOT

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Connie Mack, able leader of the Athletics, has come to the conclusion that Rube Walberg, the big left-hander who won 20 games for him last year, will recover his winning form and be of any material assistance in the current flag race.

Walberg, one of the big factors in the A.'s drive to a third straight American League pennant last season, has been a great disappointment. He has started five games, been knocked out of the box the same number of times and thus far is charged with four losses and no wins.

Mack, as a result, has about quit starting his former star and has called Lefty Grove, Ed Rommel and Mahaffey to carry the burden. Only once in the last three weeks has Walberg been given a starting assignment, and that time he was crowded by Cleveland. The rookie Merrit Cain, was regarded as a possible successor for Walberg in surrounding out the staff's big four, but he failed when given a starting spot against Detroit the first of the week.

REDNERSVILLE WINS 2 GAMES

Take Consecon Into Camp, Second Time By Large Count

Carrying Place, May 20 (Special) —The second game of the Ameliasburg Softball League schedule was played in Rednersville last Thursday evening when Consecon came, and garred the local team in a close battle, the first one more being 7-6 in favour of Rednersville.

The Consecon team went on the long end most of the way, leading 6-2 at the end of the sixth, but a seventh-inning rally tied the score and when the eighth was over the Rednersville boys were one on top. The game was featured by close fielding and spectacular catches, and the large crowd which turned out to see the game were certainly not disappointed. Batteries and umpires were P. Mattis and J. Sprague.

The Rednersville team played on Consecon grounds on Tuesday evening, and the latter, having apparently being filled with a desire to make a second victory necessary piled up 41 between them, Rednersville taking the long end with 12 runs and leaving Consecon 12. The winners played consistent ball, and yielded 5 runs in the 7th inning when, with a lead of 24 runs, they loosened up a bit. Fielding and batting were ragged on the part of the Consecon team, and their pitchers seemed very uncertain. Neither team showed much of the form of the previous game.

Score by innings:

Rednersville ..... 600 467 0—29
Consecon* ..... 113 002 5—12

Line-ups:

Umpires: Mattis and R. Williamson.

One of the most conclusive proofs that the sport of baseball is more strongly belwind this softball venture is the way in which they turned out in droves and carloads to attend these games. Fans from all surrounding districts are present not only at their own games but at all line-ups as well. If you have not yet seen any of these games, by all means do so at the earliest date you can. The next game will be at Carrying Place when they will play a return game with Victoria. A large crowd is expected.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

It looks as though the death knell has been sounded for intermediate baseball in Belleville. If we understand the situation as it is there is no doubt but that the players themselves are to blame for the present condition of affairs in the intermediate ranks. Lack of co-operation on the part of players has discouraged many managers from operating intermediate teams the second term in Belleville. At present there is a project on foot whereby the players take an active part in the club's responsibility themselves. Then and then only will the players realize exactly what a manager has to contend with during a season.

With a senior and two junior O.B.A.A. teams in Belleville it naturally follows that the intermediates do not have any hed of rooe in this town and if there are not enough talented players at their initial workout on Wednesday evening next the disbandment of the local intermediate is inevitable.

It looks as though the two local junior teams will be somewhat disappointed when they find men working on the diamond next Tuesday morning preparing for the opening game of the C.O.B.L. season. The league rules state that no junior loop should have men for enough to play that considerable work has to be done on a diamond before a game is played and therefore their juniors would not be able to play in that league Tuesday morning. As a matter of fact the junior schedule calls for two together too many games of baseball for a small junior league is she. They would be well advised to postpone their opening games at least a week or two more.

Nearly every afternoon the Belleville Intermediate baseball can be seen parading out behind Memorial Park on the Ashley Macie Street while many young players can be seen daily up on the old cow track north of the Alemite plant. Although these boys have been doing try and organize a local lacrosse loop the game is slowly gaining popularity and it is our guess that there will be a prosperous box lacrosse loop in operation in Belleville before many weeks have passed.

It is with regret that we heard of the accident which befell Lefty Gerow, the fiery little catcher of the local National Maids, when she fractured her arm while attempting to crank her father's car. It is hoped she will have recovered sufficiently to resume her duties behind the plate when the soft ball season opens.

After some duration the senior players of Belleville succeeded together long enough to organize a team that decided to enter the Eastern Ontario Tennis League last night. It is too bad that there are not more interested tennis players in this community with the fine courts that are available at the Country Club. The few who are interested, however, got behind the ball last night and are staging a tournament at the Bay of Quinte Tennis courts on the morning of May 24th. They also are sponsoring a drive for new members.

After a rather hectic season the Major Bowling League, which operates under the Association Alleys on Bridge Street, finished in a blaze of glory last night when the Belleville Motor team won the league honors by defeating the Y.M.C.A. team two straight games. Following the play-off games the bowling players were tendered to a banquet at the conclusion of the winning team in the Recreation Alleys. All players wishing for Legault at their new President for the third consecutive year were unanimous in order to the entire staff of officers who were elected to office. To Leo Barrett, the genial manager of the alleys, there is considerable credit due also.

The day of miracles is not past. Due to the absence of Manager Gerow and Coach "Peeney" Mills no less a personage than Jimmy Ring, former star of Peterboro, was in charge of the junior Intermediate last night's practice of the Belleville Nationals. Ring put on batting to the infielders in fielding practice while Shiner was calling the plays and pestering the players as to the proper play at the right time. We still are waiting for the day when Shiner will be given what he deserves—a job as an umpire in the same side to argue with the players. He would look better every night out and their opening game of May 24th when the Kingston Penies will be here to play Belleville.

Both the champion B.A.A.A. Juniors and the Claco girls' softball teams played their last night. The former were at 4 yesterday in the old Fair Grounds while the latter were turned out at Ann Street School grounds. The American Hardware team also practised last night.

A special meeting of the Belleville National's executive was held last night and Art Vesey, Chris Lewis and Fred Woodley were appointed to look after the arrangements of dinners at the opening game. All seemed highly pleased with the special reserved section in the first row directly back of the stand. The baseball season seems looked better in Belleville, according to reports of the executive. Their season tickets are selling like the proverbial hot cakes.

JOE LEGAULT IS PRESIDENT

Belleville Fruit Winners of Bowling League This Year

Joe Legault was again unanimously chosen as president of the Major Bowling League operating under the Recreation Alleys at their final season banquet and election of officers held at the Recreation Alley's parlors last night.

The Major Bowling League has just finished one of its most successful seasons, when the Belleville Fruit team won the league honors by defeating the Moose bowlers in two straight games last night and annexed the 1931 bowling honors of Belleville. The winning Belleville Fruit team consisted of the following players: Tony Morrell, Pat Belnap, Paul Orlando, Louis Rossetti, Ralph Payne and James Simpson. The second place team which they defeated was made up of: Fred Drumm, W. Hogan, Dan Doran, Art Whalen and Les Gilbert.

Prizes Awarded.

Prizes were also awarded to the high bowlers of the season when Tony Morrell won the high average with 228. Jack Connolly the high three string record with 860 and Ralph Payne the high single scoring the evening both President Legault and Secretary Drumm presented each player on the winning club, while the individual were heartily accepted.

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Follett)

If a girl isn't skinny she might as well retire from the beauty race. Defects in grooming class her as second rate. Small matters, but they tell the story of lack of fastidiousness. Among those to be mentioned are the powder line on the neck of the frock, the handkerchief that is overdue on its journey to the laundry bag, finger nails that are chipped with polish remover, neck rages that are ready for a good trimming, soiled cuffs and wraps out from under, shoes that need new tops, stockings with twisted seams and maybe wrinkles at the ankles, flimsy garments that need cleaning.

Cracks and blisters between the toes betoken "athletes foot" or ringworm, produced by a parasite which is a vegetable fungus lurking in all swimming pools and bathing beaches and can be contracted readily by members of the family, especially if the bath mat is common property. Test it on the doctor who will prescribe.

To have glossy, thick, healthy hair, it is important to have a clean healthy scalp. More and more are the scalplocals for glorious hair gaining their faith to oily applications which coat the hair with a film that sets sealed away when the shampoo is on the beauty schedule. Mineral oil will suffice or olive oil or castor oil and alcohol, equal parts.

Little slimps, who would you like on their arms? Or other days, when wears a bit of solpson tissue fills the scantiness—all will find it profitable to set nuts and raisins, both of which are rich in calories. The quart of milk a day will do something too, even more if cream is used. Or, for a change, try a bowl-ful of milk and cream half and half thickened with crackers. Watch the scales for the good news. It will be there.

Through application of castor oil waste will often do a disappearing act. If the skin appears broken consult a doctor of the beauty kind, consult a medical man who specializes in skin diseases. That kind is a sensility wart which sometimes becomes malignant.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Aiden)

Why not a wool frock for informal evening year. A new frock is done in very sheer black wool jersey. It is cut on princess lines and flares softly towards the ankles. A bow of white jersey marks the modestly low front neckline.

You will welcome wool lace again when you find it used for Summer coats. A new model is done in vivid red woven wool lace and has a sleeve coat neckline and puffed sleeves.

A new length that is being promoted by coat makers is the three-quarter length. It will be used for suits next Autmun and at present is favored for sports coats. A good model is done in diagonal flecked woolen in natural color, with a brown collar and belge scarf. There is a dropped shoulder line and wide sleeves.

A set idea that is very good is the hat and scarf ensemble. A new model consists of a turban done in black and white checked taffeta and a scarf of the same that ties with a pussy-cat bow.

Beatrice Fairfax Letters

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Two of us boys went around for ten years with very nice girls; like us, they were both pals. Then we got the thing that they took us too much for granted, and to make them jealous we picked up a couple of girls, other cities, and began rushing them. After we got tired of those two ordinary girls, we tried to go back to our "first loves", but they would have anything to do with us. We'd like to make up. Do you think there is any chance?

Alfred and Jim.

My dear boys, I'll spare you anything in the way of a homily, but can you blame those girls for dropping you? It looks as if you'll have to go on a diet of tumbs for a long period before those two young ladies may care to their good graces—if they do at all.

You might try a few bits of choice bait, like sending them flowers and candy, and you might tell them you were only experimenting when you took up with the other two, just to show how popular you could be.

LOVE WITHOUT HOPE

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I think I must have loved him from the first—but he fell for my pal. However, as she didn't care for him, though she seemed to at first, she threw him over after a few dates. Then it was my turn, or so it seemed, and I listened to his "honeyed words" and fell for him. I had dated him two or three times, he had called me up to go out with him, could tell he loved her. She doesn't seem to care about it at all.

Lately he has been dating a girl or two, and I'm not jealous of them, but he says catty things about her to other people. I blame him for my not loving him, but how can you treat him only as a friend, or what?

"Buddie".

It is not well bred of a man to go with a girl, no matter what her reputation happens to be, and then say things about her that get back to her. I'm going with her proves conclusively that he finds her society agreeable. Why should he berate him own taste? I hope you won't think too much about this young man, he doesn't sound attractive from your description. You're worthy of some one better.

A CURE FOR JEALOUSY

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Not many people are aware of the jealous character that is within us. Nevertheless, it is there, but pride argues it hidden. It makes me cross and very irritable at times.

I have friends—only a few with people—and have a few close friends, which are my trouble. I am jealous of their friends, always the center of attraction and the boss of them than of me, and am usually miserable. This is true of both girl friends and boy friends.

Do I, a young girl, have to spend the rest of my life trying to cure this, or can you suggest a possible cure. Thank you.

"Jealous".

Since you are facing the facts squarely, I believe you will be on the road half won. The next step is to think that if you are really to be worthy of being the confidante of your friends, you must be more kindly disposed toward the people they like. Try to be broad-minded and tolerant. Study carefully what your good points are that make people like you. And whenever you begin to feel violently jealous of anyone, put yourself right to the test by trying to see its good points, even of making him like you, too.

SAD AND DISCOURAGED

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am so discouraged that I don't know what to do, or where to turn to. Perhaps I am now paying for some of the people I may have hurt. For now I'm really in love with a man—and things are hopeless. Two years ago, in the one and only very much interested for six weeks then without any word of warning, or as far as I know, of any other girl's appearance, he broke it much counied-on date.

From his actions and his own words, I was led to believe he loved me as much as I did him and I was happier than I had been for many rather unhappy life.

I loved this boy as I have loved no one else, and I didn't act indifferent. He's quite attractive—he doesn't care much for girls in general. I told him how things stood and told him to play squarely—and I got the gate.

Gypsy Girl.

You may have been too rash in telling him how much yo ucared for him before he had actually proposed to you. Why not let things drift for a while and see what happens? If their is no other girl to consider, the chances are that everything will come out all right, and—wouldn't it be wiser not to let him see how much you care if there is a reconciliation?

Just the thing for a cool Spring day is a jacket of mauve-dyed lapin. It has a notched rever collar and a two-button closing in double-breasted effect. There are straight sleeves and a cut away front.

Just a touch of white in a black outfit makes for smartness. A black woolen suit is worn with a white flower, a white patent leather bag and a hat of black crin with a brim of white gardenias.

Hall motored to Toronto on Wednesday to attend the meeting of the O.I.A. to the Jr. Ladies, which was held in the Oddfellows' Hall, Bathhurst street. A banquet followed the meeting.

Mr. Hugh Kennedy of Halifax, a nephew of Mrs. W. B. Deacon, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Deacon and convisited of a very interesting paper by Mrs. Pryse on "Social Service" and short readings by a number of the girls on "The Work and Purpose of the Circle". A quartette composed of Misses B. Horne, R. Bird and R. Colclough and D. Newson sang "In the Service of the King" while Miss Colclough contributed a solo. Several of the members who had been ill were welcomed back to the circle by their associates. Lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

One hundred guests were present last evening at the delightful dance held in honour of the graduating class of Belleville General Hospital in the Nurses' Residence. The halls rooms were received by the superintendent of the hospital, Miss Mary McIndoe. The floral drawing room was fragrant with flowers and the nurses of the graduating class received their uniforms, the graduates having received theirs on Wednesday evening. Charlie Goyer's Orchestra provided music for the dance which continued until one o'clock. The delnity refreshments were in the colours of the training school red and orange.

Weddings

ARNOTT—PHILLIPS

A very pretty wedding took place at Castleton on Saturday, May 14th when Sahra Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Phillips of Monumentown, became the bride of Mr. Harold Richard Arnott of this city, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Arnott also of Belleville. The ceremony took place at Castleton parsonage and was performed by Rev. W. L. Hinton.

The bride, who was unattended made a pretty picture in her frock of Alice Blue with white lapin jacket and black turban. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left on a motor trip to Niagara Falls, Buffalo and New York. When they return they will reside at 156 Burnham street. The bride was honored at a pre-nuptial shower at her home in Morganstown, last Wednesday when she received many beautiful gifts.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Men Have Few Beauty Problems

Upon the heads of women fall many a beauty ill but baldness is not one of them. That affliction was reserved for the male sex alone and nobody need deny that he does not get pretty well hot on the subject. With mirrors and strong lights he bombed the vacant spaces atop his illustrious pate, watching them spread, thinking fondly of the days when he flaunted a mop as thick and luxuriant as the best of them, trying this tonic, trying that. He doesn't receive half the sympathy that is due him. A woman would be crushed under such an appalling beauty woe.

Of complexion troubles, man is singularly free. The explanation is simple. He shaves away facial dirt along with his beard. He is an ardent soap advocate. He may dip into the good wife's cream pot now and then when his skin feels drawn and sensitive, or flekter on the talcum powder. Then he's through.

Men are akin to water animals. They are enthusiastic bathers and maybe that's another reason that their complexions show up a good average. On the question of food, they follow their inclinations. If they like spinach they'll eat it, and if they don't they won't. Vitamins and mineral salts mean nothing to them. Many of them load up on fattening food juice of any and ruin what once were svelte and handsome shapes.

Few men are unmindful of the importance of exercise. They go through setting up exercises every day, many of them. Some swing Indian clubs. Many seek swimming pools at the lunch hour. They need the golf links. Younger ones fill tennis courts. All of them are keen on swimming. Women exercise if exercise offers them the

LAW LIBRARY GETS BOOKS

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Yale Law School has just acquired for its library an original edition of Stat-hum's Abridgment believed to be the first printed English law book. An alumnus of the university, who preferred to remain anonymous, donated the book, which is priceless.

YOU'D NEVER KNOW HER . . .

. . . FOR THE SAME BABY

This is what Mrs. Albert Bolton, of Toronto, writes: "Our little girl, Margaret Jean, was nursed for the first few months, but this did not satisfy her, I had heard about Eagle Brand and decided to try it. She took to it right away and there has been no trouble since. Her flesh is firm, lovely, straight limbs, and good bone development, and she is so contented. Last September she won third prize at the Canadian National Exhibition, against 102 entrants.

If you are unable to nurse your baby, send for Baby Welfare literature.

Prices Rise on New York Market on Board's Formation

New York—(AP)—Securities dealers arrived considerable encouragement today from the announcement of the formation of a board of leading industrialists and bankers to assist the reserve system in credit expansion, but early buying enthusiasm soon flagged, although prices maintained a good undertone.

Leading shares pushed up one to two points in active trading during the first half hour, eased back to less about half their gains in the next two hours, but stiffened again after midday.

Extreme gains of two points or so were made in such issues as American Telephone, American Can, American Tobacco B, Allied Chemical, General Electric, Westinghouse, Santa Fe, Union Pacific, and Westinghouse and most of these issues retained a fraction part of their gains although American Telephone ran all but a point fraction at one time. U.S. Steel added a full point, last more of its gain then suffered again.

There were a few spirit tpcis. Public Gas and Pacific Telephone each lost more than a point, International Telephone and Telegraph rose to a new low under four. Motion Picture issues were strong, Paramount Beavy, Paramount and Loews sagging fractionally.

Aside from the rather intangible developments looking toward credit expansion, the market found little final it could regard as guidance in the day's news.

OPENED STRONG BUT WEAKENED

Lake Shore Moves Up Also Pioneer on New Lows of Stride

Toronto, May 20.—Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market opened with a slightly stronger tone today but failed to show any material improvement during the latter half of the day.

Lake Shore moved up 30 to $17.25 Pioneer of B.C. gained five to $3.15 and Wright-Hargreaves was up a point. Hollinger, McIntyre, Sherritt and Wright-Hargreaves and Noranda-Rights were steady. Dome met some light selling, however, and slipped through $11 for a 35-cent recession.

Kirkland Lake Gold, under pressure of heavy selling during the early block of stock, dropped another two to 25. Norwood was up 30 at 1.10. Hudson Bay recovered five to $1.10 and Bidlamac was unchanged. Peninsular Pete, speaking in a traction, showed the only change in the oil group.

SOFTBALL

Shamrocks Maintain Position at Top of League

Trenton, May 20 (Special)—The Shamrocks seem destined to stay at the top of the league last night by defeating the Wooler Leafs by a score of 9 to 5. This Wooler crowd is a tough bunch of customers and will be hard to beat before the season. Their pitcher "Soup" Free was hit hard and Dan Channel started off in the best fashion but this boy has seemed to have an off night as the Wooler boys managed him to the tune of 4 runs, when he then gave way to Ross Mallory who only allowed them one run during the remainder of the game. Smith on first for the Shamrocks hit the longest hit so far on the season, a long drive that went out into the Bay, a high wire fence is to be erected tomorrow which will shorten the drive of this kind.

One Year Sentence

Mr. Jim Hamilton, sergeant in the police court to answer to a charge of stealing an overcoat car from Mr. Chas. Mallory of Trenton. He had obtained the car to go to Oshawa to visit his mother-in-law, who was supposed to be ill at the time and he failed to return the car when he had promised to go. A police notice was sent out by the local police and he was arrested in Toronto last Wednesday. In his past record he was sentenced to one year in jail to be served at the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph. Mr. H. D. Graham acted for the defence and Mr. J. Donovan for the Crown.

Mr. Chicken Thieves Busy

Mr. Chicken Thief in Trenton was broken into on Wednesday night and the thieves took the best of the rooster, these fowl were of the pigmouth rock variety and were prizes winners. Mr. Slaughter owner of the farm is situated at the foot of the long hill going out to Consecon and the thieves have been having things too easy around there and as an example should be made of the culprits when they are caught.

Boxing Show

Boxing got a real boost in Trenton last night when the H.N.S. entertained the young men of the town in the Armouries and they all gathered to see the fun and it was one of the most interesting evenings held in the old town for some time. Mr. Wilfred Fitzpatrick, promoter of the eight bouts on the card did a good deal of work to match the boys. Mr. McCaughy, secretary of the H.N.S. in a few opening remarks said, that he felt it should be the aim of every young man in the town to help foster clean boy building activities and he was proud of one of these and the fact that a knowledge of the manly art of self defence amongst all any time it should have a return bout. It was certainly a hearty welcome to the men present, who were not members of the H.N.S. and hoped that this show would act as an incentive in the fostering of sport.

The first bout of the evening was between Bernard Lamore and Dan MacDonald 78 and 76 and, the respectively. The young lads mixed it in great style for the 3, 3 minute rounds which was the length of all the bouts.

Geo. Shankie and James MacDonald each weighing 113. Shankie worked both hands throughout driving MacDonald to the ropes where on the lower portion of his opponent. Neither boy being able to gain much advantage over the other.

Frank Donnelly 141 lbs and R. Poste 142...Donnelly was the ace for the clever boxer of the two but what Poste lacked in skill he made up in his boring in tactics If this boy had a little more weight he would make some of them go.

Jack Smith 138, Henry Brouwer 134—Henry proved himself a clever boxer and able to take a good deal of punishment. Smith put on a real show for the boys by his antics around the ring.

Reg Baker 133 and Harry Lang 135—This bout was a real slug fest the boys going right in and handing them out. Lang proved that he was not only a runner, but could box as well and was a little too much for Baker.

Don Long 132, Angus Duffy 128—Duffy proved too much for Long whose defense was weak while Duffy kept boring in throughout.

Reg Milligan 156, G. Mills 153—In the semi-final bout stepped a good show. Both were willing and Milligan scoring the only knockdown of the evening.

John Anderson 154, Kelly Gibb 170 was the final bout on the evening Gibb has the reputation of being a handy man with his mitts and as a member of the R.A.F. he is no perfect condition. John when others refused to box with him entered meeting Gibb 16 lbs and about 15 years. Anderson tries everything baseball, hockey and now boxing and he gave a very good account of himself during the bout. It would be a true match to see if Gibb were properly matched as he is very quick and an exceptionally long reach. It is the idea of the H.N.S. club to sponsor a meet in one of the public halls in town to stir up interest and create in some outside talent. We then may have the chance of really seeing what Gibb can do. Fourteen ounce gloves were used in the bouts last night and while they allowed plenty of action nobody was hurt.

WARM RAIN NEEDED TO URGE GROWTH

Soil Holding Sprouts Has Dried Considerably

All that is needed to make hay crop for farmers in this district is a driving further impetus to the growing crops which has been lacking for few days been sprouting like wildfire, is a warm thunderstorm rain, declared agriculturists today.

When it was pointed out that there had been a few showers in recent days ago, and that the ground did not appear to be dry, the interesting explanation advanced was, that the upper crust of the earth in the fields which are under cultivation have been dried out thoroughly by the winds which have been prevalent throughout the district for the past few days. The under soil is still wet, they claim, but the warm winds have dried the soil sprouts has dried out considerably. A warm rain at this period would add perfection to all growing things.

Actinolite Resident Assessed Large Fine

Vincent Courneyea, a young man of Actinolite, appeared before Magistrate Ketnie R. R. Casement at Madoc on Thursday to answer to the charge of unlawfully having had liquor in his possession on the 25th day of this month. He was found guilty and was assessed to pay a fine of $100 and $8.00 costs or to serve three months in the Hastings County Jail.

As the fine was not paid Courneyea was brought to Belleville yesterday and placed in the jail to serve the imposed sentence.

It is understood the prisoner was laid by Provincial Constable Mr. Mahood on information of the Ontario Provincial Police.

POLICE AND FIRECRACKERS

Boys and Youths Asked By Police to Use Common Sense

"Whether the residents of this city know it or not, there is a city by-law prohibiting the lighting of firecrackers within the city limits," said Chief of Police Alex Reid this morning.

"While we do not wish to put any damper on the legitimate use of firecrackers and crackers" further declared the police, "nevertheless the exploding of large cannon crackers and other noisy and destructive powder filled bombs and so forth, the like of which we had last night will be tolerated. Each year there is considerable damage done by the lighting sparks and remains of the fireworks which are carelessly thrown here and there in the rear of the buildings on the street, and it has been only through the vigilance of the store owners that a number of fires each year have not occurred. It was further declared that all fireworks possessed by the city will intend to let off on the evening of the 24th should be burned in an open space in the yard and not against or near any buildings.

Fire Chief Lynch reiterated the warning sent out by the police regarding the fire hazard accompanying the promiscuous use of fireworks, and appeals to the residents of the city to use sane precautions when handling the burning articles. The danger to small children who play with fireworks without proper supervision was also stressed by the chief.

The Narrow Squeak

By Nellie Agnes Crandall

The small house still aw-ay from the city fingers that tried to clutch it—Jane Morris caught her breath and gazed at the thin gleam. The third light of the lamp, blown by a draft from under the door, had made her clumsy; and the sudden loneliness of the one night had caused her nerves to fatal awkwardness. Jane was afraid of the dark—a little—the last bit of Danny's precious meeting left from the days of the words that seemed to stand in the room and threaten mock it. Her bright treasure carefully, reverently," Danny must have the third dose. Jane stared: fearfully at the clock on the table—he must have it in twenty minutes! Could he stand the trip by town in such a storm? She must try it!

Jane hurried to the bed. With an anxious look at Danny's little face, she began to wrap him snugly fully in the warm blanket. Fumbling in her haste, she got the second coat—that, half buttoned, was dragged off again to be turned around. She would be, all right, in her old red sweater, and she pulled her head cautiously, the bit of oil had to be enough. Out in the kitchen was the old car—and in a trice she had brought it to the door.

Jane held the whimpering Danny on the back seat and from the rear seat-ing back herself. "Oh Danny, baby, don't cry—you're so weak and tired."

Then she was at the wheel, forcing the car through the muddy road, veering through the dashes of rain that beat against the windshield and made her shiver with cold. Oh, why couldn't she hurry more? The mud dragged at the wheels and spray back, to slide again into deep ruts. The steering wheel jerked around in her cold hands—and Danny kept muttering piteously. "Now just a little prayer of re-lief when she left the dirt road and drove on to the macadam. "How much time left?" she thought, and she stood on the car to plunge on at its best speed. "It's for Danny—Danny—he's got to get better—he's got to, hurry!" And she was trying to will the miles to shorten...Through the mud dragged at the wheels and sprayed back, to slide again into deep ruts. The steering wheel jerked around in her cold hands—and Danny kept muttering piteously. "Now just a little prayer of relief when she left the dirt road and drove on to the macadam. "How much time left?" she thought, and she stood on the car to plunge on at its best speed. "It's for Danny—Danny—he's got to get better—he's got to, hurry!" And she was trying to will the miles to shorten...Through her mind flashed the wearing days of winter, She saw Hugh Morris's haggard face as he sighed, "Take care of Danny.... he's all that's left of me...believe me, she lived again her days of bleak despair" when Hugh was gone. Then she moved like a giant automaton about the dreary little house. She saw days when she neither ate nor slept.... Then the wrenching pain of Danny's cold and fever...When she had come to herself, Danny was already a frail, life-size shadow. Some phase of him from his thin little face had brought her back to reality...And she had brought his bed to the warmest corner of the kitchen, and the one room had become the treasure chest that held her only jewel.

Fiercely she spent her little strength gathering wood out where the old shed had blown down...the wood-pile had become dangerously low in the days of grief. She told Danny that when spring came his cheeks would surely match the brave red of the blossoming geranium that was the only pet he had...Jane was glad that it lived on water for food, with sunshine for warmth...Danny's feverish muttering rose above the clatter of the kettle. "Oh, Danny, you must hurry, hurry! Danny, dear?" Jane cried softly, and a little moan answered her.

Then on again, urging the little car to its limit ,straining eyes searching the road through the darkness and the rain on the wheel, mind pulling toward the old doctor in town...oh, she must be within a mile or two of town...there was the railroad crossing—just a mile farther! And then the light swung red through the rain...The Express was coming down around the bend...Jane could see the broad fan of light spread by the engine. She sat forward resolutely—no waiting for any train; a little more speed...oh, hurry, hurry! No time for caution. But the train was just down around the bend...spouse...oh, she couldn't suppose...not in just twenty minutes for Danny's life.

At last then a rising roar caught her ear—another train? No, it was a humming, crashing giant—not a sound Jane knew. It was another landslide in the mountains...the cut was around the other bend, and the engine's headlight would reveal it in time for her...Jane shuddered away from the swish and terror...in her hand was pity. She would get her precious cargo to the doctor...he was her trust...one thing being in her hands to save and love ...but into the security of her mind she must hurry, hurry. Danny's frail figure that was even now at the mercy of that evil power hovering ahead into the night, watchful for the safety of his train, for the lives of his passengers...one man, with the lives of his fellow beings in his trust.

Suddenly Jane was out of the car. With the murmur, "Danny...understand!" upon her lips, she was bending along the tracks stumbling and swerving as she dragged off her sweater and waved it wildly over her head...for an instant of terror she almost fled from the rush of the engine...then a sharp blast from the whistle warned her, and as she flung herself at one side the train was coming to a crashing stop. The engineer was climbing from his cab, and hurrying along the track.... "It's a landslide in the cut," shouted a brakeman...but Jane was blindly stumbling back to Danny....oh, she must hurry....what were all people in the world to Danny?

Back in the clubcar a single passenger was muttering crossly, as he flung his newspaper aside. "Can't sleep; can't even read, for all these jerks and bumps! He heaved his plump body from the cushioned seat, and went to the platform. "Hey, what's the matter? Thought this was an express"...But no one seemed...the porter didn't seem to be around. Then he saw a bareheaded little car rushing away up the road.... "Humph!", he grunted smugly, "another hayseed trying to beat the train; well, he made it by a narrow squeak!...and he went back to his newspaper.

But up around the bend the engineer was seeing again the windblown figure that had saved his train...Danny, the car he had rushed away...well, he himself would take a ride up here tomorrow and find out who she was and what he could be done for her.

And over in town an old doctor administered the medicine that was to break the hold of the fever upon the body of a frail child...while a trembling woman was weeping and thanking God silently for Danny things.

BAG POTATOES 2 DOZ. EGGS PAID 2 MEALS

Mr. H. Sells, a farmer living north of Udell-ville, had four head and tended all packs of potatoes which netted them later and yet there is a bag.

Last week he made the rounds of the town house, gathering up four dozen eggs and then took the potatoes.

Yesterday he loaded potatoes and eggs into the car, brought them into town and tried to sell them. He failed.

Just after the dinner hour he found himself in front of a downtown restaurant. He was hungry and so was his wife. They entered the restaurant, ordered a meal, ate it and were presented the bill. Rather than take the produce back home with him he struck a bargain.

Bill was one dollar; potatoes 50 cents a bag; eggs 40 cents. The meal was knocked off the bill by the genial proprietor, the exchange was made and everybody was happy.

THREE WOMEN

He seemed better in the morning, but stayed in bed until it was time to dress and go to the church. A flutter of false excitement ran through him. He'd broken the back of the unpleasantness. Tomorrow he would go on shake off the rest of it, there in the South.

They took Elizabeth away from him. Her mother said, crying happily: "It is not for him to see you in your wedding dress—baby."

Ellis had dressed her child; in the pearls sewn and encrusted, and lace, with the long court train which trailed useless to her modest little figure. Her shimmering veil, pearl-held, sank dropped the veil over it. She looked sweet, strangely blossomed.

Elizabeth shook her head—and looked herself in the face. Her eyes were wide, they shone, her mouth was red and curved. She sighed a long minute, looking into the eyes of Elizabeth Blowland.

A Lennox coach, taking the paternal duties upon its broad shoulders, drove to the church, with her and her mother. Ella, in a new gown of Louisa's providing, cried the entire way. Elizabeth sat bolt upright and shivered no word, not sound. In another carriage the sisters rode, ruffled in blue, clustering with the ushers who accompanied them.

Lennox went with the Van Alstyne boy and Mrs. Sheldon. Fred Van Alstyne loved his Sheldon friend. He was best man, and felt rather important.

"I've the ring and fee," he announced, "All safe. I say, Lennox, how hot you're looking."

Lennox croaked, gamely, "Nothing—this rotten cold—the South will fix me up."

Louisa did not speak, driving to the gulleting, in that upholstered mausoleum.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

The church was well filled. It was a beautiful wedding people said, craning their necks. A great many women cried, as women will, when Elizabeth on the arm of Diedrich Lennox paced slowly up the ribbon-set aisle, preceded by her sisters. It went off very well indeed said the people. Elizabeth looked lovely—oh, yes, "There should have been a rehearsal—a very quiet affair." And so with the train."

Presently they came down the aisle, having made their vows—for better—for worse—in sickness and in health. The audience, with a rustling, surging sound, stood to pay them Lennox. It was cheered, was flushed, his eyes bright. The girl on his arm, in her billowing white draperies, was as white as her veil. People saw how he put his hand over the hand on the coat sleeve and held it there. "The darlings!" observed Mrs. Van Alstyne, at the face and linen to her eyes.

Then they went back to the house. The reception was to be small, owing to the change in plans. Not more than a hundred guests, Louisa had decided.

Lennox and Elizabeth in the carriage.

He smiled at her as he got in and sat beside her, there. He fingered a spray of valley lilies in her bouquet and said, half shyly, "Mine—now."

It leaned back against the plum colored upholstery and shut his eyes for a moment. The lilies fragrance had left him. He was short of breath, there was a pain in his head, it stabbed like a knife.

Elizabeth looked at him, cast herself upon him, smothered him in her fragrant whiteness.

"Lennox—oh, is it" she implored. "You're worse? You're ill? Tell me darling!"

"Dr. worry—I'll be all right," he answered with an effort. He lifted her, and went on thoughtfully. "I'm sorry. I don't think I can go to that reception."

"You needn't," she answered him instantly. "We'll just drive on—to a little sigh, "Lennox, I'm so frightened."

At this appeal the strongest man from beloved to lover, he rallied. "Why, I'm not, bless you! Not a bit o. there, in the church, with all it people watching—and that—and the n't count. And I mustn't kiss you —you mustn't"

"No——"

She had her cool hands, cupping his face. How good, how beneficent they felt. She was holding her face, her mouth to his feverish lips, she was kissing him. Her tears fell, one or two or her hair upon his face.

"Darling—darling——"

He tightened his arms about her, exclaimed, with a gleam of triumph "You're mine!."

"I always have been."

"Elizabeth—you don't regret—the knot—the vow? She cried, "Never —never!"

They smiled at each other, a little sadly. They thought, "We're married."—but there was no answering note in the thought. They had known for so long, the sense of belonging, the making. No change. They had reached the house. Fred Van Alstyne waited on the arm of the carriage stopped, as the door was opened. Elizabeth's face was flushed.

Lennox spoke to him as he reached the sidewalk, wondering how he managed to walk at all.

"Fred—I'm ill in."

Van Alstyne, a worried frown between his handsome brows, took his friend's arm. They went upstairs to the room and shut themselves in.

Elizabeth, climbed by Aunt Mother and sisters, then by Ella, who had to repair any damage to the wedding finery, went to the room of bath. The orchestra, hidden behind palms in the big hall, was already playing. People were arriving, the house was filled with the buzz of warming of rooms and lilies.

"Lennox is pretty sick," said the young man, abruptly, when he had found her. "You'd best send for the doctor."

"That ill? But he was better—She paled slightly.

"He's ill—now now," said Van Alstyne who had always disliked her.

"The reception?"

"Out of the question."

Louisa went to a telephone.

Ten minutes later she knocked on Lennox's door. The girl opened it herself, she was ready to come downstairs. She was trembling, and against her breast, her face had a faint shine.

"Isn't she beautiful" asked Ella, who also ignored this, she spoke briefly.

"Lennox is ill. The doctor is on the way. You will have to go down and receive the guests. I will wait until the doctor comes."

Elizabeth's hands opened, the flowers fell on the floor.

"But I must go to him," she insisted.

"No—go and receive your guests."

Elizabeth pushed past Louisa.

"I will go," she cried. "What do the people matter?"

Her mother-in-law's hand fell on her arm.

"You will go downstairs," she repeated. Then she lowered her voice, spoke scarcely above a whisper but harshly. "Don't you understand? Have you no common sense. People must not know how ill he is."

She herself did not know. No one knew. But there must be cautious precaution.

"Very well."

The doctor came immediately. He had not been difficult to find; he had been at the church, had overborne a moment before coming on into the vestry. He made his examination in the room from which Fred Van Alstyne had been barred. Threatened pneumonia.

Louisa joined Elizabeth shortly afterwards, stood beside her in the receiving line. Ella stood there too, the sisters, some of the Sheldons. The room was hot, it was crowded, the music sang above the chatter, the murmur. He rises and fall of well-bred voices. People pressed through into the library, beyond into a small music room where the presents were displayed. Elizabeth stood, docile. She smiled, she gave her hand to clasp, her cheek to kiss. She answered mekanly, responding the names her mother-in-law spoke. "Thank you, Mrs. Shepherd—so thank you so much, Mrs. Vreeland; thank you, Miss Drummond, Mr. Carstairs."

The guests talked among themselves—too bad about Lennox — such a beautiful wedding. Just what was the matter with him? And Oh, a very heavy cold—a fever? I see—the doctor has ordered—best what a pity. No South someone said —isn't the Lennox-good—quite a pretty bride, don't you think? Oh, of course these very fair girls wish out in white—such a pity about young Sheldon.

They were much concerned.

Louisa Sheldon and Elizabeth Sheldon stood side by side. Sometimes their hands touched in the brush and sway of the crowd. They spoke to one another pleasantly, mechanically.

They asked neither of them go to him, stay by him. No one must know how ill he was.

CHAPTER TWENTY

Fred Van Alstyne moved about uneasily. He was not very alarmed but the situation upset him. He was a personable young man. He was a very popular one. He flirted with some of the younger girls; was attentive to Fanny. Now and then he looked over at Elizabeth. He had seen her often since she came to live at the Sheldons' but somehow he had never quite noticed her. Lovely, lovely, —a still, white flame.

After an indescribable time it was over, the last guest had gone, the last carriage had driven away, the caterer's men moved deftly about, the orchestra had scattered their stringed instruments together, had clouded them in dull green and departed. The house was finished. Flowers fading, cups and glasses, plates and silver glittered sideboards and tables.

Louisa said to Ella, "You, a feverish cold, but he's quite all right. No, of course they cannot travel today. I've wired—yes, in a day or so."

She looked wonderful. But Louisa was the stronger. She went back to her room, not apprehensive, and helped Elizabeth out of the wedding gown—did some one spill wine here on the train? What a pity, how careless—and unpacked a little. Elizabeth's trousseau. The going away suit, braided and many buttons, still, quiet and timid.

Why didn't he know her? She belonged to him. Why couldn't he open his eyes and speak to her just once?

God, make him better. God, let him get well. Oh, God, don't punish me like this——

Next door the nurse and Louisa Sheldon were waiting. They were awake, they were not speaking.

Three days later every one knew that Lennox was down with pneumonia.

"Where?" asked everybody. "Yesterday, wasn't it? Oh, poor boy. Poor little bride—isn't it dreadful?"

Elizabeth was banished from the sick room. The guests had gone. Ella had wished to stay but had tearful and insistent, but Louisa had swept her from the house, an unconsidered atom.

The nurse remained now, the new one, two by night and two by day. The doctors came and went, specialists, consultants. But Ellis—both waited, in corners, near the door. His mother went in and out. In the room barred to his wife, Lennox Sheldon fought for life.

If Elizabeth couldn't go in she could at least be nearby, couldn't she? She could wait, quietly, almost hidden, and then dart suddenly upon her mother-in-law and hold her with hands that shook and clutched.

MR. AND MRS. — VI TAKES JOE AT HIS WORD

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 29.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Hidden in the bush at one side of the trail, safe from the eyes of the searchers, should they miss their fellow and return for him, the lad choked the life from his victim. Then a strange desire seized him. His whole being quivered and thrilled. Involuntarily he leaped to his feet and placed one foot upon the body of his kill. He raised his face to the heavens to voice a strange, weird cry surging within him.

But no sound passed his lips—he just stood there a full minute, his face uplifted, his chest heaving to his pent emotions, like a statue of vengeance. The silence that marked the first great kill of the son of Tarzan was to typify all his future kills—just as the hideous victory cry of the bull-ape marked the kills of his mighty sire, Tarzan of the Apes. Akut, meantime, had turned back to search for the boy.

Soon the ape was startled to see a strange figure moving through the trees. It was the boy, yet could it be? In his hand was a long spear, down his back hung an oblong shield. On his arm and ankle were bands of brass and iron, while around his middle was twisted a lion cloth. A knife was thrust through its folds. The old ape could scarcely believe his eyes. The boy had mastered fear and proudly recounted the details of his exploit.

They made a detour around the hostile village. Now for days the boy practised with his spear until he gained a proficiency only attained by youthful muscles. Under Akut's guidance he came to know every jungle spoor and know the different beasts by scent. His nose could tell whether tip-wind there were two lions or four. Much more the-apes taught him—but far more was a species of intuition inherited from his father. He had come to love the jungle life.

CURTIS TAKEN HELD IN JAIL

Accused of Giving False Information in Criminal Case

BY SIDNEY B. WHIPPLE

Hopewell, N.J., May 19.—John Hughes Curtis, arrested late yesterday on orders of Attorney General Attorney General William A. Wilentz, on charges of obstructing justice.

Author of a hoax that at one time aroused national hopes that the Lindbergh baby would be returned and that set the entire coast guard of the Atlantic division into motion on a futile chase of imaginary kidnappers, Curtis was accused under section 1126 of the Criminal Code, which makes the giving of false information in a criminal case a misdemeanor.

If convicted, he faces a maximum penalty of three years' imprisonment or a fine of $1,000 or both, at the discretion of the judge.

His arrest came after a day of legal conference at which Wilentz, Attorney General and the prosecutors of Hunterdon and Mercer Counties participated.

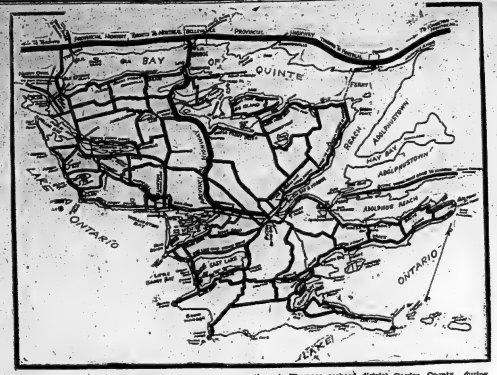
It had been intended to rush Curtis to the county seat, Flemington, for arraignment, but at the last minute arrangements were made for a special session of court with Justice of the Supreme Court Webster presiding, at the Lindbergh home.

Complaint Charges Falsity

The complaint, signed by Prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, of Hunterdon County, recited that the Lindbergh child had been murdered in the township of East Amwell on March 1, and that Curtis on May 13, "being within the State of New Jersey, for the purpose of hindering the apprehension of the person or persons guilty of the said crime, did knowingly give false and untrue reports of the manner or persons guilty of the commission of the crimes aforesaid."

Curtis waived a hearing, declining to plead to the charge and was remanded to the county jail at Flemington, in default of the $10,000 bail set by the justice of the peace.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took no part in the proceedings and was not present at the arraignment.



Curtis was taken immediately to the Flemington jail and placed alone in a cell.

He was sped to the back door of the jail to avoid a crowd at the front. His face was flushed and his soft hat pulled down over his brow when he hurried from the automobile to the door, dodging newspaper photographers.

The Norfolk roadbuilder, betraying indications of extreme nervousness and a persistent cough, was closely guarded "for his own protection" yesterday, while authorities plunged deeper into the motives for his extravagant fabrications.

An erroneous report that Curtis had attempted to commit suicide gained widespread circulation yesterday, but was officially denied by Schwartzbaur, who attributed the rumor to the fact that Curtis had threatened suicide last year, during his financial difficulties. Curtis was closely watched because of his disturbed state of mind.

At one time, aluminum was priced at $90 a pound.

Blossom-Time in P. E. County

May 22—May 29

Picton, May 20—Blossom Time in Prince Edward County will be observed from Sunday next, May 22, to Sunday, May 29. During this period, hundreds of Belleville, Trenton and district residents are expected to motor through the orchard districts.

It is but a short distance from Belleville across the Bay Bridge to Prince Edward where one can take many a lovely drive. The Belleville districts is a leading orchard district and Bellevillians can leave that city, proceed to Rossmore, follow Bay shore drive to Redners-ville and on to Carrying Place and home via Trenton.

Another good trip is to Picton and to Wanpoon District where there are many fine orchards. Returning, one can leave the main highway near Bloomfield and return by Wallington and Trenton. While in Picton, one could drive to Lake-On-The-Mountain, that most unique sight—a lake on a mountain and without visible outlet and 200 feet above Lake Ontario's level.

From Belleville to Rossmore, Hendersville, Ameliasburg Village, Wellington, Bloomfield and thence to the famous Sandbanks, then to the Outlet, with its wonderful tennis and beach, fine for motoring and home by East Lake, Picton and main highway.

A longer trip is to Picton and down one side of North Marysburg and back the other. One side is near the Bay and the other road through cloudy the Lake Shore, at the end of the point—Indian Point —is a picturesque fishing colony. Prinyer's Cove on the Bay Shore is a well worth seeing. One returns through Wanpoon orchard district. South Bay district has many fine orchards worth seeing. In blossoming time and has other scenic attractions.

Near Bloomfield, are located the Leavens, Orser and Morris cherry orchards, which present a beautiful sight now. The Leavens orchard is one of the largest of its kind in Canada.

At this time of year, motorists who wish to see the countryside in spring garb should leave the main highway and take to the country roads.

Nearly all drives in Prince Edward County are near the water, and breezes are always cool and refreshing. There are many lovely picnic spots and one should not forget to bring along a camera.

What more beautiful sight is there than a tree in bloom in the Spring? Imagine a whole orchard in bloom—and then orchard after orchard—trees laden with fragrant pink and white blossoms with green leaves peeping through.

Why go to Niagara to see blooms? Prince Edward County offers just as good or better. Plan to visit the Garden County during Blossom Time.

Distances in the county are as follows:

Picton to:—The Sandbanks, 11; Cherry Valley, 5; Salmon Point, 13; Glenora, 8; Young's Point, 6; Adolphustown, 8; Conway, 14; Bath, 22; Odessa, 24; Kingston, 36; Belleville, 22; Foxboro, 28; Deseronto, 18; Napanee, via Deseronto Ferry 22; Wellington, 11; Hurd's Point, 18; Trenton, 20; Brighton, 24; Wanpoon, 7; Cressy, 14; Prinyer's Cove, 14; Indian Point, 19; Bongard's, 12; Outlet Beach, 10; Bloomfield, 5; Crofton, 11; Mountain View, 14; Salmonford, 7; Point Traverse, 18; Green Point, 9; Salmonville, 16; Northport, 14; Elmbrook, 4; Bethel, 7; Demorestville 8.

With fruits and flowers, and scenery new,
Our Isle of Quinte welcomes you.

Trappers Reported Missing After Fires in Rouyn Area

Five new forest fires in New Brunswick, and sporadic outbreaks in remote districts of Quebec were reported early today. Crews of firefighters left early this morning for the distant northwest corner of Northumberland County, N.B., where a blaze of serious proportions was said to be ravaging corn lands.

The mining towns of Rouyn and Noranda in Northern Quebec were not in immediate danger, according to an early bulletin issued by the Quebec Forestry Service. It was reported last night both communities were threatened with imminent destruction.

The latest districts to suffer destruction by fire are: New Brunswick, mouth of the St. Francis River; Megantic County and Victoria County; Quebec; Val Cartier and the North Shore of the St. Lawrence River.

First fear that loss of life might have been suffered in widespread conflagrations came from Rouyn.

Two lumbermen were reported missing.

Manitoba had joined the ranks of blaze-ridden provinces Wednesday when a forest outbreak approached within 400 yards of the city settlement of Elma near Winnipeg. But townfolk armed themselves with waterbuckets and subdued the spreading flames before they could assume serious proportions.

Teacher Asks Loan from Envoy "Jafsie" Condon and Police Seek Reason

Woman Questioned as to Offer to Help in Search.

STORY TRACED!

Rosner Explains Gangland Dealings After Called in

Hopewell, N. J., May 20.—A public link between a Brooklyn school teacher and "Jafsie" was established by police yesterday.

Behind the closed doors of the Brooklyn District Attorney's office officials questioned Mrs. Mary G. Ford for two hours, it was reported that she had communicated with Colonel Lindbergh's go-between in an effort to obtain $1,000 reward money for Condon.

In another room other officers interrogated the teacher's brother Miss Gertrude Ford, whom they located in a Brooklyn apartment house.

Both told substantially the same story of their contact with the aged "Jafsie", and later were released.

Still Investigate

District Attorney W. F. X. Geoghan said he neither believed nor disbelieved their explanation, but would continue investigating.

Mrs. Ford told her questioners a story of how she had undertaken, out of thinking "Jafsie" might be able to aid her in her work, to obtain a loan for him for $2,500.

Information supplied by public school officials started detectives off on their first trail. They soon heard Mrs. Ford talk to Dr. Condon by telephone, they said, and know she was absent from her duties because of illness on the day of the kidnapping.

When questioned about her conversation with "Jafsie" they told officials she said Mrs. Ford told Condon she had spoken to, and said it was the daughter's physician.

Under questioning, Mrs. Ford said first thought of Dr. Condon when a private detective inquired her about another matter, and started questioning the Lindbergh case.

Wished to Help

She wrote to Dr. Condon, asking an appointment, to discuss a personal matter, and adding she would like to be of service in the Lindbergh case. He replied by letter, asking for her telephone number. She sent him the school number.

Dr. Condon called her, and she told him for $2,500—$1,700 to settle an account and $800 for her daughter, who had motion-picture ambitions.

Dr. Condon told her to write to him. During the next few days several days later and some one at his home said he was in Washington, she said.

She explained her absence from school from illness, and Dr. Condon by saying she and her daughter had been out in the car, and one of the physician she said treated them. Dr. Condon said he would check that part of the story.

Geoghan said he would ask Dr. Condon to come to his office today, with the letter Mrs. Ford wrote him.

Rosner Tells Story

New York, May 20.—Underworld intimates of Arnold Rothstein told Hoover today the World-Telegram yesterday said every gangster in the country was under control of the underworld's own peculiar class.

"The first thing I did was to go to all the big mobsters and tell them to help," Rosner was quoted as saying. "Every one of them did."

Sought All Hiders

"They started off by suspecting anybody who was missing from the usual haunts. That included habitues, gangsters, or fugitives from justice, and other fellows who were hiding out because they thought they were on the spot in some fruit.

"Every one of them was hunted out and questioned. Each one of them had to convince his questioner he was hiding for some other reason before he was released. Any one suspected that he knew about the kidnapping

TORY CHEWING GUM

Tom Mix's reputation goes back to the earliest traditions of the motion picture business. He was the original western star, and for many years his popularity and prestige increased. Strange to say, the three years of his absence from the screen have merely served to demonstrate the tremendous popularity with which the theatres throughout the country welcome to-day the debut Tom Mix pictures, delayed unfortunately by his operation, insures a rather spectacular run of "Destry Rides Again" than that of any other picture which has been shown this year.

For a time it looked as though Tom would never ride again. In that respect, the title of the picture was prophetic. But ride again he did, and his ability to stage the dare-devil stunts for which he has become famous, has resulted in one of the most desperate struggle which he ever attempted, the struggle with Old Man Peritonitis, the title, "Destry Rides Again," took on an added significance. In addition to the inevitable Tony, the cast includes Claudia Dell, beautiful Fifi Dell Follies girl, Zazu Pitts, Earl Dwire, Stanley Blystone, Lucien Littlefield, Frederick Howard, Edward Peale and George Ernest.

"Impatient Maiden" Novel.

Imagine a man saying this to a girl like that! Or a girl saying to a girl who has gone through her young life in the firm conviction that the prime interest of every man lies in feminine legs! Or a girl who would instantly be on her guard, ready to repel the unseemly advances of the male.

But when a young doctor addresses such a remark to her young patient, his statement with a total lack of offence. He is merely amused to show the girl's interest is aroused and she responds to it. Thus for the first doctor—only to find that he is by no far advanced on the theory of the complementary of love and the conviction that marriage should play in it. This is the setting of "The Impatient Maiden," a delightfully frank comedy-drama which has become a film offering on the same program. Lee Tracy has the starring role of the young physician and Mae Clarke is the girl who is the case. The picture was directed by James Whale, and in other leading cast members of the cast are Una Merkel, Gene Raymond, Reginald Denny, Cecil Cunningham, Helen Jerome Eddy and Arthur Hoyt.

Quebec and N.B. Still Dotted With Fires

Montreal, May 20 (CP)—Members of the $50,000,000 damage suffered by the province of New Brunswick in 1923 were recalled today when the Provincial Forestry Service continued to receive reports from all parts of the province of forest fires still burning.

New Brunswick and Quebec were still dotted with scores of bush fires, many of them with a ghastly mourning loss of trees and other property. Some of the fires were the cause of destruction of settlers homes and summer cottages.

TOM MIX AND LEW AIRES IN NEW TWO FEATURE BILL

Tom Mix, the greatest western hero of all time, returns to the screen after three triumphal circumyears, in "Destry Rides Again." It is scheduled to play the Belle tomorrow and Monday on the two feature program, and it marks a red letter day in this town. There isn't a boy under sixty who doesn't plan to turn out and hear as well as see Tom Mix on the screen. The only drawback to the first talking appearance of this hero is the fact that Tony cannot talk, too. There isn't anything that Tony cannot do, but so far Mix has not been able to teach Tony to say anything except "Giddap" in any language.

Tom Mix's reputation goes back to the earliest traditions of the motion picture business. He was the original western star, and for many years his popularity and prestige increased. Strange to say, the three years of his absence from the screen have merely served to demonstrate the tremendous popularity with which the theatres throughout the country welcome to-day the debut Tom Mix pictures, delayed unfortunately by his operation, insures a rather spectacular run of "Destry Rides Again" than that of any other picture which has been shown this year.

For a time it looked as though Tom would never ride again. In that respect, the title of the picture was prophetic. But ride again he did, and his ability to stage the dare-devil stunts for which he has become famous, has resulted in one of the most desperate struggle which he ever attempted, the struggle with Old Man Peritonitis, the title, "Destry Rides Again," took on an added significance. In addition to the inevitable Tony, the cast includes Claudia Dell, beautiful Fifi Dell Follies girl, Zazu Pitts, Earl Dwire, Stanley Blystone, Lucien Littlefield, Frederick Howard, Edward Peale and George Ernest.

At The Capitol

BIG DOUBLE BILL AT THE CAPITOL TODAY AND SATURDAY THE BIG TIMER

A very human story of youth, its ambitions and disillusionments, its set-backs and come-backs, is told with pathos, heartache, rich humour and some good thrills, in "The Big Timer," showing at the Capitol Theatre, Belleville, matinee and evening through its simplicity, sincerity and understanding.

Ben Lyon portrays the character of Cocky Bradford with a vitality and sympathy that makes you like him even when he is being his dumbest. You thought for Mae's wise guy, he isn't as smart as the girl who stands by him.

Constance Cummings makes Mae Clarke's boon companion and she has wit, sweet and strong. You feel that Honey would like to be a clinging vine and lean on a strong and reliable Cocky, but she must be a pool cozy until he is strong enough to stand on his own feet. The story, as told by Robert Riskin, who also wrote the clever dialogue, starts when Cocky is just a bumboyer and Honey is a hash-slinger.

Then Pop is killed and Honey and the Kewpie have to pay the debts but Pop's fighters won't let a girl manage them. That gives Honey a chance to exploit Cocky. After much work and many hard knocks the boys get into the big money class. The championship is his goal when big Mae steps into the picture Avenue and breaking into society helping in love affairs. Honey must start him worrying about his ears and his nose. That soon brings about his downfall as Mae is infatuated with Honey that separates them. However, Honey is a fighter to the bitter one—than Cocky! She works on the theory that love received by Cocky's self-confidence and all ends well.

Eddie Burrell, directing his first feature, has made a very real picture. Thelma Todd is delightful as the Park Avenue siren and various other colorful characters are cleverly interpreted.

Much of Credit For Fine Showing is Given Capt. J. Howard

COL. PONTON SPEAKS

Band, Under Direction of Ross Hunter, Furnishes Climax

At the inspection of the R.C.I. V.C. last night, favourably surprising some very laudatory and complimentary remarks were made regarding the excellent showing the unit had made, and what was said was heartfelt. Perhaps to the boys and girls occupying the corps, the praise was applicable for of course has there been a finer showing by a Cadet Corps than that of yesterday, and it was not by the feeble speakers' ability that the sentiments were expressed, but by many of the 300 present who had the pleasure and privilege of witnessing the presentation of the colors, and the subsequent fine inspection of the unit. Cadet Officer Dalton Bedford, his staff and fallen well, while the girl cadets of the Commercial Cadet Corps under Lieut. Lee were as O.C. won the hearts and approval of all. They certainly presented the neatest of neat appearance and their sprightliness in march and movement was quite up to the standard as that displayed by the stronger sex. Better at the hands of officers of the corps is as unstinted.

Capt. Howard Praised.

To Capt. Jim Howard, who has been the capable and energetic leader for the upbuilding of the corps and to him the commendation for the fine institution, goes in a great measure the credit for all the showing made, and the proficiency attained by the unit, while Ross Hunter has had the band in such fine and outstanding success by his earnest work, that the band deserves much praise. That band won plaudits and applause on all occasions.

Genl. Anderson is not in anyway given to flattering words, commends when such is not justly earned, but his remarks in addressing the corps last evening were sincere, and thoroughly won. The neatness and appearance of the corps was highly commendation, the size of the company and their proficiency under the brass band delighted him, and he was pleased to know that he had ever seen attached to a cadet corps and he approved heartily of the idea of the Commercial and the School Board on the efficiency of the corps now in existence in providing and fitting uniforms.

Principal Proud of School.

Principal Ponton, also speaking said he was proud of his school this day, and it was a matter for pride to Capt. Howard, the showing the corps made.

Col. W. N. Ponton, who had from his recent sick bed, and showed that while he was still very devoid of his old time fire of patriotism and enthusiasm, that he had hardly started speaking before he was his old self again, and the dressing a school audience on a theme in which he has due reference to the long years he has been in school matters and cadets' interests, and the part he has taken amongst them once more, following the inspection by Brigadier Anderson, the cadet corps accorded him a like honour.

Mr. John Elliott acting for the chairman of the Board, Mr. Wm. Ross who was out of the city, endorsed what had been said by the previous speakers and announced that a holiday soon to be a holiday.

Lieut.-Colonel Brigadier later Capt. Howard ably addressed his corps and expressed his gratification and for the loyal support they had given him. He spoke of the new colours and how pleased he was made possible by the work of four Hill Tech girls, Doris Bennett, Hazel Brown, Ruth Sills and Phyllis Stokes, colours presented by Miss Everson. The colours were a credit to the corps and he trusted the cadets would ever be a credit to them.

Held Dinner.

Last evening at the Queen's Hotel, the cadet officers held their 2nd. annual inspection dinner having as their guests, those who had taken part in the morning exercises; and the finish put a finish of activity a dance was held last night in the gymnasium of the school.

Alleged He Tried to Poison Woman in Hotel

Tilbury, May 20—Charles Lemon an aged widower, proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, Tilbury, Ont., was arrested last evening by Provincial Orderr Kelly on a charge of unlawfully attempting to administer poison to Mrs. Albert Lepan on April 14.

He was arraigned before Magistrate Callwood who remanded him to Chatham jail.

Mrs. Lepan and her little son were boarders at the hotel, and as mentioned she noticed a heavy sprinkling of strange-looking powder on bacon and potatoes set before her.

Being suspicious aroused, she did not touch either article of food. She summoned Constable Kelly, who scraped a little of the powder off the food. He also treated it. The powder which was pronounced of an arsenic nature, was forwarded to the analyst at Western University for complete analysis. His report has not yet been received.

OCEAN FREIGHTER DOCKS AT PICTON

Will Take on 300 Tons of Canned Goods From That Port

Picton, May 20 (Special)— The hundred tons of canned goods will be loaded.

ocean going freighter Rosebank is expected here late today or Saturday for canned goods which are consigned by Canadian Canners (Western) Limited. The boat will take the canned goods to Vancouver and Victoria by water, to Montreal, up the St. Lawrence, down the Atlantic coast, through the Panama Canal and up the Pacific to British Columbia. The big freighter will dock here at Hyatt & Harly wharf and over there the Rosebank recently arrived in Toronto from Montreal after an ocean trip from Vancouver.

brought as her cargo there 700,000 feet of British Columbia fir and 10,000 cases of salmon. A similar cargo was awaiting at Montreal.

It was the first effort in years to bring freight to Montreal, and Toronto from Vancouver via the Panama Canal.

This is not the first time an ocean going freighter has visited Picton and took canned goods to British Columbia via the Panama Canal, however. Two such vessels were here last season.

The visits of these vessels demonstrates that if the St. Lawrence waterways project goes through, some treat ocrous shoals for large freighters.

Mr. Charles Holmes of Odgensburg is spending the summer with his daughter, Mrs. H. H. Rose and Mr. Rose at Waupoos.

Mr. George Buck of Belleville spent a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Milton Young.

Mr. V. Bergeron has returned to Lake-On-The-Mountain resort and Point Anne and back. Capt. Hudgin is well acquainted with Bay of Quinte waters where there are this popular spot. The mysterious Lake-On-The-Mountain, which has no apparent source, and is 150 feet above the level of Lake Ontario, draws hundreds of people each year. Mr. Bergeron has converted the resort into a pretty spot. From the Mountain one gets a wonderful view over the Bay of Quinte and land far off in the distance. Even the Mountain ranges in Hastings County, thirty miles away can be seen on the horizon.

Scientists are still working on the problem of determining the exact shape of the earth.

MACAULAY ASSAILS LIBERAL LEADER

Claims Vicious Campaign in West York

Toronto, Ont., May 20—Hon. Leopold Macaulay, provincial Minister of Highways, accused Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, last night with making extravagant election promises in the course of a West York by-election address. West York will go to the polls on May 24 with the issue a successor to Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey, former Minister of Health.

Mr. Hepburn was conducting a "vicious campaign," he said, and had resorted to "mass production in political bribery on the grandest scale ever attempted in Canada."

The U. S. Department of Agriculture states that there are already 400 varieties of cheese. The 400 or more names given to cheeses are of local origin.

AMELIA EARHART PUTNAM SPANS ATLANTIC LANDS IN IRELAND AFTER TEN HOURS TROUBLE

First Woman to Cross Atlantic in Solo Flight Brings Plane Down Near Londonderry After Thrilling Trip

Four Years After First Flight Over Ocean as Passenger, She Rivals Lindbergh's Success of 1927

TELLS PRESS TO ADVISE FRIENDS

Mist, Rain and Little Fog For Greater Part of Way Across, She Says in Her Message to Press Association

Culmore, Ulster, Ireland, May 21—Amelia Earhart Putnam, the first woman ever to fly the Atlantic alone, landed here this afternoon. Culmore is five miles from Londonderry.

The plane was undamaged.

"I had this trouble (with the exhaust manifold) for about 10 hours," the press association quoted Mrs. Putnam, "and for a lot of the way I was flying through storms — mist, rain and a little fog.

When Mrs. Putnam landed, the press association said, she declared: "I've done it!"

"I had to land here in the pastures outside Londonderry," she continued.

"I'm not a bit hurt and I think the plane is all right. I had trouble with my exhaust manifold, which had burned out.

"In addition the gasoline gauge was not broken, probably in the storm last night, and there was a little leakage, so I decided to come down. I landed in an open field."

Notifies Press

Then Mrs. Putnam went on. "I want to send this message: I am very glad that it has come across successfully, but I am sorry indeed I could not make France. I am going to speak at my luncheon soon as I can by the Atlantic phone."

Mrs. Putnam's husband, George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher, announced in New York last night that his wife had landed safely in Ireland.

The announcement said Mr. Putnam received word in Londonderry, from a friend of Mrs. Putnam's, by the telephone last night. The message, he said, "was to call up so that my wife could be informed she had been without delay."

The message telling the landing was made in a mile or two from Londonderry, the announcement said. The owner of it was the first to learn Mrs. Putnam's fate.

Crossed in 1928

Once before, in June, 1928, the flyer crossed the ocean in an aeroplane. But that time she was a passenger, Asked to compare her first flight with her present, she said: "There is no comparison. On this one I was flying the whole time and had to rely on myself. On the other I am a student after the terrible roar of the engine in the ears of a pilot. But as any rate I have done it myself this time. That's what I shall do," she continued.

"I may fly back, but I've only clothes to have with me are the ones I have on. My flying suit, I haven't much."

She will not go to London after Paris, she said, but she will send a message to her husband, telling him about it.

Husband Announces

NEW YORK, May 21.— George Palmer Putnam, who discovered the aviatrix and helped her leaped out over the Atlantic last night with high hopes of being able to continue to fly alone to Europe, sat in a hotel room today with his publicity staff waiting".

To him this flight means a whole lot more than that of four years ago when Amelia Earhart flew across the sea with Wilmer Stultz and Lew Gordon. She is Mrs. Putnam now.

"Less than half an hour after his wife, by her own admission, had flown over Europe, Putnam would not say whether he still felt as confident of her success as he did on the last night.

"I...a not talk about it just now," he said, "I'm just waiting."

It was Putnam, the Publishers, speaking about, as he later said, for the "Girl Lindbergh" who sponsored Miss Earhart's flights to the British Isles in 1928.

A Woman of Courage

NEW YORK, May 21.—George Putnam has described his wife as a companion with the London Daily Mail in that Amelia Earhart, his wife, had landed in Ireland. The Sketch told Putnam that his correspondent at Londonderry had interviewed Miss Earhart after she had landed.

"Of course, I'm overjoyed," Putnam said, "but we knew how well were and she'd do it.

"She has more calm courage than any person I ever knew."

15 Hours, 39 Minutes

LONDONDERRY, May 21. — It was 2.30 p.m. (9.30 a.m. E.S.T., when Mrs. Putnam landed. She had made the trip of approximately 1,900 miles in 15 hours and 39 minutes.

All British and France had been practically eagerly for news of her special interest centering on the fact that today was the fifth anniversary of the flight of Colonel Lindbergh, to whom attention had been directed since by the hard death of his child.

When Mrs. Putnam had reported she was safe, she got into an automobile and left Londonderry for an announced destination.

"I'VE DONE IT" CRIES AMELIA AS SHE LANDS

Culmore, Ulster, Ireland, May 21 (AP)—Amelia Earhart Putnam brought down her red and gold monoplane in a field on the Donegal side of Lough Foyle this afternoon and thereby became the first woman ever to fly the Atlantic alone.

She landed on this side of the ocean five years to the day after Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh arrived in Paris from New York, successfully completing the first solo flight across the Atlantic by a man.

"I've done it!" Mrs. Putnam exclaimed when she got out of her ship.

She Gauges Broken

She intended to go to Paris but it was necessary to cut her flight short because her exhaust manifold had burned out and the gasoline gauge was broken, causing a little leakage.

The Lake Moods fliers, who took off from Harbor Grace, Nfld., at 4.15 p.m. EST, yesterday, got a lift by motor to Londonderry, nine miles away, where the first thing she did was to get on the telephone to the Associated Press in London in order that her husband, George Palmer Putnam, New York publisher, and her friends back home might know that she was safe.

Her plane was not damaged in the landing and she was wholly unhurt.

Thin Edge of Militarism is Cadet Training Say Members

Ottawa, May 21 (CP) — Cadet training in schools was attacked in the House of Commons today as being the thin edge of militarism. Especially in these days of distress and impoverished communities, it was impossible to justify an expenditure of $260,000 when many schools were closed, Hon. D. M. Sutherland, the Minister of National Defence was advised.

Leading the attack on cadet training was Miss Agnes MacPhail, Canada's only woman member. Even if the country could afford the money, the work should not continue, she said. It was a "terrible waste of money" and even from a military standpoint it was a failure. "It doesn't make soldiers," she declared.

Sutherland was strongly in favor of cadet training in schools and, replying to several opposition members, he was unable to undertake to cut the expenditure next year. The offending item finally passed but not before Dr. Thomas Donnelly, Lib., Willow Bunch, said it would be difficult to explain such a large expenditure of 500 people whose children were unable, to attend schools.

Melrose Farmer Had Made Several Wills Before Last

John Taylor Wanted Will Which Could Not Be Upset, Says Witness

CHOICE EXECUTOR

Litigation of the estate of the late John Taylor, of Melrose, varously estimated at between seven and eight thousand dollars, including several other properties of uncertain marketable value, the will of which named a nephew, Mr. Joseph Taylor, of Belleville, chief beneficiary and executor, has attracted considerable back and sections of the county to the county court house this afternoon and other smaller beneficiaries attempt to have the named executor set aside and another executor appointed by the court. The case opened before His Honour Judge Deroche Price this morning. Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C. of Napanee, Hon. Chas. Gordon for this city, and Mr. I. D. Corcoran of Trenton, representing Mr. Gilbert Mrs. Herbert Holmes, Miss Lazier and Margaret Sampson, all named beneficiaries in the will, Mr. Peter KC., Mr. J. D. O'Flynn and Mr. Ormonde Butler represent the executor, Joseph Taylor of Trendinghas, present executor of the will, and the executor only of the residue of the estate which had been left. They seek to have this the will, under the conditions of propriety and under no duress in substantial. Counsel for those fighting any move made to set aside the property secured. The case hinges its interest on the fact that all participants in the case action are well known farmers and residents of the townships of Hastings Ontario, and also on the fact that in that particular district there has been no precedent for such a court action now under way.

Witnesses Examined

The case was opened Friday morning by the examination of Mr. J. D. O'Flynn, Trenton, executor of the late Mr. O'Flynn by Mr. Butler brought the information that the wishes from the late Mr. John Taylor quite well and had given no legal opinion for him on numerous occasions. One of the latter appeared to be that performed for the late Mr. Taylor was the drawing up of a will for him on instructions from Mr. Taylor and visited him at his office.

"According to Mr. Taylor," related the witness, "previous will's drawn up for him from time to time now did not seem to suit. He wanted another one drawn up. The late Mr. Taylor was perfectly rational, discussed stocks and bonds freely, said that this would be the last will, and hoped that it was "fool proof". No Dominion Bonds were mentioned by his uncle, the late Mr. Taylor, he declared. He said Joseph had always been good to

It is trusted that this notice will be brought to the notice of the invitation to attend the ceremony at 10 a.m. at Memorial Park.

RAIN LESSENS FIRE DANGERS

Will Fly Plane Over Area to Estimate Damage

Montreal, May 21 (CP)—Prospects of rain today gladdened the hearts of forces engaged in grappling forest fires in New Brunswick and Quebec provinces. Overcast skies heralded further precipitation to aid in the quenching of the series of conflagrations, which have kept forestry men in the two provinces in a work all week.

New Brunswick authorities planned an aerial survey of the situation, if the weather is favorable, a government plane to be used to be the forces struggling to subdue the flam a.

It is the first time such a method has been employed in fire-fighting in the province. Fires in the vicinity of Medgwick and Bathurst have been menacing.

Considerable improvement was reported in the situation throughout Quebec. Rain fell in many sections. Rouyn and Noranda were definitely out of danger, while serious outbreaks in the upper peninsula were brought under control.

Australia possesses more trade unionists in proportion to her population than any other country in the world.

Honoring one of the pioneer farmers of this district, and one who is widely and favourably known by a large circle of friends, relatives of Mr. Philip Deneys, Trent Road, gathered at the home of his son, Fred, yesterday to observe with him his nineteenth birthday. It seemed almost incredible, that Mr. Deneys has reached this advanced age, as he is so active and so well has he retained his faculties. He possesses a retentiveness of memory, which is the wonder of his friends, relatives and neighbors.

Mr. Deneys was born in Sidney, on the 1st of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Deneys. Mr. Deneys was one of a large family of ten of, which he is the only living member. He began the career of farming, a vocation which he followed for many years, and which he carried on with scythes and cradles were used and harvest time was the busiest season of the year. Mr. Deneys became one of the most prominent and successful farmers of Sidney. He retired some years ago after a prosperous career. Mr. Deneys has always been a lover of horses and even today he gets up at an early hour to feed his pet horses. Motoring, however, is one of his enjoyments and last year he motored from A very pleasant trip to Toronto and Niagara.

The gathering yesterday was a happy one. A sumptuous dinner was served, at which forty immediate friends and relatives were present. Seven Children, Mrs. Deneys and Belleville. The centre of attraction was Mr. Deneys' big birth day cake glowing with ninety candles.

The toast to the King was proposed by Rev. J. R. Butler who referred to Mr. Deneys' career as a farmer, citizen and also told many amusing instances in the life of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, who is held in his morning bulletin.

DRIVER LEAVES CLUE ON STRIKING PUMP

At three o'clock Friday morning the night attendant in charge of the Imperial Oil service station at the corner of Bridge and Dundas streets was aroused by a very loud noise; he went outside and looked around but failed to locate the cause of it.

Friday morning at seven o'clock when the service station on the corner of South Front and Dundas streets was opened for business, it was discovered that a gasoline pump and the wall of the station were very badly damaged. The city police department was immediately notified and Constable Sears went to the station to investigate. Near to the damaged pump was found a thin peg and a door handle from a car. The evidence indicates that the noise heard by the night attendant at the neighboring service station was caused by a car which was turning east onto the highway at Dundas street and carelessly failing to make the turn, crashed into the pump and wall at the Baker station.

The police department will use these clues in an endeavor to locate the driver of the car.

CHILD STRUCK BUT NOT BADLY INJURED

As the driver of a truck belonging to Ed. A. Kellawy of Belleville, was passing Trinity Methodist Friday afternoon, he turned from the road-way to pass a small child, which was apparently crossing the road. The child, however, it is said, stopped up an article, which it had dropped, and returned to the main roadway in front of the truck and was struck by the fender and knocked to the ground receiving a bruised shoulder and slight injuries. In attempting to avoid striking the child the driver turned the truck over the curb and into a garage and slightly damaged the front of the truck by coming into contact with the side of a building.

The little finger was terribly torn, nearly severed and the ring finger badly cut. At present it is not known if the little finger can be saved. WINS MEDAL ON AMMONIA THEORY

CHICAGO, May 21.—Prof. E. C. Franklin, of Leland Stanford University, received the William Nichol medal from the American Chemical Society last night for his research in connection with the theory that ammonia is the origin of all life, including the cocktails of dry law days.

Whereas the ancient Greek philosophers conceived water as the source of the existence of life, Prof. Franklin holds that "all things are metamorphosed forms of ammonia."

For the seventh season, Belleville schools have provided a festival of music, held on and about Empire Day. Friday evening in the Collegiate Auditorium hundreds of young songsters thrilled their elders with their fine interpretation of choruses, songs, dancing, marching and pageantry, creating under the direction of Mr. V. F. Hunt, one of the finest productions of the seven years' since these festivals were instituted.

Queen Victoria School students opened the program with a Pageant of Empire Music. The boys and girls in the chorus and those who took the principal roles in the pageant were in the spirit of Music, the announcement being offered; Music of Reading; A Minstrel, Sir Francis Drake; Shakespeare, Handel, Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn, the gypsy band, Jack and Jill, the minuet dancers and action and costume made up with their gaily colored costumes, their handkerchief and vocal numbers a real scene of symbolic colour, song and art.

Following this pageantry came folk dances in the I. H. Kinder Polka by the Intermediate Dance, this being particularly fine.

Miss Wade of Queen Mary School sang "You'll Get There" and the King George School intermediate choir was heard in the Shakespearean song "Where the Bee Sucks," a very appealing selection.

An operetta was next, "Boot and the Heroine" by the Queen Alexandra School. This was delightful with its charming story, the action boot and his companions who had been waiting for the war "to be over" and the young actors very capable.

Five boys played as "Bebes in Toyland" and as "I Can't Do That Sum" John Bigham sang "Snoozy Shoo". Hazel Deroche was heard in "I'll Rock You to Rest," Tom Wilkinson sang "I Passed by Your Window," while the Queen Mary School junior choir sang "Lads of Mohawk Hill."

"The Crowning of Miss Canada" was a pageant of history in which Canadian figures from the past trod the boards and united in the crowning of Miss Canada. Two provinces were represented, besides The Canada, Mr. Wilfrid Laurier, Champlain, Sir Isaac Brock, Tecumseh, Soldier, Laura Secord, Hon. Georges Brown, Sir John A. Macdonald and Jacques Cartier, Champlain, Wolfe, Indian chief, and Loyalists. The pageant was put on by the Queen Mary School.

Prizes won in the recent trials were presented by Trustee H. J. Allin, ex-Mayor Greenleaf, Trustee Cannon, Trustee Mrs. McFee, Principal Wilkins acted as chairman at the presentation.

The winners are:

BOYS CONFER ON VOCATIONS

Number of Youths Anxious About Future Outlook

"When I'm a man I'll be—what shall I be?" was stated as a question which many boys ask themselves during the early years of ease that fail to receive a satisfactory answer—a conviction, however, which removes from their minds all doubt as to what vocation they shall follow in life and which fills them with enthusiasm to be up and at it.

They make a mental survey of the many callings to which they can see men devoting their energies; they note their choice and they can say to themselves "I think that I should like to be a doctor, a lawyer, a merchant, an electrical engineer, a railroad man a printer, a newspaper man, a salesman, a bookkeeper, a banker, or their learnings may be of any one of innumerous other vocations—but they are not sure, they do not have the essential requirements of the work—they have not had the opportunity to talk seriously with any one actively engaged in the profession, business or trade they have in mind.

The Y.M.C.A. and the Belleville Rotary Club jointly have arranged conferences at which the boys may meet and talk with persons who are engaged in the work regarding which they desire to obtain information.

Such a conference was held Friday evening at the Y.M.C.A. and it was taken advantage of by quite a number of boys.

At a previous meeting the boys had filled in a form in which they answered many questions regarding their likes, dislikes, fears, doubts and ambitions and from five thirty o'clock until six thirty o'clock those who had kindly consented to give counsel to the boys, met at the Y.M.C.A. and considered the information given in these forms.

At six thirty o'clock an excellent supper was served by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A. at which the boys and their advisers were present.

Mr. Wm. R. Cook of the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. in Canada, Toronto, had come to Belleville especially to be present at the meeting and at the supper gave a brief talk on fundamental impulses that characterize persons and which have a bearing on their fitness for different types of occupation.

Mr. T. M. Webster, the retiring President of the Rotary Club, also spoke briefly and expressed the hope that the present conference would be but the beginning of permanent vocational service to the boys in this community.

After the supper the boys were assembled in groups and they carried freely with the business and professional men, who were present to give them the benefit of their experience in the lines of endeavor followed by them and the requirements necessary to engage in it as a vocation.

The conference was a success in every way and it is anticipated that much benefit to the boys interested will result from it.

People of Wealth Do Not Waste Money

Sometime you may hear it rumored that Tickell's and Browns funeral services are for wealthy families only. It is true that we serve many prominent families, owing to our facilities for providing quality fine services—but this is all the more proof that charges are not exorbitant as a rule. BECAUSE people of wealth are careful spenders they realize the folly of unnecessary expenditure and would be the last to be guilty of paying for something they do not consider beneficial in the funeral service.

But, for those of limited means, it is not necessary to know that our charges are just and fair. These splendid services are rendered you at the lowest possible charge. There is no funeral director in the country capable of serving for less.

Army and Navy Association is Formed, Charter Presented

Col. H. C. H. Woods, Head of League, Makes Presentation

Some fifty ex-soldiers were in attendance in the City Hall last evening to meet Col. H. C. H. Wood, K.C., dominion president of the Army and Navy Veterans in Canada, and the first charter in the district recently organized branch here. Accompanying Col. Wood was Captain C. P. Gilliam, M.C., of Ottawa, national adjutant, also of the A. and N. V. and who attended the initial meeting of the branch here some three weeks ago. Tom Gill, of the city, acted as chairman for the evening.

Col. Wood during the late war was liaison officer in university service, being attached mostly with the Grand Fleet; he is also an authority on war records of reference and compiled six volumes of Chronicles of Canada and is author of "All Afloat." Capt. Gilliam served in the Great War with the machine gun section, rising from the rank of private to his present rank, and his decoration evinces that his service was outstanding.

Col. Wood was the first speaker and after expressing his pleasure at being with the branch here in Belleville, dilated on the higher aims of the association. Consideration was being given to enlarge the scope of membership to include men in the militia as well as those having served in campaigns might be permitted to join the ranks in the future. He urged that all undesirables be kept out of the branch and only men of good character permitted to join. Good material was what was wanted, not only in officers and committees, but in the general membership. He further urged the Imperial pensioners to join and stated he had received a letter from Toronto address that he discouraged their membership, in dealing with adjustments of claims of these men it was a difficult matter, but the association was doing everything that possibly could be done.

Answer Queries

Any questions regarding the Army and Navy Veterans would be gladly answered by their headquarters at Ottawa. The books were audited by chartered accountants and could be seen by anyone interested at any time; they were open for inspection and investigation. From October 1st last to the present time, when there had been the greatest pressure of work attached to the relief efforts for the body five per cent. of the amount from the funds was necessary for the cost of administration. A. and N. V. were doing a great work and spending large sums annually of dollars in relief and charitable work.

The association would live up to its name and aims regardless of if he were a member of the Veterans, Canadian Legion, or not a member of any organization, and would help the poor. It also would receive their consideration and investigation last. Canada maintained a staff at Ottawa, which was wholeheartedly devoted to the service of the returned man; it was there for that purpose, and service was the great aim of the Army and Navy Veterans. The government, he stated, was doing everything they could to adjust pensions and claims passed up, but the many unjustifiable claims put in by returned men were blocking the claims of those who had substantial and rightful claims for consideration. On the whole he believed the legislation to be honest and well framed. Many claims were submitted, however, that were not worth the while and yet time and expense had to be devoted to them. Any just claim a man put in the hands of the Army and Navy Veterans would be pushed with the utmost vigor, but claims, after being established as such, would not receive any backing from the organization.

In concluding he again urged on the branch to seek out only the reliable and returned men for membership or office. That way only led to the rightful establishment and consolidation of a branch in any locality. By this means and this means alone would the branch respect of the citizens and merchants in their community, as well as the confidence and respect of their comrades.

Presented Charter

Col. Wood then presented the charter of the branch to the secretary, Leo Bellhume. The local organization designated thereon as "Belleville Army and Navy Veterans in Canada."

Secretary Bellhume in accepting, said that three weeks ago he had been rather puzzled about the formation of a branch in Belleville, but after looking into the work of the parent body, he felt that the great work done by them in the enabling of the Canadian pension and their adjustment, he had become convinced that a branch was a good thing to have here. He urged all in the hall to join the association.

Capt. Gilliam, in addressing the audience, stated politics did not enter into the association at all, and urged that nothing of a political character be allowed to be brought into the organization in Belleville. The remainder of his address dealt with the work of his department and what it was accomplishing for returned men. The captain's address was along the same lines as that given when here three weeks ago.

Several other speakers made brief remarks regarding the work done by the Army and Navy Veterans and stressed the urgency of all returned men to join the association.

Letters from England

Plymouth, England, May 7, 1932.

Mrs. James and I arrived in Montreal four days before sailing for the purpose of inspecting the metropolis of Canada. We visited the great departmental stores, Notre Dame Cathedral and enjoyed along with others a sightseeing tour of the mountain and city conducted by an automobile touring bus. For three hours we went from place to place and saw most of the famous points of interest. The beauty of the French quarter of the city impressed us most. Here the quaint side is achieved by long winding stairs to the second stories. We never before saw homes like these. The Sixth shrine of Palmer Cadre was another place of intense interest. It was founded many years ago by Father Cadre and though now 94 years old still presides over this place. The shrine itself is a very humble way with small buildings still near by. The present church and associated buildings are large and built of massive stone. It is half way up Mount Royal and is reached by wooded stairs of 91 steps. Scores were ascending and descending these stairs as we approached, several on their knees. Those of maximum faith and earnestness ascend the steps on their knees half-way and then pray. The auditorium log on each step is covered by those seeking health or cures and discarded canes, crutches and other evidences of infirmity were on view abandoned by those who had not entered the mission of miracles in vain. No person can visit such a holy, sacred place and lightly forget it. On leaving the church for our bus we had a fine view of the entire city. Westmount is a grand residential and fashionable section of the city. Situated mostly on the slope of Mount Royal it is an ideal home district where even modest dwellings cost sixty-five thousand dollars. Many cost much more as assessed. We all admired Montreal so much that we thought we would like to live there because it is so clean and free from a total absence of visible vice. We never saw the slightest evidence of intoxication.

At last the great day, the day of sailing, came and we went on board the nine in the morning (Friday, April 29). The dock and good steamer, Manola, was the scene of much commotion, friends bidding farewell to friends who unhappily must remain at home, porters loaded down with baggage carrying the anxious passengers to their cabins, and excited children getting lost in the crowd, and everybody was happy. The Alamin is a new boat as it has been in commission only a few years. Promptly at ten, the sailing hour, officers shouted, "All visitors on shore" and scores hustled down the gangway to the dock. Then there was great waiting here and two tugs, one fore and one aft, were to tow the big liner from her dock until she could get under way herself. As we watched these tugs pulling away we thought of the little ant and the elephant but they accomplished their task speedily and well.

Soon we were sailing down the mighty St. Lawrence, the noble St. Lawrence, and saw enthroned with its million souls fade in the distance. It was an ideal summer day, bright and warm, and the river was a smooth as a mill pond.

Then we thought of the statue of Maisonneuve which we had beheld in the square facing Notre Dame Cathedral and admired the statue of the great pioneer and his perseverance in the face of great danger when he founded Montreal in 1642 as a mission for the Indians. When warned of the danger he replied that he himself shall establish his mission even though every tree on the island were an Iroquois.

At Montreal the River St. Lawrence is only about half a mile wide, at Quebec it is over a mile and before we enter the Gulf it has gradually widened to more than 40 miles.

For several hours after sailing we could see ancient Ford cars and trolleys crawling like snails in our course. Our speed corresponded almost exactly with theirs. On both banks of the river all day long we could see the modest white homes of the French Canadians. There were no evidences of great wealth as with wherever the homes were grouped together closely, a large church was conspicuous usually with height twin towers similar to Notre Dame at Montreal.

Our fellow passengers were very pleasant and agreeable. Many were returning to various parts of the British Isles after visiting in Canada. Two have visited in Belleville, namely, Col. Douglas and Mrs. Bromley.

The meals are excellent and are served as follows: Breakfast 8.30 noon and 7 in the evening, with tea and lunch at 5 in the afternoon. Passengers promenade on deck, read, write, play games and otherwise amuse themselves. Time passes quickly and pleasantly.

The morning of the second day (saturday) I was on deck early to enjoy the fresh air and sunshine. I slated one of the passengers how he had slept. "Only off and on, sir, half and half as it were."

Wednesday proved to be perfect that we passed under the Quebec bridge at sunset of the first day ahead of time. In the growing shadows of evening we beheld old Quebec, that great citadel which from its lofty heights and surrounding district, I saw an imaginary army landing at Wolfe's Cove, the Battle of the Plains of Abraham, the rapid capture and the surrender of Quebec. I was sorry that I had hoped to see even this much and hence slept that night in great contentment.

On the afternoon of the first day the great whistles blew as a signal for life-belt drill. All passengers were summoned to the promenade deck and filed past their stations. In the case of an emergency each would know just where to go and what to do to avoid a panic. "We are not expecting any danger," the officers in charge, "but we like to be prepared for anything that might happen." We all laughed at each other because the life belts made humpbacks of everybody.

The second day, Saturday, was bright and calm but the air was decidedly cool as we were approaching the area of Labrador. Fog, cold and conditions of good to bad, I asked one of the chief officers what I should take in case I became sea-sick. "You'll not take anything, sir, you'll give."

Scores of sea-gulls followed us from Montreal to the Atlantic a distance of nearly one thousand miles. They were second to prey to the way they darted for the refuse thrown overboard from time to time was very entertaining.

On the morning of the third day (Sunday) we were in sight of the bleak, barren steep shores of southern Newfoundland, which had gotten the name of the Carder and Chaudonnet, on their exploring expeditions to what became New France and later Canada. Much snow was scattered over these rugged hills and they would be so for several months or two hundred years ago. A few small groups of huts here and there near the shore (probably fishing stations) was all the evidence we had of human habitation. The outlook was lonely and cheerless. One was thankful not to have been born in this desolate region.

Sunday, England's time is normally about five hours ahead of Belleville time. But as they are on daylight saving time it is now six hours. At bedtime (Sunday) we were therefore set our watches ahead. Our watches from fifty minutes to an hour until this total of six hours was reached. We crossed the meridian 15 with is called 0 and as we now turns from west to east, London has gone long before Belleville, just as Belleville has it long before Winnipeg and so on from west to east.

On Sunday morning our Captain Edkin conducted a very nice Anglican service with the ship's orchestra assisting. The passengers entered heartily into the spirit of worship and each and all sang such old hymns as "Lead Kindly Light" very well. Captain Edkin is a grey haired veteran of the seven seas and acted in great simplicity as the head of a large (and well-appointed) family.

Our present course is south of Newfoundland over the Great Banks. The northern path through the Straits of Belle Isle is one hundred and twenty miles nearer to Europe but due to the presence of much ice is not safe until about May 15. Banks are accumulations of sand, gravel and the coniest not of land but of a large area of ocean, the feeding ground of millions of cod fish which are caught in great numbers. They have been caught and exported to all parts of the world.

On the afternoon of Monday we were out of sight of land for the first time in the broad Atlantic. At night there was much fog and our vessel stood still for over three hours. Due to the heavier swell of the ocean many were out including our writer who was unable to eat much for nearly three days. Some icebergs were passed, but very few saw them due to sickness or to the fact that they were passed in the night.

On the fifth day (Tuesday) we were nearly in mid Atlantic with dense fog on the horizon. It was raining but the air was decidedly warmer because we had passed the region of icebergs and had come under the influences of the Gulf Stream which also accounted for fog. When the warm waters of the Gulf Stream come in contact with the cold waters from the Arctic, fog (a form of steam) is generated.

As I walked up and down the promenade deck I was deeply impressed by the power and majesty of the ocean and some lines written by the immortal Byron came to my mind with a fuller meaning and significance. Here are a few of them:

"There is a society where none intrudes, by the deep sea and music in its roar.

I loll on, then dark and deep blue ocean—roll!

At this time I beheld what was to me a tragedy of the deep. A small bird resembling a swallow was on the water about fifty feet from the side of our vessel and tried repeatedly to rise in the air but each time fell back weighted down by the water on its wings. Our swallows cross the Atlantic and spend the winter around the West Indies. This little queen of the air was on its way back to Canada and became exhausted. No vessel was sailing that way at the time, which to rest after making over half its journey so it fell into the water. I fancied I could see weariness in its movements as well as the weight of rain on its plumage. It meant death to one of our most loved birds and I felt sad.

The rain mentioned ceased about noon and was followed by bright sunshine and a delightful afternoon. Many passengers were sea-sick and the crew became sick and the dining room was almost deserted. Mrs. James and I were not sea-sick but we had a headache and were among those who abhorred the thought of food. A cup of hot water with half a teaspoon of baking soda gave the most relief. This lasted three days in mid Atlantic.

A daily newspaper is printed on board and supplied to each passenger. It carries advertisements of various hotels and stores in the British Isles and France and gives a very good summary of the news of the day obtained by wireless.

Among our numerous passengers is a blind man from Windsor who is admired by all for his patience and cheerfulness. We feel what a blessing it is to enjoy good eyesight and what we should miss without it. I was thus reminded of a line in Milton's Sonnet on his own blindness, as follows: "They also serve who only stand and wait."

The ninth day (Wednesday) was an ideal summer day, but few were able to enjoy it as they were ill in their cabins. Sometimes we wonder why it is so weak that you cannot remain out of bed very long at a time. The ship's stewards are kind and attentive but they remind one of the wonderful nurses at the Belleville General Hospital where I was under their care for over a year last winter.

This afternoon and evening I was able to sit on deck again and enjoy the warm sunshine. I could see nothing but clear sky and ocean and sunshine. The ocean was quite a pretty sight. It was informed that the water (where earth and sky meet) was eight miles away in every direction. The sheer, solid monotony of it all appalled me. Nothing turned this way and our wake into a sea of silver. The red sun sank at last into the ocean and left a glow of splendor that cannot be described nor which any artist had ever adequately portrayed. It proved that man though a little lower than the angels has his limitations especially on the mighty deep.

The seventh day (Thursday) began cloudy and no sunrise was visible but later the sun came forth as the day before.

The following facts were supplied for your benefit by the ship's chief officers. The distance from Montreal to Cape Race, the south eastern extremity of Newfoundland, is 982 miles throughout all of which coastal land was in sight. The greatest known depth of the Atlantic Ocean in the path of steamers from Canada to Europe is about three miles and the average depth is about two miles. The distance from Montreal to London including our calls at Plymouth, England, and Havre, France, is 3293 miles.

About noon today we were two-thirds of the way across the Atlantic. Three of our passengers have respectively visited Belleville, namely, Colonel Douglas and wife and Mrs. Bromley.

Toward night a fairly strong gale sprang up and our vessel cast up clouds of spray as it ploughed along in a billowy way. Sunlight on this spray gave us fleeting glances of gorgeous rainbows. All night long we were tossed and rocked in the cradle of the deep as we slumbered. Most of us enjoyed it as we were now becoming accustomed to the ways of the sea.

There was much light on land among the passengers and crew and every night until midnight there was singing and playing and often dancing as well. All were happy and in holiday mood.

On the eighth day (Friday) the gale stiffened and we beheld the ocean in still greater action, but on the whole the voyage has been fine, clear and delightful. Our vessel moderated its speed to allow a small boat a freight steamer near by pursuing a parallel course to ours. For a long time I watched the waves dash up white against the bows, but it went proudly on rising and falling fore and aft with the waves.

The greatest speed we have made during the day (noon to noon) has been 352 miles and the least 279 and the average has been nearer the former rather than the latter.

On the evening of this day (Friday) the grand concert of the voyage was given by the ship's orchestra, passengers and members of the crew. The ship's doctor, a veteran of the Great War, presided. Every item was of the highest order. A collection of over £30 was taken up for homes for old seamen and their orphans.

On the morning of the ninth day (Saturday) I was on deck early and alone except for members of the crew who are always scrubbing and polishing everything in sight. I am convinced that a sailor's life is one of the cleanest spots on earth. I was richly rewarded for my supreme effort at early rising. A gentle breeze was blowing but the sun was rising from the ocean and a clear sky soon appeared and with it one of the most beautiful and perfect rainbows I ever saw. It was greatly charming. There were evidences that we were not far from land. Sea gulls were again crying gladly on our rear. The harbors in the north was dotted with fishing vessels. As a matter of fact we were sailing within thirty miles south of Ireland but not in sight of land and would touch at Plymouth, another western district of England, by evening. Everyone was soon preparing mail which would be put off there and which would then be carried by air to New York on its way to Canada by train.

Plymouth is noted in history for at least two events. Sir Francis Drake was bowling on a green there when the time of Queen Elizabeth, the Spanish Armada sailed proudly by to attack England. In true British fashion Drake finished his game and then set out with his ships to give the Spaniards the thrashing they so richly deserved. The Pilgrim Fathers (Puritans) sailed from England in the Mayflower in the time of the Stuarts to found a colony of freedom at Plymouth Rock, on the rock-bound New England coast. Plymouth was the last English port at which they sailed on this famous journey.

The writer will now close this letter that it may be posted at Plymouth and thus reach Belleville a few days earlier than if sent as expected from London. The narrative of the next letter will start at Plymouth. Best wishes to all.

MRS. PUTNAM OFF ON FLIGHT

Famous Aviatrix Leaves Newfoundland Coast Bound For Paris

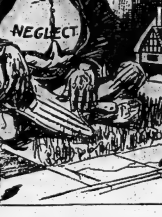
Harbor Grace, Nfld., May 21 — Amelia Earhart Putnam, smiling and confident, took off from Harbor Grace last night in her crimson gold stripped plane, with Paris her destination.

Five years to the day after Col. Charles A. Lindbergh set out from New York on the first solo flight to Europe, Mrs. Putnam took off at 8.51 p.m. (Eastern Standard Time) determined to be the first woman to fly over the Atlantic alone. Like Lindbergh, she aims for Paris for her goal.

A message of confidence for her friends was left by Mrs. Putnam as she stepped, cool and composed, in to the cockpit of her plane.

"I have sufficient fuel for 20 hours and I will go further if my load is lighter," she said. "I have enough to take off and am not too fatigued."

She decided to start yesterday came suddenly, influenced by favorable weather reports. Arriving here from Saint-John, N.B., at 11.31 a.m. (Eastern Standard Time), she promptly had retired, announcing she hoped to leave early the next day.



The plane was warming up as she arrived at the airport. Bend. Balchen, famed flier and explorer, and Eddie Gorski, mechanic, who accompanied her from Saint John, were working on it. She was laughing excitedly as Balchen and Gorski made a rapid box through inspection of the craft, and then in attitude changed to that of grave concern.

Candidate of Success

Satisfied that the ship was fit, Balchen and Gorski joined Mrs. Putnam for a final conference before the takeoff. She gave them each a hearty handshake, said of Balchen: "Good luck," and then stepped into the plane. She made a perfect flight.

The plane which holds the aviatrix's hopes is a 450 horsepower Wasp-motored craft with a cruising speed of 140 miles an hour, a maximum speed of 180 and a cruising radius of 2500 miles. It carried a fuel supply of 420 gallons of gasoline and 20 gallons of oil, sufficient for a combined to keep aloft for fully 20 hours.

The plane carried a quart of chicken soup, nothing more.

On almost every home street—or business street, too, for that matter—there is an "eye sore." Where most houses and grounds are good to look upon, ship-shape, and in perfect order, there squats a disreputable "tramp"—Neglect.

Lawns are weedy and uncut, flowers are allowed to shift for themselves, the back yard, which might boast a truck garden, is a barren place—fences need patching, the house needs paint. Unconsciously, people say to themselves: Somebody, who lives there, lacks civic pride," which, of course, when all is said and done, is painfully true.

There are no logical excuses for neglecting the outside or the living part of your community, all," down the entire street and

CLEAN UP PAINT UP Make Belleville A Better Looking City

A Brighter and More Beautiful Belleville

Can be achieved by cleaning up our premises, laying out flower beds and walks, painting fences, sheds, besides the application of paint to verandahs and the home generally, inside and outside. All this will make work for the working man and working woman —and this is a call from Mayor Tice, and members of the City Council, the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis Club and all service clubs. More work for the workless will make more prosperity for all, so phone to Major Lorne Green, Employment Service of Canada 19 Campbell Street, Phone 887, for a competent man or woman to do the work required in making

CLOSE TO EARTH

Closer to Mother Earth than for many years are thousands of people this very stress of circumstances choose to work among the beneficient soil which will make them a living in part while these bad times last. To first things they have come back.

Today many a garden plot neglected for years under a deep coat of green sod has again been aired to the sun's rays as the ploughshare has forced its way through and opened up the furrows and the garden fork has riven the earth soil and broken it up to the fresh air, all in preparation for the seeding and the consequent harvest.

These industrious folk know that in a way they will be hurting the farmer, but they also know that they are doing something to help themselves.

Certainly this intrusion upon the work of the farmer might be objected to but for the sake of relief and for giving people something to do as well as to preserve their morale and independence, it must be praised.

Then there is a joy in being responsible for the growth of things. It is something that one is earning one's bread by the sweat of the brow for gardening with all its pleasures and rewards does assume a certain amount of hard labor, which is good for body and mind.

Those who delve in the good old earth have come back to the mother of physical life, from whom all good things continue to come to the enrichment of life.

The young and the most old have learned can here drink deep of the revelation of life's inner meaning.

No work gives more ample rewards, than that among the clods and the life-giving soil.

MUSIC

Music as an educator was shown in the Belleville public schools' program of Empire Day. Little boys and girls who have been under the instruction of Mr. T. P. Hunt, supervisor of music, were able to entertain a packed auditorium at the Collegiate Friday night because they have learned something which will stand them in good stead in the days to come. They have been given the fundamentals of music and the result will be enriched lives.

This musical training is one phase of modern education in Belleville for which the Board of Education and Mr. Hunt and his staff are to be given due credit. Music is as much of education as any other subject of the curriculum but it took the modern world a long time to make this discovery.

ENCYCLIC MERCIES

"Pope Innocent III, seven hundred years ago, spoke of greed as closing Paradise to man, and Pope XI finds it still the cause of much of our present woe. There is no doubt that in individuals it has destroyed some of the fruits of wholesome, eager enterprise and industry in industry," says The New York Times. "Inordinate avarice of wealth and power showing itself in the concentration of industry "insinuates itself between people and people' and drives all toward destruction. These abuses that have turned individual and national virtues and talents into vicious excesses prompt the cry for remedies such as only the chastened spirits of men can find.

"There is a prayer of Rowland Williams, an Anglican divine of the last century, that might serve in these times for all men who have faith in a Supreme Being:

> By the agony of men's striving; by their heads bowed down in shame, and eyes filled with tears; by their necks weighed down with burdens; their feet and hands perplexed and bound; and by their crying out of misery, be moved, O Lord, to arise and amend the earth.

"Even those in hardship or penury may, as the encyclical suggests, find heart to sing with St. Francis, one of the poorest of men and greatest of spirits, the Canticle of the Sun,' giving praise for brother wind and air and clouds, and fair and every kind of weather by which creatures are given nourishment, for none is beyond reach of their encyclic mercies."

London Advertiser comments upon the prediction of the fire chief of Edinburgh that his brethren will be called to more fires using helicopters, remarking that "this would mean a great saving of wear and tear on tires of fire trucks." Probably the firemen will then be called fire-flies.

Victoria Days nears. Those who remember Good Queen Victoria recall the demonstrations of those days of over thirty years ago. But even the passage of a generation since her death has not dampened the ardor of the young for fire crackers and demonstrations, while the Victorian spirit is still making its influence felt.

SONG OF REST
By Aline Michaelis

After the day, the twilight,
Shadows that swiftly throng,
After the tempest, calmness:
Silence after the song.

After the hours of toiling,
Conquering stubborn earth,
Rest with the well-beloved,
Music and food and mirth.

After the frantic pulses
Hammering with desire,
Peace for a little season,
After fierce passion's fire.

After the long swim, breasting
Force of the tide that raves,
Floating at ease, and drifting
Buoyed by the singing waves.

After the empty laughter,
After vain pomp is through,
Safe in a tranquil harbor,
Sea-wind and stars—and you!

BLOSSOM TIME IN PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY presents just as attractive a picture as the Niagara Falls peninsula, and a drive through Cherry Valley when the blossoms are out, that swiftly by perfumed with their lovely fragrance is an experience not soon to be forgotten. Cap this off with a trip to Consecon Lake, this wonderful freak of nature where vast hills and dunes of land are ever encroaching upon the land, swallowing up homes and buildings in its relentless foundation—with the great government experiment of building up defending fortifications of trees, row on row, miles long, to check and stem the tide of sand, forever pushing ahead. On the way stop at the ancient "Wishing Tree," where many a maiden and swain pause and make those wonderful wishes which were to illumine their whole life—if they came true. A day in Prince Edward will offer a trip to Consecon, this wonderful Lake on the Mountain, where the laws of gravity and all the orderly rules of Mother Nature are disturbed, by a lovely lake high up on a hill. Blossom time in Prince Edward is beautiful beyond words, and any time is a good time to drive through Prince Edward for it is always full of beauty and surprise.

KINGFISH WEIGHING SIXTY POUNDS and upward, sea trout weighing ten pounds and up, supplied splendid sport for John McKeown, who with Mrs. McKeown have just returned from Bradenton, Florida, where they spent the winter months. Mr. McKeown has a new collection of prize fish stories, and is prepared to back up every statement. In fact he was elected an honorary member of Dr. C. H. Bryan's Dixie Grand Institute of Fishing, one of the two such institutes in the world, the other being connected with Leland Stanford University, California. The Kingfish are bought to the docks after a day's sport in search of big for the royal piscatorial beauties put up a strenuous fight before submitting to the gaff of the fishermen. Then there is the sailfish among the various sandy keys which dot the coast line, and are fine fishing and good eating. One hundred and seventy pounds of kingfish was the catch of Mrs. Brown on his party on his last day's fishing. Shark fishing is also a great sport down where the sandflies bite but the genial John did not want any in his, although he frequently got in touch with these fierce wolves of the sea when they took a fancy to his bait and carried off the hook, line and anything which was plenty close enough for him.

A tourist party of ladies were obliged to seek quarters in a farm house, where everything was simplicity itself, and also scrupulously clean and homelike. When bedtime came some of the party, finding there were no keys in the locks of their rooms, consulted the farmer's wife, who replied undisguisedly surprised. "Why," she said, "we don't usually lock our doors here, and there's no one here but you! But then," she added, scrutinizing the ladies more closely, "suppose you know your own party best!"

"Gentlemen," said a speaker at a political meeting, "most of you know the reason of my addressing you this evening." "Yes," shouted a voice from the rear, "so as you can make a fool of yourself!" "There, my friend," replied the speaker, "you have a distinct advantage over me, for Nature, in her kindness, has saved you the trouble."

Other Papers' Opinions

AND THEY SCOFF AT OUR GOOD MONEY

The Canadian dollar is at a severe discount in the United States. Yet no Canadian bank has failed to pay its debts promptly or has refused to redeem its note in full rolls.

Detroit owes a million dollars to its employees. Chicago is practically bankrupt. Philadelphia is in dire straits. New York is trembling down a loan to New York.

But Canada remains. Toronto raises $18,000,000 in two hours and a half; Montreal will sell a $15,000,000 loan without trouble; Hamilton gives all the money it wants from the banks and so on. There is absolutely no question about Canadian credit. Our people have a billion and a quarter on deposit in the banks.

Yet with this clear record we allow the U.S.A. to say what our money is worth.—Orillia News-Letter.

AFTER THE FRUIT MARKET

Ontario is getting a lead in the marketing of her fruit that this Province would do well to follow. Convinced apparently that through little hope—immediate at least—for large markets for the produce of business, Imperial or other, the Ontario Minister of Agriculture has set out to exploit the Canadian market and has arranged for the selling agencies to the other Provinces of the Dominion. Needless to say this will not be done by any competition almost everywhere, for Canada, outside the Ontario Peninsula, has large fruit areas under which the markets are highly organized and has however sufficient confidence in the quality of its product to believe that she can make the business pay, even in those Provinces where local fruit flourishes.—Montreal Star.

NATIONALISM AND THE WORLD

The world collectively condemns tariffs, but the individual profits by that on keeping them. The world collectively says that the huge armies and international debts are ruinous; the nationalists individually protest that they cannot abolish armaments. The world collectively says that it is impossible to pay war debts; the nations individually fight stubbornly to maintain their own armaments. All these things are the manifestations of the great world controversy. We are getting to the point when this quarrel must be composed, or else, without a word, "capitalism" will break down. And it by a queer paradox that it also encounters the capitalists, or at least the rich and well-to-do, who are the most ardent in the defence of the nationalist economic and national armaments. It between them that the capitalist system, it will be themselves who will have done it. —London News-Chronicle.

CANADA'S TUNNEL BUSINESS

The total amount of American tourist money expended in Canada fell from $395,000,000 in 1929 to $258,000,000 in 1931. The balance heavily favored Canada, as might be expected for several reasons. Canadian tourists spent $57,000,000 in the United States in 1931, and in addition left large amounts of cash left with us by tourists of all classes who visit us for the same or the same amount. We do not argue that the heavy trade balance in favor of Canada was due to the natural attractions of that delightful summer resort, but we do not think it does all. The figures are here, however, and our people are free to draw their own conclusions .We trust that this will never come when the two peoples will not visit each other freely, and trade with equal freedom.—Hamilton Spectator.

BRITISH FILMS CAN WIN

It has been asserted that British films have no appeal for Canadians. But the reception which has recently been giving "Sunshine Susie" should effectively demonstrate the error of any such assertion. The British people have seen it have discovered that it is a delightful film, and that British film an attractive quality that is frequently wanting in those of foreign production.

In this particular picture the humor is spontaneous and delicate. Its laughs are not too obviously forced and its sentiment is not overdone, and the whole production sends the audience away with a feeling that it has assisted in a thoroughly delightful entertainment.

It is the first picture to be shown for three successive weeks in the theatre where it is presented. That in itself should show that there is a place for the best in British film. A hundred thousand Canadians can't be wrong.—Toronto Telegram.

NO COMPLAINTS

Cobourg, May 21—The woman teachers of the Cobourg Collegiate Institute whose contracts have not been renewed as a result of the decision of the local "economy board" to employ men only as teachers, feel very keenly the position in which they have been placed, as press reports which have appeared in Toronto papers, they feel, reflect to their discredit. They have always been and clearly stated in letters to the teachers involved that their work has been entirely satisfactory.

CLIMBERS ARE SAFE

Fairbanks, Alaska, May 21—(CP)—Nicholas Spadrecchia and Percy T. Olton, Jr., members of the ill-fated Allen Carpe scientific expedition, are safe at the base camp on Mt. McKinley, it was reported last night by Pilot Jerry Jones of the Alaska Airways, who flew over them but was unable to land.

WORKINGS OF BRAIN PROVES FASCINATING

Years of Study Required For Knowledge of Human Brain

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. PH.D. Famous Authority on Criminology and Psychology.

Before you would have respect for your mind, study the workings of the organic substance responsible for mind—namely the brain proper.

I am not inviting you to become an amateur psychologist or physiologist at the nervous system. That requires the years of study and research that students can attest to the fact that one forgets the multitudinous facts of brain structure and location, about as fast as one learns them. The knowledge in this line has said that one masters in the course of the brain's intricate mazes and forgets it nineteen.

But you should, nevertheless, have a general view of the essentials of your brain, for you are much more apt to feel yourself in the outset of your own brain if you are acquainted with its external workings.

Looking at the brain as a whole from the outside, it appears grayish in color. This is because the nerve cells in the brain's two vital parts of the nerves—lie on the outside, constituting a layer about an inch thick. Below this layer, at the base of the brain, are the nerve cells while conducting fibres of the nerves Hence we speak of "grey matter", meaning the nerve cells, whose nerve cells which have to do with thought, intelligence, education and other highly specialized functions.

The brain is encased in and therefore must be protected from injury. This is accomplished not only by the bones of the skull, but by three layers of tissue which cover the brain. The first layer next to the grey matter is called the "pia mater," which is a delicate web of fair that holds blood vessels and digs down in between the depressions and convolutions of the brain. The membrane next to the skull is called the "arachnoid," and the third is called the "dura mater," lying between these two is the "subarachnoid."

As if these coverings were not sufficient protection there is, besides, and liberally speaking, a water jacket around the brain, for we have between the arachnoid and pia mater a space filled with a liquid.

These coverings of the brain are often subject to disease, congestion and inflammation of them cause that dread disease "meningitis" which, if not cured, will develop into four parts, the cerebrum, the cerebellum, the pons Varolii, and the medulla oblongata.

The cerebrum is usually the brain proper. It is the seat of our thinking self. It retains and records impressions and produces ideas and ideas. It is concerned with the emotions and is the center of all the faculties.

The cerebellum, situated in the back of the skull and beneath the cerebrum, is not so complex as an ordinary flat. It has to do with coordinating the movements of the body and limbs.

The pons Varolii, meaning the bridge of Varolius, connects the two halves of the cerebellum and is the connecting medium between the upper and enlarged end of the spinal cord that runs down from the brain inside the bony column of the distribute nerves to all parts of the body.

The Medulla oblongata itself connects the brain with the spinal cord. Among these are the nerves regulating breathing, the nerve centers for regulating the force and rate of the heart beat, a heat controlling center, a respiratory center, a center regulating the size of the arteries and different parts of the body.

Scientists do not yet know all about the brain. They do not know exactly how memories are made or memories are stored up. That there is a complicated chemistry of the brain which is beyond our ken. What is known is known about the brain is fascinating.

Dr. Bisch's Daily Health Hint

Persons who have suffered paralysis of any kind should not become discouraged and give up treatment too soon. Improvement in such cases is always a slow affair.

Kreuger Creditors Are Given No Hope

Stockholm, Sweden, May 21—A Swedish investigating committee yesterday revealed that Ivar Kreuger had employed two Swedish lawyers to find and indirect liability when he fired a bullet into his brain in Paris on March 12.

Pointing also to "deliberate falsification" of the books of Kreuger & Toll, the Swedish king's main company, over a period of at least three years, the committee recommended bankruptcy.

"There will be little, if anything, left over for distribution to unsecured creditors", the report concluded.

The committee laid gigantic fraud to the manipulations of this man, who until the first of the year was regarded as one of the most powerful financial geniuses of modern times.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay. De.)

PROBLEMS OF PAINTING—

"The next time I do any painting I'm going to leave the 'Wet Paint' sign at the gate until the job is finish," wails a Front Street merchant who days past," he relates, "I have been trying to get a wooden fence that I put up in the back of the woodwork around the store window, but I am not in the habit of doing it. Now I have it painted all right but when I got at it I could tell where it had never been touched. In fact it's even worse than before I started to paint it," he explains. "I got the first two coats on the wood all right, but the paint wouldn't stick all, but when I tried to get the finishing finish coat on it would begin to flake. After I had finished painting I put up a 'Wet Paint' sign on it and immediately dozens of people would stop to look at it, some of them, I suppose, to see what it was all about, but the main reason was to see if they could get by with it. Indiscriminate leapers of branches off the trees and there should be a penalty for them. Another one of them see a wet spot and they have to touch it to see if it is wet. Then there are those that the paint really is wet. Such is human nature."

DYING TREES—

"Half those beautiful maple trees in this city are either dying or are going to die," says a tree expert who will eventually lead to their death unless some steps are taken to prevent it. According to one tree surgeon who has had occasion to study the trees of the city lately just as a matter of professional interest, the chief cause of the ailments by stating that amateur tree surgeons who are attempting to save the trees and then consider the job done, have taken the first step for the killing of the tree unless the branches they cut off are very small or the wound where it had been cut is carefully painted with a thick protecting coat of paint. "Every tree you cut a branch," says the expert, "puts the soft and sweet sapwood in the heart of the limb to the air. It has valuable sugar and says which attract minute organisms. They settle on the open wood and eat their way inside the limb; other insects follow. Presently some microscopic teeth are constantly at work boring their way into the wood, little by little they eat the surrounding cell and gradually the sap wood becomes hollow and also spreads inward and down into the tree — and then when the trunk is reached then destructive work begins and the roots and other large bugs take up the work of gnawing, gnawing until the tree is suddenly found to be dead. Don't, however, blame the woodpecker. When you see one at work on a tree you can make up your mind that it is not there for the sake of hurting it. The woodpecker is the best bug detective in the world and he knows it. He can tell when a tree is

Puccinelli Hits Safely in his 31st Straight Game

(By The Associated Press)

Taking advantage of a day of idleness for the other three contenders, the Newark Bears and the Buffalo Bisons had stepped out a little further in front of the class International League race.

Both checked in with victories yesterday, Newark beating the Reading Keys, 5-1, while Buffalo was defeating the Rochester Red Wings, 4-3. This left Newark in first place by half game in front of Buffalo, with the Montreal Royals and Baltimore Orioles another game and a half to the bad. Reading got only six hits, Fred Bennett's double in the sixth drove in Rabbit Whitman with the Bears' only run of the game. Newark collected 13 hits off Adams and Zumbro, three going in a single frame.

Syrd Fussell stopped Rochester cold with seven hits and struck out six men but found a worthy foe in Ira Smith in the game. Wesley Smith struck out nine men and also allowed only seven hits but proved unusually wild, one of them was a home run by Wimsett with one on in the fourth, and Wimsett was a triple later in the same frame by Grosse, Smith later subsequently scored on Ryan's long fly. George Puccinelli's single and two doubles in prolong his streak of consecutive hitting to 31 games.

Knocks and Boosts

Mote surprises greeted Manager Gerow at last night's practice when Vern Weir showed up for the first time this season. Herbie Morris also put in his first appearance and made it decided hit with the fans with his hitting and fielding. Don't be surprised if the ex-Hillcrest player is found in the Nationals' outfield when they meet the champion Orioles on Tuesday. The acquisition of these two players an altogether different aspect and the local baseball situation. The Nats' now have more infielders than they ever have enjoyed before and we are of the opinion that we will see plenty of new faces when the umps cry "play ball" on Tuesday.

Both Tommy Feaster and Carl Casey seem to be ready for mound duty as they have been throwing to the batters quite frequent of late. Johnson was working out at shortstop last night and Kerr Chambers seems to have the fuddle track on the keystone sack spot. Should this be so it'll be can stand up under fire. Smith has a little black Spaniel dog along with him and the canine seems to have a knack in carrying the veteran Johnson's glove around for him.

We are sorry to disappoint our old friend Bennett today but promise not to forget them next week. We would like to get a little information from the old timers as to how Lorrie Bennett ever got his name when it's always been known as Bill.

Today sees Canada's turf classic when Big King's Plate will be run, at the Woodbine track in Toronto. A number of Native interested followers of the "green" are making their annual trip to see Canada's horses race today.

We were quite surprised when we saw twelve local entries in the new Belleville Men's City Softball League which will be inaugurated at the Y.M.C.A. last night. The public seem to have mind as to whether or not this league, will go many leagues are started but few get together enough players or not. Twelve local teams is enough for a team means that there are 10 to be 180 players in this particular loop. Then there is the Frater-nal League with the Hill Street Softball loop in operation. It seems like a lot of softball for a town this size. We sincerely hope that they all have a prosperous season, however. The loop formed last night should have been an Industrial league, in our opinion But then the league managers can't be wrong.

Congratulations are in order to Dick Philp and Marion MacLean in their meeting in the senior athletic championships of the Belleville Collegiate Athletic meet yesterday when Marion won the senior five events in the girls' senior class and Dick garnered 22 points to cop the senior boys' title. Both of these athletes are a credit to their school and to the city. Queer as it may seem Marion excels in field events while Dick crashed nearly all of his points on the track. His winning of the 100 dash in 10 seconds flat was quite a feat as he created terrific headwind and could have run a little off of that time had he been at all pressed. Marion on the other hand, was not pressed in the long jump in which she excels and although some of her achievers failed to surpass her is better than mark of 4 feet 8 inches she healthfull indeed.

To Earl Hay, winner of the junior boys' events, Walter Hilton, winner of the intermediates class, Rose Summers, winner of the junior girls' events, Stella Carman, the Public in intermediate girls' events, and Leigh Hughes, the latter not much prodge due as they accomplished as much as their older brothers and sisters in their respective events. The Belleville Collegiate annual field day was a success from every view point and three cheers for the lads to be proved of its accomplishment.

Dame rumor had Harold Buck and Tommy Boyd, of the champion Belleville Ponies in town yesterday. They were supposed to have been hiking their way to the Pirates' baseball camp in Northern Ontario. It might be added right here that we also heard a little story to the effect that Tommy Boyd is not so rosy in the camp of the Pontiac just now. Rumor has said the Kingstonian athletes have their little squabble however, they always managed to forget them when they meet a Belleville team no matter how or where.

It has been suggested that a meeting of all interested in bor harrower should be held in the near future. When the harrower players start hooking for a playing site, as some of them did the other night, there must be something done about the matter about the project. We'll wait and see the development with eager eyes.

CUBS GIVEN REAL BATTLE BY THE REDS

Chicago Now Has Only Two-Game Lead Over Boston

ANDY HIGH HERO

"Huck" Betts, 33-Year-Rookie Wins 5th Straight

BY GAYLE TALBOT

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

The Cincinnati Reds, fighting to maintain a foothold in the National League's first division are giving the pace setting Chicago Cubs one of the grandest afternoons of the season in their series at Redland field.

For two straight days the students of Herbert Hoover have gone into extra innings to settle their hilltop dispute, and neither team could claim an advantage today. The Reds pulled a 3 to 3 decision out of the fire in the opening game day after having been beaten in 13 innings by previous afternoon. Andy High, the little third baseman for St. Louis castoffs, stepped away was the hero of the latest thriller. Two were on, two on base and Chicago one run ahead, when High was inserted as a pinch hitter in the last of the 11th yesterday. Lonnie Warneke, the Cubs' outstanding young pitcher, brewed two strikes past diminutive Andy, and then the decision. Two runs and victory rode on on High's smashing triple.

Floyd Oscar Herman kept the Reds in the running with a home run drive in the 10th, the ball disputing Warneke of a shutout. Benny Frey and St Johnson divided a fine job of pitching for the Reds, Frey's relief job to be most chic.

The loss cut Chicago's advantage to two games over Boston Braves, who were achieving a 10 to 0 triumph over the Phils. Pinkie Pet Betts, the Braves' 33 year old "rookie," pitched his fifth win, adding his fifth straight. Wes Schulmerich drove in two home runs for the winners.

Larry French, credited that Siren Swetonic is not the only pitcher on Pittsburgh's staff, when he blanked the Cardinals with five scattered hits. His co-star was Paul Waner, who divided himself of four rousing doubles at the expense of Derringer and Carleton. The New York Giants climbed into fifth place as they battered Brooklyn from the box in the eighth and defeated Brooklyn 9 to 4.

ALL IS READY FOR FIRST TILT

Walt Gerow Believes He Has Team That Will Go Places

Following last night's baseball practise, Manager Gerow announced that Tommy Feaster would undoubtedly get the call for the pitching honors in the opening game of the season against the champion Kingston Ponies on May 24th. Carl Casey will also be ready to start on the hill top, M. Feister becomes unlikely.

It was also announced that Captain Walter Gerow would do the receiving which was to be expected, as he has not been in this capacity in the province. Will Cretney or "Moose" Johnson will share the catching duties with Ken Chambers or Trenton or Vern Weir will occupy the keystone sack position with Morgan will likely start in the short field, while either Elmer Fisher or Shiner Johnson will be station-ed at the first base position. Vern Weir and Herbie Morris will be two sure shots for the outfield, while the third man in the garden will be Carl Casey. Other players are Darrah Cretney, Dusty Flagler, Jack Marshall, Will Latchford, Hurley and Ken Chambers. Manager Gerow also has a couple of promising pitchers from Trenton, will be ready for relief work in baseball as will Bige and Herbie Morris.

Foales Start "Ace"

The visiting Kingston Ponies will start Foales, their "ace" pitcher Jamieson, on the mound with Goalen and Smith as relief pitchers if Jamieson falters. Catcher Jimmie Arzell will do the receiving for the Ponies. Their star hitter, Elmer "Brick" Stone or the latter's brother Harold, will open down the initial sack position, while Bobby Gerow will hold down the third base position. Bobby Philp will be the shortstop for the champs last year, while Bill Haynes will occupy the left field position. Manager Gerow has let them Bob Elliott or Tommy Boyd will occupy the centre garden leaguer in the short field. Hewitt Wilson will be the man to cover right field. Ken Chambers will be the pinch-hitter while the home team gets the base umpire for each game. It was decided at the meeting to accept the gate receipts, half going to each club, after the cost of one new ball has been deducted from the gross receipts. The league also adopted the Spalding ball and the home team is to supply one new ball for each game. All games are to start at 6.30 p.m. sharp and any team defaulting a game will lose their entrance fee of $5.00. The meeting also decided to adopt the Canadian Softball rules for their league.

The league executive will meet again next week, when a tentative schedule will be presented for their approval. All local leagues are quite enthusiastic over the possibilities of the future of the loop and it was decided to open the league as soon after June 1st as possible due to the fact that there was no daylight saving in Belleville this year. All games are to be of seven innings.

TERSE TALKS on TIMELY TOPICS

Dear Dolly Little Dumpher

Dear Friends:

I see that we're talking of changing the calendar to 13 months. What's wrong with adding a month? I hope they will stick in a few more weeks, because the 52 we had are never long enough. There's Golf Week, and Fire Prevention Week, and Tag Week, and Baked Bean Week, and Thrift Week, until we don't know if it's last week, or last week, or next week.

I need a few more weeks. There ought to be all of June, because that is no week, some week when we can't get out and enjoy it, we don't like 'em, or clean up and paint. Then I'm all for June being ought to be one week that is Tend-to-Business Week, or Root-Your-Own Game Week, or Get-Busy-the-Wildflowers Week, or some other appropriate name.

Those are all fine ideas, and I am in favor of all of 'em, but with so many weeks, I am beginning to suspect that when I start for the garage some Monday I'll find Mrs. Boobs reminds me that this is Safe-to-Job Week. If I want sausage for breakfast, it's Eat-No-Meat Week. If I hope to keep out it's Wear-Your-Old-Clothes Week. There are things at the shop that I ought to take care of, but I'm long to the Soup and Sinkers Club, and it's Eat-a-Net Member Week. If I want to go to a show, it's Stay-Home Week. If I want to stay at home, it's Save-the-Theatre Week. And the last few weeks I've got we seat Week myself. So I'll be saying right here, all and, hoping to hear from you this week. It looks to me like Mud Week ought to be a big week.

And it's for a noble purpose, too, and not only because much will be needed if efficient plumbing service you will be able to get about three weeks' work in two weeks or three days in two days, but the entire proceeds this week will be used for the relief of a poor family over on the west side, whose name is Doboy.

Hopefully yours,

CARRY DOBBS.

GIN PILLS

A Welcome Mischiefmaker

By Madeline Livesay

"Stuart" Betty Cameron walked in such glitter that her husband of four months dropped his razor and ran. "Just look what Hagg has done!"

One glance was enough. Imprints of small, muddy paws were everywhere. On the polished floor, on the chesterfield Persian rugs, on the tapestry chair and ending on the chesterfield where the culprit lay at ease. "Stuart, darling," she cooed ingratingly.

"Hagg, you rascal!" Stuart scolded, but his hands were gentle as he lifted the little dog and carried him to coddle. "Awfully sorry, honey," to Betty.

"He's a perfect nuisance," she declared. "If the door is left open a minute he slips in. You have to get one of those long chains to keep him by the back door." The deftly transferred a golden brown omelet from the skillet to a dish, and sat down to breakfast. Today, of all days, when I'm going to be busy with the cake——"

"What cake? I bet it's a good one, all right," Stuart interrupted. "You're the best little cook and housekeeper in town." Then, with a sidelong eye on Betty, "I think Hagg was joyously chasing his stub of a tail."

"The cake is for the Girls' Circle Stretwell, to be auctioned off at the church bazaar tonight. She's coming for it herself, and I did want the house to look its best——Stuart, there's a vacancy in her circle of the Guild. Wouldn't it be wonderful if she asked me to join?"

"Why? Is here's any better than the Guild?" Stuart bolstered up his biscuit as he spoke.

Betty gave him a considerating glance "Silly, as if anyone couldn't see that the nicest and most interesting people belong!" She rose and followed him to the front door for a farewell kiss. "Don't forget to see about a chain for Hagg."

Stuart presented cheerful and Betty went back to the kitchen. It was a sunny, pleasant room, and while she worked, with crisp gingham curtains at the windows and a posie table on which to eat, even the breakfast nook. Betty hummed as she moved about the small but neat room in order. Housekeeping wasn't exacting as Stuart knew, and cooking was really fun. She remembered her mother's words when Stuart informed her of his early marriage.

"Not until Betty knows the difference between frying and broiling, and how to clean a room without raising a dust," she had said firmly, and taken Betty to task. "Mere marriage does go to places on account of indigestion and general disorder than because the bride forgets her cold cream." This, in spite of her husband's feeble protesting that Stuart being a younger and handier man could still help Betty learn with his digestion while Betty learned to cook.

Betty's thoughts went back to the cake. It must be the very best one she ever made! She would take plenty of time for it so that she wouldn't be nervous or hurried. Just as soon as the little bungalow was in order she would begin.

But first she must repair the damage done by Hagg. She had to work slowly and carefully so as not to leave rings or streaks on the upholstery. A bit of wax for the floors, the rugs could wait until the week. Now for a room was ready. When she had polished in the bedroom and bath she went back to the kitchen. It wasn't promised until two o'clock ——plenty of time. Just as she called on an apron, a neighbor dropped in for a chat, which ended in tea and stayed—and stayed—and stayed.

Betty didn't want to do her mending and mixing until she could give her entire attention to it, but a seven-thirty tea is always a well longer. "Do you mind if I bake a cake while we are talking?" she apologized. Her neighbor declared she would be most interested to watch, and went on with her story of difficulties with the butcher.

At intervals Betty said "really? ...Do you think so?....Yes....No ....." under the cover of counting anxiously "One teaspoon... two cups of flour.....Stir well....." Now for a last touch. Was all the baking powder in, or just half? Many times enough to bake a cake be certain.

She tasted the batter into the oven, then, hoping for the best, went to see her guest to the door. Her neighbor was overcome with apprehension grew upon her. It couldn't have been in—it couldn't be! Perhaps it hadn't finished rising.

But it had. It even made a hit to the middle before she took it from the oven. Betty could have wept. It was a failure, a miserable failure. Heavy, with a tendency to be soggy in the middle. She threw a despairing glance at the clock. No, not many times enough to bake another before two o'clock. Suddenly a happy thought came to her. She would a multitude of sins, and Stuart could buy it. Then no one would know about it except herself and him altogether.

A half hour later she placed the finished product on the side by the window. Then she took the dishes. There! It certainly looked all right. Now for a last minute freshening before she left for the Girls' Circle. She was replacing her powder puff when a car stopped in front of the house. Yes...it was Mrs. Stretwell. Just time enough to put the garbage pail outside the kitchen door. She fairly flew.

Opening the front door she smiled. "Come in."

"Thank you...What an attractive little place you have," Mrs. Stretwell was saying. "Yes, I can't sit down, there are seven other cakes to be called for. Be sure to put one of your cards with the cake."

"Cards!"

"Yes. We always put the maker's

Betty knew a momentary pang. Then she brightened. "I made Stuart's favorite Gold Cake, with an orange filling, so I'm sure it will find a home."

"Oh, but that isn't allowed you know. We had to make a rule against it years ago, because if one husband did, all the others would have to.....to a matter of policy." Mrs. Stretwell's eyes danced. "It happens to be my husband's favorite, too, so I'm sure it will have a buyer."

Betty groaned inwardly, but there was nothing she could do. "I'll run home and get the kitchen while I put it in a box," she invited, and finished quickly. Then, as the door she stopped short, and both of them exclaimed at once.

Hagg, his hind feet in a chair, and legs on the table, was licking the other buried in the center of the cake, his little pink tongue playing in the icing.

Betty drew a long breath of relief. Then while she tried to make her voice wrathful: "Hagg, you little rag of mischief!" she turned to Mrs. Stretwell. "I must have forgotten to close the door and he slipped in."

"It's a shame, and I can see it was a delicious cake," she said.

"I'll make another and bring it with the cards," Betty promised. "No....I don't mind. Honestly."

When Betty went home a cake stood cooling on the table. A beautiful cake, as light as a feather, and simply perfect. I spoke to Hopkins about a chain for Hagg....."

Betty came over and lifted a flushed face to his. "Oh, I don't believe I want to chain him up, after all."

Chemists, mechanics and fabrication experts say only one lubricant is good enough for your expensive mechanical devices—the best. To the watch, small fan, vitrifier machine, vacuum cleaner, lawn mower, electric fan, refrigerator and other household appliances, they say, Mobilgas and Mobiloil are not only lubricants, but also cleans and protects.

If 3-in-One Oil is different from all others, because it is a scientific blend of animal, vegetable and mineral oils. It gives you the best lubrication of all. 3-in-One Oil not only works out dirt, protects against rust and wear, but gives the most efficient lubrication, thus eliminating unnecessary repairs and replacements.

Naturally such oil costs more to obtain than other oils, but it is worth it. Play safe; insist on 3-in-One Oil. Look for the moisture seal for your protection, look for the trade mark "3-in-One" printed in Red on every package.

470 MEMBERS

Thirteen unions in the counties of Prince Edward, Hastings and Northumberland comprising Women's Christian Temperance Unions, have a total membership of 470 active members, according to the corresponding secretary, Mrs. N. Parker, who read the report at the convention at Victoria Ave Baptist church, Belleville. Two days of regular meetings were held during the year.

The Scientific Temperance report given by Mrs. E. N. Baker was a splendid resume of the year's work which stressed the fact that the temperance cause is not the fanatic little children. Active interest in three branches in essay and letter contest were also encouraged.

A school of methods led by Mrs. E. N. Baker, Mrs. Pengelly, Mrs. Moore, Mrs. Hagerman, Mrs. Farnsworth and Mrs. Riley enjoyed a social hour which refreshed on the varieties and means of promoting the departmental phases of the work.

Company 3, Guides, are Entertained

A particularly happy occasion in old Guide circles was the social entertainment this week by the Guide Council in honor of Company Three members of Company Three were badges and awards were presented to Guides who earned them. The affair was held at the home of the District Commissioner, Mrs. S. L. Lazier. The chief event was the presentation by Mrs. M. F. Hall of a Certificate of Merit on behalf of the Dominion Executive on the tenth anniversary of her appointment to the captaincy of the company. The presentation was made by the Divisional Commissioner, Mrs. W. R. Wright, assisted by among the highest the Guide organization can confer and the hundreds of Guides who have been under the influence of their beloved "Oapp" and that is saying they have been more worthy of the distinction.

Other badges awarded among the four Guides to receive bronze stars for attending 75 per cent of the meetings for the year, the other winners were Esther Moncrief, Jean Hay and Jean Dickens.

Company Three has an enviable record for attendance and improvement in the past season. With a registration of fifty-six, this company had fifty-three active stars presented for attending 75 per cent of the meetings for the year.

Three Guides won the coveted five class badges, Cleta Symons, Esther Moncrief and Jean Dickens, presented by Mrs. D. C. Lazier. The following is a list of the badges and the number of grits earning them last year, Housekeepers 7, Laundress, 13, Child Nurse, 12, Knitters, 4, First Aid 8, Book Lover 1 Swimmers 6, Sick Nurse 1, Each of the Guides receiving these badges worked hard to merit them and had to pass rigid tests to qualify. Flowers and thanks badges were presented to the members of the Guide committee who acted as examiners for the tests.

The winning patrol this year was Esther Moncrief's and included Alice Gilroy, Mary Forster, Marjorie Scott, Margaret Hodgen, Nina Belcher, Aileen Dolan, Rae Symons.

Dainty refreshments were served during the afternoon.

Excessive Perspiration and its Treatment

Into two classes must be divided the individuals who suffer from excessive perspiration and odors; those slackers who do not keep themselves scrupulously clean and those unfortunates who suffer from certain nervous or gland conditions that call for medical attention.

In every pore of the body is a small water spout. It is a part of the cooling system that keeps the skin surface at normal temperature. Under the stress of extreme heat or vigorous exercise, beads of sweat appear. All the time the pores are exuding a film of salty liquid that contains chemical properties which, unless removed specially, will produce an unpleasant odor. Hence the need of the daily bath, a vigorous, riotous scouring with warm water, soap and a flesh brush. These three casual bathers who sit in the tub and soak while they read the last chapter of the exciting de-tect-stif story and then lazily and leisurely dab at all. Friction is required to remove dead skin cells which, of themselves, will in time produce odors.

To induce the skin to attend to its functions, the surface of the entire body should have a quick cold shower immediately following the sudsy scrubbing. Few women like cold water, but they can learn to endure it. The effect upon the complexion is worth money. It is an unfailing tonic for pale cheeks, early wrinkles and double chin.

We'll be an ugly world if we may not be fastidious about morals and manners, but which is extremely fastidious on the matter of personal hygiene. Bathing abound, soap is cheap, water costs nothing. It is taken for granted that every woman, no matter what her position may be, gives herself a thorough going over once a day. It is the only way to feel right and to look right. It isn't fair to be revealing but after an interview with a dress fitter one day, I came to the conclusion that some bath tubs are on duty about once a week. Or used as a tenement by the gutter.

Of deodorants there are many. They are not expensive. They are effective.

If a powder or lotion doesn't bring the desired results it may be because it isn't applied properly. Ordinarily the flesh in the armpits should be as dry as a bone when an astringent is applied. And no preparation should be put on immediately after a hot bath when sweating is likely to continue and wash it away.

A few important health rules are to be kept in mind. One is the matter of elimination. By drinking plenty of water the kidneys throw off more waste products, and the skin is called upon to work less strenuously. The intestinal tract should be active. Lungs too, eliminating organs, must get plenty of fresh air, deep draughts of it.

Salt rubs should be done over ambitious areat glands. Moisten a bowlful of ordinary table salt, forcing into the skin, turn on the cold spray on shower. Do this in the morning. Have the soapy lubbing at night. There's no law against two baths a day. And by the necessary if excessive perspiration is to be checked. Powder cheek, arms and armpits with baking soda. That helps. Don't do one thing, do everything.

The Beauty Box

BY HELEN FOLLETT

Curly eyelashes, ambrosial tresses and velvety hands aren't one bit more important than the woman who to cart one's body around, stepping and sitting like pretty, moving dolls. To hold up the chest, put the head first forward, hold the tummy flat, is to look better and feel better. To square the shoulders rides worse better when the old backbone is straightened, stretched tall. Nerves are steadied. Digestion is cleared. Very difficult to make the candidate for beauty understand that there can be no external improvement without health and splendid vitality.

Headheads have a horrid way of settling on the chest and collar bones, probably because frocks that don't go often enough to the cleaners' establishment grind into the skin. Every bath treatment bathe the skin surface with soap and water, dry, do not rub, rub, rub. Soft put on cold cream applications. Powdering with equal parts of boric acid and baking soda whitens the skin is moist and steaming after a hot bath has a way of inviting black heads to be picked up and depart.

If arms show a manis for collecting freckles, rub with a cut lemon at night. Let the juice dry on. In the morning bathe off with cool clear water and dry gently. The freckle fight can't stop for a day, there must be no armistice, because every moment of exposure to sun or even light makes new ones pop out. The nerviest freckle, tanned and naive, is tough on pretty arms.

These are the days when fever strikes into the feet and toes twinge like all get out. The pedal is a tepid bath to which baking soda has been added. Dry and then rub the cocoa-nut butter, frictioning it in with the flattened palms. Compresses of soda waters wrung out of cold water have a way of soothing little dogs that are hot and tired.

When the hair is thick and bounces out at the rear there can be a fairly short shingle with regular hair concealing it. At any rate, thinning in some form is necessary because the soft wide wave must conform with the outline of the head, look neat and sassy.

An Authority on Problems of Love and Matrimony

Because her love affair has gone on the rocks, Cora is despondent, she says she is. Her friends and family advising her to buck up, she answers with "What's the use?" She'd like to know how to "get Harry back" from that girl, Ethel.

And now, my dear girl, set yourself for a shock. It is the other girl you like, let it go at that, and with a thankful heart. Let me make the matter clear. If Cora is a fine woman or lose, you will think of this other girl as your friend. In a few months you will be sorry for her.

There's a homely law that applies to your case. You never can make a faithful witch dog of one that will follow every passer-by who whistles to him. Nor would you buy a runaway horse. No matter how persistent he acted or how long a period, you wouldn't do it. You know he would run when you least expected it, and unless you were 100 per cent. lucky, he would do plenty of damage.

And people are not so very different.

The point I am making is that the man who lets you down will let the other girl down. Better have one man you can trust than a dozen who are unreliable.

So many girls make the mistake of thinking of their jobs as temporary — a fill-in till they marry or

Only through the medium of the blood can the exhausted nerves be restored and this is best accomplished by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Many thousands of tired, nervous mothers have proven this to their utmost satisfaction. It is so much easier to prevent than to overcome diseases of the nerves.

NEW YORK UNDERTONE RETAINS FIRMNESS

Early Sag is Overcome on Saturday Morning

New York, May 21.—The Stock Market maintained a good undertone in another sluggish session today.

A sag in the first hour carried a number of leaders off a point or so, but the list hardened in late last hour, and losses in most cases regained. The market closed with a steady tone, but turnover was only moderate.

The developments of a character to influence the market were meagre, but financial quarters remained hopeful over the strengthening of the board of industrials and bankers to aid in credit expansion.

CHEESE BOARD

There were 907 boxes of cheese offered on the Belleville Board today of which 819 boxes were white, 301 boxes sold for $ 2-8 cents, while the balance brought $ 2-16. The following factories were represented.

PRICE WAR IS WAGED ON MART

War was declared in the prices of young transplanting plants and vegetables at Saturday morning's marketing when a number of the vendors started to cut prices and the bottom fell out of the prevailing prices with the result that the prices of many of the young transplanting purposes were sold quite below the quotations.

Young cabbage plants at 15c a dozen were about the highest price paid, while other kinds of young plants, like tomatoes selling for 15c and onions at 40c a box were also bought by the eager purchasers. Fresh young rhubarb sold at 5c a bunch, while green onions brought 5c a bunch. Lettuce was up in price, however, selling at 10c a bunch. Fresh asparagus was also plentiful and a drug on the market at prevailing prices. Young pansy plants brought 25c per box while other blooming plants sold for 20c a box. The price of potatoes was on the decline when vendors asked 90c a bag for their potatoes. This is a ten cent value over the prevailing price of last week.

As the inside market eggs were slightly lower when they sold from 20c to 22c a dozen, the outside remained firm, however, selling at 24c a dozen and butter was 25c to 26c a pound. Fine young chickens were in fair supply, selling from 50c to 75c to $1.50 according to their size and quality.

Considerable business was transacted during the morning's trading but the general decline in the price of beans of transplanting flowers and vegetables threw a small panic into the outside market, when the vendors were totally at a loss to know what to charge. Prices ran from time to time due to the decline of these plants.

Sim, and attended to nothing after his affairs, so it was desired that a receiver should be made of the estate after other small bequests.

Receiver Appointed

At the juncture of the examination the name of Margaret Sampson, executrix, was mentioned by Mr. Porter, stated the witness, that Margaret Sampson, who had been housekeeper for year had left him and gone to live with her mother a year before he died she had returned back to him, had come in unbidden and without his leave. Thereupon when he asked her to go on. She would up her suitcase and refused to heed the invitation to leave. This was objected to by Mr. Porter, who, to Mr. O'Flynn, who was acting as legal adviser, a letter was written to Margaret Sampson by witness asking her to leave before court action contended for.

Mr. Herrington took up the cross examination, and in reply to questioning Mr. O'Flynn admitted that the first time he had ever seen the late Mr. Taylor was when Joseph Taylor telephoned his office one day and asked him to come to Belleville to draw up a will for his uncle. That was the first will, and the first time he had ever seen him. This will occurred on May 4th and was drawn up in the home of Mr. John Taylor in Tyendinaga. Present witness, stated, was Mr. Cassidy a friend of the Taylors. The second will was drawn up in the office of Mr. O'Flynn some time later, this was the first one in which Joseph Taylor was named as chief beneficiary. It was stated that Joseph Taylor had gotten to the point where he was suspicious of everyone except Mr. O'Flynn, stated

Mr. Herrington: "Then it appears that at the time the will was drawn which Mr. Taylor had, he suddenly turned against them."

Choice of Executor.

Mr. O'Flynn: "It was wanted Joseph to be executor of the will—Yes".

Did Joe ever tell you that Maggie Sampson ever got up to a distance?

"Well he may have—yes. I guess he did. He told me that Maggie treated him like a dog."

Witness was asked to cut her out of the latter will altogether."

"Did he ever cite any specific complaint?"

"Well, he said she sulked. One time when he asked her to help him to go out she refused to give it to him."

"What relation was she (Margaret) to the old man?"

"I believe she was a niece." After you wrote her that letter asking her to move, when was the next time you heard of her?" Well, the old man came into my office some time in April and kicked about closing up the house and going to live with Joe. Then he claimed she'd have to get out of the house". "And she remained their until his death?"

It was further revealed that the first will was drawn up by Joseph Taylor's. There was little conversation, and Mr. Joseph Taylor was not present when either will was drawn up. Witnesses impressed of the infirmity of the elderly Mr. Taylor was that he was mentally alert and quite capable of transacting up to the time of his death. He was "particularly keen for the estate" declared the witness.

Criticism.

"Did Mr. Taylor criticize the manner in which Maggie carried on around the house, Mr. O'Flynn?" asked Mr. Corcoran. "Yes." And you said that Mr. Taylor offered to pay her way back to the West?" "Yes, he said that he would like to pay her off to go, but she wouldn't take any money or do anything to get out of the house. She was very cool to Thomson to decision to stay". "On Nov. 6th, 1931, you discussed Mr. Taylor's will. He asked you if she accepted the $1000 legacy he intended giving if she could prove her for wages for housekeeping services, too?"

Yes. I said that she could."

"Did you discuss with Mr. Taylor the legacy when the will of April 2nd was drawn up?"

"No" "You never discussed the manner which she came to Melrose?"

"No." "You saw Mr. Taylor on the property of Mr. Joseph Taylor when you went to Melrose to draw up the will—do you know why he was there?" "He was overseeing the barn which was being built then."

Drawing of Will

Dr. Walbridge, on questioning by Mr. Joseph Taylor, stated that April 1931 he was called to the office of Mr. O'Flynn and introduced to Joseph Taylor. He had never seen him before. Out of nearly an hour's talk with the late Mr. Taylor he found that the man was perfectly rational in all counts. He discussed various units and pros, on this and that and found him quite capable of extended conversation on all subjects. The man remarked to him something about being there to make a "foorpool will". Mr. Herrington took the witness.

Wanted No Interference

"Did he, Doctor, intimate to you that his relatives had attempted to interfere with him?" "Not exactly," he said that he wanted to make the will so that no one could interfere with it afterwards."

"He specified no particular acts?"

"No, merely that the relatives had perhaps interfere with or meddle with him." Dr. Walbridge stated that Mr. Taylor was no particular one that could be pointed out.

Mr. D. Corcoran: "Doctor, did he point out any particular clause in the will wherein relatives were named, in respect of Maggie Sampson?"

"No, he merely had the idea that they were going to make a little interfered to interfere."

Mr. Steve Salaman under questioning stated that he was a clerk employed at the time in the office of the late Mr. Taylor, and a letter will had been drawn up. He was present at the time the will of April 2nd was made. Mr. Taylor, related the witness, was in perfect accord with all clauses in, and the will itself.

Drawing of Will

Mr. Chas. A. Cameron, called to the stand, told of drawing a will for the late Mr. Taylor and also letters of administration to the estate. Since the year 1924 witness stated he had been acting in the capacity of legal adviser for the old Mr. Taylor at odd times. He had never heard of anyone else doing s'e wanted.

Teachers at Collegiate Will be Asked if They Wish to Remain on Staff

May 28th Date Set For Return of Questionnaire By Board

METER SCHOOL

Work Will Be Done By Committee Without Calling Tenders

Only minor matters of a routine nature were handled by the Board of Education at their meeting last night, which was adjourned at a very early hour.

With the reading of the monthly accounts presented by Chairman of Finance, Mr. John Elliott some explanation was due over the fact, that the total which may appear large was in reality one of the smallest monthly accounts, which had been tendered the Board for some time. The total, which was presented amounted to $2,062.87. Of this sum $744.24 can be declared for uniforms, which were purchased for the cadet corps. This amount for the purchase of the suits has been passed by the Board some time ago.

Just a Precaution

With the presentation of the petition, that all school children be required to take part in cadet drill, Mr. H. L. Allin asked for an explanation of this request. He cited the case of the Windsor Collegiate, which had become involved in considerable controversy some time ago over the same subject. He questioned the legality of the matter if it came to a show down. J. Barlow voiced the explanation, that the wording of the petition was designed as a disciplinary measure to take care of the young boys, who purposely secured doctor's certificates to escape practise and parades. But then could be found playing strenuous football immediately after the parade was over.

The question of entering the water in the schools evoked considerable discussion. It was claimed, that the expenditure was not necessary, and it was the wish of the city fathers that the water be laid to have them installed. A lower rate would then be given the schools for the water consumed. Mr. Baker of the Sites, Building and Repairs, did not think the work was extensive enough to warrant the calling of tenders. He made a motion to that effect, that the committee be empowered to act in the matter and allot the work to some tradesmen. Mr. Allin thought tenders could have the matter completed before the reading of tenders could be accomplished. This was seconded by Mr. Russ. Wotten.

Mr. John Elliott raised the objection, that he thought all the extra expense unnecessary, "I would like to see wouldn't the city pump sum every year to have the water, and then save money on it?" he asked. "We have already looked into that angle of the matter," replied Mr. Baker, "and can only insist that we put in the meters."

"Then I guess we'll have to put in a new city council" replied Mr. Elliott.

"I believe that no matter how small the job is we should call for tenders on it," stated Mr. W. Hazlewy. "There are very many plumbers in the city, who would be glad of the work. I believe they should be given a chance to tender on it." Mr. Geen concurred in this matter, and made an amendment to the previous motion. This was withdrawn however after considerable discussion and the committee was given power to act as long as the sum expended did not amount to what at first was thought it would be.

Should be More Interest

In regard to the parade of the cadet corps, Mr. Elliott regretted that there had not been more interest shown in the matter by the members of the Board.

"The cadets of all schools, the teachers, Capt Howard and the Board of Education should be proud of them," he stated, and regretted to the fact, that the Brigadier, who inspected them remarked that never in any city had he seen so many cadets go through their drill with the precision the Belleville cadets did. Furthermore, it was claimed, this city was the only one in the Province, who had a corps of girls paraded with the cadets.

"Beginning May 26th, we will hold our final session of term examinations", began part of the report of Principal McLaurin, who tendered his monthly report of College, which will give an opportunity of ascertaining the standing for the pupils for promotion and Departmental examinations. Following these we will have about one week and then further examinations will be held for those, who failed by a small number of marks in their year's tests. As the departmental examinations begin on Monday of June 20th, I beg to recommend that the school close on Friday, June 17th, at 3.30 as regular classes are concerned."

The recommendation was accepted by the Board without discussion.

Pictures required for Art Examinations will be purchased for the class. A further grant of $50, which had been promised some time ago was granted for the Girls' Physical class.

Further sections of the Principal's report showed that Cadet Inspection was held on Thursday. Previous to cadet inspection the flags, which were made by Miss Rogers and her senior technical girls were consecrated. These flags, 15 they had been purchased at their record have cost in the neighborhood of $500, read the report. But by purchasing the material and having them made, they actually cost the about $60. Part of this amount was suggested by the $25 the Strathcona Grant, and the difference made up out of the school treasury. A request therefore was made for reimbursement for this amount. This request was granted and the $60 to be paid was authorized.

Resident Makes Complaint

"My boy went to school one morning not long ago" stated a letter sent by one citizen to the board, "and the teacher asked him to 'fall in'. He fell in. The teacher then fell on him and punished him so hard, that he was covered on the back with black and blue marks. I went up to his house that noon and invited him to come outside. He refused. I wish an investigation made of this....." A special committee will meet to look into this matter.

A notice of motion, which had been made at the last meeting by Mr. H. L. Allin, asking that the contract forms of Collegiate Board be revised, was put to vote last evening, but finally withdrawn, when members of the Board decided on one other means of settling the matter. This evoked considerable discussion and lengthy explanation by Principal MacLaurin, representing the teachers. It was claimed by Allin, the mover, that as the contract forms now stood the teachers had all the advantage. Others also claimed, that the system was unfair to the Board. "The forms as they now stand", declared Mr. MacLaurin, "are the product of two years' intensive investigation by school teachers and school trustees of the Province. They also have the endorsement of the Provincial Board of Education". Mr. Cairon declared, that the teachers had a two to one advantage over the Board, in that they could feel out the market for another position, then, if he misses out, he has nothing to lose. An alternative was suggested by Chairman of the Board, Mr. A. Schryver and Mr. Elliott. It was suggested by Mr. Schryver, that a date should be fixed before June, and a letter should be sent each school teacher asking if they desired to re-engage for the coming year of 1932-1933. All replies should be received by the 30th of June.

"Make it the 28th", advised Mr. Elliott.

"Well—yes. That will do. We'll leave it at the 28th", agreed Mr. Schryver. This motion was finally made that the secretary be instructed to write all teachers asking if they intend to re-engage for next year by Mr. J. Elliott, seconded by Mr. H. Allin.

Mr. Reg. Moncrief wished to know if the British Empire Film now touring Canada could be arranged for the showing here in Belleville Collegiate. The matter was referred to the Music Committee.

Another recommendation advanced by Mr. Allin was to the effect, that a committee be formed for the purpose of looking into the matter of school books, which other cities now give free to the children, when their parents pay a nominal regular sum. A committee was authorized to look into the alternative fee system now claimed to be in effect in schools in Kingston.

What Board Did

- Passed monthly accounts totalling $2,062.87. This, when the cost of the new uniforms have been deducted, and which were counted in the bills, is the lowest figure to have been tendered the Board for some time. The amount spent for new uniforms totalled $747.24 of that amount.
- Passed a grant of $60.00 to the school treasury the amount needed to buy the material for the school flags which were made by the Girls' Senior Class under the direction of Miss Everest.
- Granted permission for the Softball League to hold practise for two nights per week on Queen Mary School grounds.
- Instructed secretary to write all teachers in schools asking if they intend to continue teaching for the year 1932-1933. All answers must be received in the secretary's office by the 28th day of this month. Moved by Mr. John Elliott, seconded by Mr. Allin.
- Passed a grant of $50.00 to the Girls' Athletic class, same having been promised to the association some time ago.
- Passed the recommendation that the Collegiate Institute be closed on the 17th of June for holidays, as far as regular classes are concerned.
- Referred the matter of installation of water and extra plumbing in all schools to the Sites, Building and Repair committee with power to act.
- A matter of Insurance Liability, which was presented to the Board for their consideration was left for further reference later in the Fall.

QUEBEC—Quebec's oldest policeman, Sergeant Ferdinand Bussieres, retired on pension, recently having completed fifty-one years of service. There were few policemen to patrol the city when he joined the force in 1881.

Three others have turned in their uniforms for the last time, the four having served the city for a total of 164 years.

CURTIS MAY HAVE HAD OTHER PLANS

Alleged He May Have Been Connected With Rum Runners

Hopewell, Ma. 21—The possibility that John Hughes Curtis' story of his astonishing lie may in itself have been false in part, received police attention today.

A portion of the Norfolk shipbuilder's confession that his efforts in the Lindbergh baby case was a hoax already was considered as disproved. That was the portion in which Curtis explained his purpose in the elaborate lie was to get money by the sale of his story to the newspapers.

Police pointed out the hoax was three weeks old before Curtis attempted to sell his story, and that even so, he could not hope to find any buyers unless he recovered the stolen Charles Augustus Lindbergh, Jr.—which he must have known was impossible, inasmuch as his negotiations were not negotiations at all.

An enquiry was quietly under way to learn if Curtis may not have had some other motive, quite removed from the sale of his story, for inventing the deception. It was recalled that due to the "defiance" of the negotiations with a vessel at sea, coast guard craft were trained from their usual careful patrols in some waters, fearful of causing the collapse of negotiations for the baby's ransom.

As a result of this relaxed vigilance, rum runners were able to move more freely, and the land cargoes of liquor without running the customary gauntlet of United States federal craft, authorities pointed out.

From Norfolk came word that counsel had been engaged to defend Curtis from charges of obstructing justice on which he is held, in lieu of $10,000 bail, in jail at Flemington, N.J.

AUSTRIAN VETERAN SLAYS HIS FAMILY

Phillips, Wis., May 21—Martin Tarin, 51, a World War veteran of the Austrian army, today shot and killed his wife and two small children and then killed himself in what Price County officials called a fit of temporary derangement induced by war nerves and unemployment. He emigrated from Czecho Slovakia in 1930.

Apples, sour cherries and late varieties of fruit are now in full bloom, while some peach orchards are at their best. "I will see him—I will see him—just for a minute—I'll be so good, so quiet—mother, please, please and speak him—I must"—she cried, her small face tear-stained.

Leonnor looked dark.

"He wouldn't be good! Keep me from him! If he knew!" said Elizabeth hoarsely. "He told me—that he—he—Leonnor, you—you're hurting me now—you're killing me, I tell you!"

Her voice rose, escaped all control. She screeched like a thing in a trap.

Leonnor's door opened. The doctor appeared, one of them. He looked from Mrs. Sheldon to the swaying girl. He caught Elizabeth in his arms, lifted her, asked briefly, "Where's her room?" and carried her there, laid her on the bed, forced a spoon between her teeth. "Another patient on our hands," he remarked.

"The nurse will attend things , over when they shifted duties."

"Just nerves—taken down two days after the wedding—have you said her—" to the little thing?

No, had scarcely pretty."

Then there was a night when the specialist rose from the bedside and looked at his colleague, at the two uniformed nurses and at Mrs. Louise. He said, low, "You'd better call Doctor Mrs. Sheldon."

Louise asked, dimly, as from a great distance, "You mean—?"

"Yes—coma."

She made an imperative, outward, sweeping gesture with both hands.

"No—all of you—please—"

They understood. There was nothing more that they could do. They left the room, stood within call. A nurse—the dark, younger one, was to Elizabeth's door knocked.

"Mrs. Sheldon. Mrs. Sheldon."

She was sitting in there. Dressed. At three in the morning. She rose, opened the door, looked out, eager waiting.

"He asked for me?"

The nurse was transfixed with pity. One didn't get used to it, one didn't no matter what they said. She lied, gently.

"Yes. You'd better come."

They sped along the hall together, like figures in a dream. Their lights burned all the way, dimly.

Then at the door they stopped. The two physicians stood there the other nurse. The family doctor had his hand on the knob. He said urgently, his mouth against the panels, Sheldon is here."

There was no answer.

He turned, frowning. A tired man, with a gesture of amazed helplessness.

"She has locked the door."

Elizabeth panted, her eyes torn wide. She whispered, "And others—? From her room?"

(A nurse) Yes, was gone a moment, came back. Louise Sheldon's room had been given over to the nurses. Not that communicating door was locked also, from the other side.

"He's dying!"

He put the arm about her.

"I say dear—"

"And she won't let me in? Oh, but she'll let you in, Doctor. She'll her you must come in—she'll nurse me and help to bring me to, be so careful—quiet—"

He answered, as the nurses drew apart, huddled together in terror, for this thing was outside their experience.

"There is nothing I can do—She's been up so long. I've wondered—she's not responsible, my dear—my dear—"

He looked over toward the other man, who shook his head, vanished.

Elizabeth was beating on the door. Her voice was not human.

"Let me in—let me in—Criminal Leonnor!"

One of them caught her hands, held her back.

"No—no—you mustn't—let me try again—"

But she pulled away, frenzied, very strong.

"Let me in!" she screamed. "Leonnor, tell her she must let me in. God—God have mercy!" she implored. "God—"

The door opened. Louise Sheldon stood there. Her hands were bar at her side. Her face was the color of old ashes. She looked at the screaming, kneeling girl with indifference and looked away again. She inclined her tall head, with formality, to the doctors, the nurses. "Will you go in?" he asked gently. "You see my son is dead."

They were hushed, they did not move even as Elizabeth fell forward in complete unconsciousness. They were as still as the room with the opened door.

In an insane calm, almost with triumph, Louise passed down the corridor, alone.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Reluctant April sunlight slanted through the drawn curtains, and Sheldon stood by the window and looked out into the streets. Cruel to bring it back to this house, cruel she thought.

She sat there upon a round velvet chair and closed her eyes. The house was very still. The baby was out with Nanna, an old Nanna, grey and stooped, but a Nanna who knew all about babies, who was never weary of comparing little Joyce with the young father Joyce would only know by tradition, legend.

Then there was Mrs. Sheldon; ma'am. See how her hair grows. In time she will curl—see—and the way she smiles—and her blessed eyes."

She turned to Elizabeth, sitting there and remembering that Nanna's absolutism in the nursery. She twisted her head from side to side, there was an insolent pride present, achieved at the expense of her neck. If only she could get away from Nanna—from Louise—from the house—if only she could take the baby home, back to Boston.

Henrietta had gotten away. Henrietta had died, while they were still abroad. That was why they had come home earlier than Louise had intended, Death had put a key in Henrietta's hand. Had she been afraid of it—afraid to turn it in the lock.

Every one had seemed to take it as a matter of course that Elizabeth wouldn't go home. Leonnor didn't find work according to do something. They had given the little filling and natural that she and the baby should live with Louise. Louise asked, dimly, as from a great distance, "You mean—?"

"Yes—coma."

She made an imperative, outward, sweeping gesture with both hands.

"All of you—please—"

They understood. There was nothing more that they could do. They left the room, stood within call. A nurse—the dark, younger one, was to Elizabeth's door knocked.

"Mrs. Sheldon. Mrs. Sheldon."

She was sitting in there. Dressed. At three in the morning. She rose, opened the door, looked out, eager waiting.

"He asked for me?"

The nurse was transfixed with pity. One didn't get used to it, one didn't no matter what they said. She lied, gently.

"Yes. You'd better come."

They sped along the hall together, like figures in a dream. Their lights burned all the way, dimly.

Then at the door they stopped. The two physicians stood there the other nurse. The family doctor had his hand on the knob. He said urgently, his mouth against the panels, Sheldon is here."

There was no answer.

He turned, frowning. A tired man, with a gesture of amazed helplessness.

"She has locked the door."

Elizabeth panted, her eyes torn wide. She whispered, "And others—? From her room?"

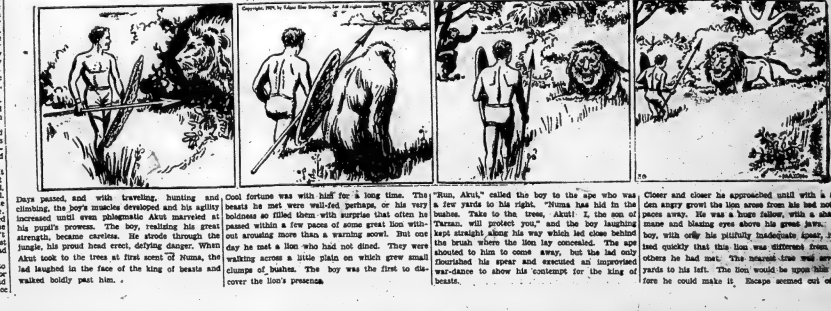
BRINGING UP FATHER

—By George McManus.



"MR. AND MRS." — THE FEMININE TOUCH IN THE SPRING GARDEN

SATURDAY, MAY 21, 1932.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Days passed, and with traveling, hunting and climbing, the boy's muscles developed and his agility increased until even phlegmatic Akut marveled at his pupil's prowess. The boy, realizing his great strength, became careless. He strode through the jungle, his proud head erect, defying danger. When Akut took to the trees at first scent of Numa, the lad laughed in the face of the king of beasts and walked boldly past him.

Cool fortune was with him for a long time. The beasts he met were well-fed perhaps, or his very boldness so filled them with surprise that often he passed within a few paces of some great lion without arousing more than a warning scowl. But one day he met a lion who had not dined. They were walking across a little plain on which grew small clumps of bushes. The boy was the first to discover the lion's presence.

"Run, Akut," called the boy to the ape who was a few yards to his right. "Numa has hid in the bushes. Take to the trees, Akut! I, the son of Tarzan, will protect you," and the boy laughing kept straight along his way which led close behind the brush where the lion lay concealed. The ape shouted to him to come away, but the lad only flourished his spear and executed an improvised war-dance to show his contempt for the king of beasts.

Closer and closer he approached until with a Sudden angry growl the lion arose from his bed not ten paces away. He was a huge fellow, with a shaggy mane and blazing eyes above his great jaws. The boy, with only his pitifully inadequate spear, realized quickly that this lion was different from the others he had met. The nearest tree was several yards to his left. The lion would be upon him before he could make it. Escape seemed out off.

The L. W. R. Secretary, Miss E. M. Rudman, Picton, gave a splendid report showing that this department is increasing. Mrs. Rudman conducted a school of methods showing through brief plans read by delegates how the work can be inaugurated and carried on successfully.

The officers were introduced by Mrs. Hobson of Selby, and were warmly welcomed by the delegates. Mrs. Blakely took worship period.

Mrs. Manerlax, Rkonkelo, gave the report of the study of Temperance in Sunday Schools and S. S. educational campaign showed the splendid success of that work who outlined future plans for the continuation of loose activities. In connection with conduct work in the Sunday School, Mrs. McCaffray gave valuable suggestions of carrying on this phase of W.C.T.U. work.

Mrs. Maurice Lavole sang a delightful solo during the afternoon. Mrs. Lavole and Mrs. Jones were accompanists for solos and congregation singing, throughout the convention.

Worship Period

The afternoon's session of the first day of the convention was opened by Mrs. Perry of Wellington conducting the worship period, using hymn "Breathe a name, Spirit of God" and a psalm, Mrs. Foley led in prayer. Mrs. George Cole of Belleville, welcomed the delegates in a very gracious manner and Mrs. Spicers of Madoc expressed the thanks of the visitors for the frequent expression of Belleville's hospitality. Belleville having entertained three times within a month.

The President in her appointment, Mrs. T. Blakely of Cherry Valley, said 10 unions had evangelistic superintendents but the whole 12 unions observe the half hour worship period. The most apparent need is more knowledge of God's grave faith in God, more love for one another and more prayer which accomplishes more than this world dreams of.

Miss Gardiner, Citizenship Superintendent, in her report said the outstanding feature of the year was the circulation of the petition to the Premier of Ontario, Madoc report showed 100 per cent adults signed the petition, Belleville had 1780 signatures, Picton 790, Cherry Valley, 700, Bloomfield 500, the county totalling 127,000 signatures. The report from Stirling comprehensive was equally as interesting.

60th Anniversary

Mrs. Colvin, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of New York State was guest speaker in an afternoon session and gave a very expressive account of the present effort of that body towards celebrating their 60th crusader anniversary and how they are holding rewards from all ages. She closed with the stirring words "Lift up your Heads when Prize Belong to the W.C.T.U. Magnify your office."

Mrs. George Findlay, Sabbath Observance Superintendent, reported that three unions and one "Y" had superintendents of this department and concluded with a strong appeal to each union to support this department. A pleasing feature was here introduced when Mrs. Findlay was requested to bring her baby to the platform when Mrs. Colvin placed upon his wrist a new silver bracelet. Prayer was offered and this interesting ceremony was brought to a close by Mrs. Colvin saying "Cometh to make up His Jewels".

The first vice-president Mrs. John Wartman, was in the chair for the latter part of the afternoon session.

Press and Mission report was given by Miss F. Mottevera of Picton, who showed that many unions had called on the sick, distributing fruit and delicacies. Mrs. Frank Cook of Napanee, Medal Contest Superintendent was absent through illness but sent a letter of sympathy was sent to her from the convention. Her report showed that under one or one senior oratory contests though the year, seventeen taking part. Miss Helen Scramith of Selby, was the silver medalist.

Parlor Meeting Report

Parlor meeting report by Mrs. D. J. Jackson of Bloomfield, showed Belleville leading with ten meetings held. Picton, Trenton and Wellington each having two meetings. Parlor meetings create a spirit of fellowship and an increase in membership. Superintendent was Mrs. George Dobson of Bloomfield, Press Superintendent.

Reports of the twelve reports received, Belleville and Napanee reported in the best. Nineteen Belleville meetings were reported together with items from city sheets. Napanee published 10 meetings and 10 clippings. Other unions were also on in contributing articles to the press.

Memorial Service

A beautiful memorial service was conducted by Mrs. John Wartman of Newburgh. The hymn introducing it was "For all the saints who from their labours rest". Eleven names of deceased members were read. Beautiful white carnations were presented one by one as the names were read. A rising poetic selection accompanied each name. Mrs. R. Parsworth arranged the flowers with fern in a silver vase as the names were read. Mrs. Wartman brought out the idea that there is no reason for the departed to be a memory with the old loves once enjoyed besides meeting the Heavenly host with those of realization that before. A memorial prayer closed this part of the program.

Mrs. W. Emorey of Cherry Valley gave the report of the Soap Wrappers Department, in which Picton reported 25, Napanee 25, Rednersville 350, Enterprise 246.

C. T. U. Hicks, Picton; J. P. Williams, Picton.

Concluding Pageant

(The feature of the evening's programme was the pageant "From Coast to Coast" presented in verse and song by members of the Belleville Y.W.C.T.U.

This pageant graphically showed the results of the liquor traffic in all provinces excepting Prince Edward, which presented the contrast.

"because New York is the centre of the financial world, and it is here that you get all the news of the stock market boom, but a question as to the depression, but it is also the centre of the hope that it would soon be over. The Lindbergh kidnapping has also probably bring the Empire the story of the world today—this is the great tragedy of the terrible."

"Regarding the tariff is here," he said, referring to the new duties imposed by Canada, "that it is not up to our hope. If I have been charged with responsibility for it, I plead guilty. It is not up to our hope yet in relation to the Empire. The coming Ottawa conference will probably bring the Dominions within the tariff but not the Empire. The policies of the National Government at the last election were nominated by it, however, and we must support them. I am very much interested in customs union or the whole Empire."

Mrs. Geo. Wright, first Vice-Regent of the Chapter kindly loaned her apartment for the occasion. Mrs. Jenkins, Regent, assisted in receiving the guests. The tea table, where Mrs. Robert Bristol poured tea, was very daffodils.

C. T. U. Convention representing the counties of Hastings, Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward memorialize the Provincial W.C.T.U. to send forward to Premier Henry a petition to give the people of Ontario a plebescite on it."

"As the public librarian are a great factor in the educational opinion of the young, resolved that the W. C. T. U. take a deeper interest in them by all in their power to create a higher moral tone in the books and literature handled and provide the librarian with temperance literature."

An interesting part of the programme was the presentation of county and local officers. These were presented to Dr. Mary Harris Armstrong, national T. Symington by Napanee Union; to Mrs. J. R. Noxon by Picton; Mrs. Ella Bateman, Picton; Mrs. H. W. Foley by Selby; Mrs. Z. E. Baker and Mrs. Baker; Mrs. Vanness, Enterprise; Mrs. W. Conway, Napanee; Mrs. T. Symington, Napanee; Mrs. G. Municipalities Still to Receive Two Thirds Grant in Direct Relief

Premier Henry Makes Announcement on Subject

SCRAP WORK PLAN

Non-Partisan Advisory Body to Handle Distribution Problems

Toronto, May 21—Official announcement, long expected, was made by Hon. George G. Henry last night, that the federal and provincial governments jointly would continue to contribute at least two-thirds of the cost of direct relief in municipalities, and that the former plan of stimulating joint public works would not be renewed.

In a prepared statement, the Prime Minister of Ontario made it clear that while two-thirds is simply the minimum joint contribution of the governments, and that where municipal needs are in especial difficulty, which arises usually through non-payment of taxes or inability to collect them, the provincial government will contribute more.

Such municipalities are invited by Premier Henry to lay their especial needs individually before the government, so that proper consideration may be given them in fixing the higher amounts which the government will authorize.

Advisory Committee

Mr. Henry also announces that a non-partisan body, and will consist of three or four men well-versed in municipal matters. It also undertakes that the federal government will not assume any part of the responsibility for relief in direct relief but will stand by to pay its share of whatever amount the province may recommend.

In the final statement issued by Mr. Henry, the history of unemployment-works and of direct relief, and the part in the development of the crisis in the Fall of 1930, up to the present date.

An interesting feature was the presentation of suitable regals to Dr. Orland Ledge Officer, Vice Rev. W. E. Conner, by V. Wor. Bro. O. P. McGregor, of Toronto, on behalf of Lodge and Encampment of the Queenth Connbry.

Hospitality and party was tendered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Casker on Saturday evening, to welcome their son, Carl Casker of Toronto, and his bride.

The Belleville Presbytery of the United Church of Canada, held their May meeting on Tuesday last at Trinity church, Madoc, with an attendance of about one hundred and ten ministers and laymen.

Rev. W. Woodger, B.A., of Napanee, Chairman of the Presbytery presided with Rev. J. E. Bickel, of Napanee, as Secretary. Rev. Dr. Bishop, Principal of Albert College of Belleville was the chief speaker, and gave a statement of the United Church's relation to the world's problems of today.

Rev. G. W Rivers, B.A., B.D., of Madoc, and Mr. W. L. Gordon of Tweed, were elected as members of the Settlement Committee for 1932-1933. Rev. W. P. Woodger, of Napanee, and Mr. R. B. Petterly of Belleville were elected as members of the General Council, meeting in Hamilton in September.

Meals were provided by the ladies of the Church, who received a hearty vote of thanks for their hospitality, and the minister and official were thanked for the use of the church.

UNEARTH OLD COINS BY FARMER'S PLOW

(By The Canadian Press)

NEWCASTLE, N.B.—Miles Wallace, a farmer of Upper Newcastle, while ploughing in one of his fields recently, had the fortune to turn up a number of old coins, which were remarkably well preserved. One, which was dated 1611, had the stamp "Bristol and South Wales, one penny token." Two of the others bore the images of Queen Victoria, one being dated penny token when Brunswick, 1843." The other "Province of Nova Scotia, one penny token, 1856." There were also one or two others about the size of a fifty cent piece and very heavy.

Saturday morning me and Sid Hunt was going to take a walk out to the park, and Sid's kid brother Bert was sitting there listening to us talk about it, and we cant go anywheres without him following us, and Sid said, Now listen, Bert, you're a good kid and I want you to do me a favor, Me and Benny's going to take a walk and it would be too long of a walk for your short legs, but you run home and get a sensible kid for your age and I want you to stay home from where you belong, do you hear?

I yeah Bert said.

Meeing he would like fun, and Sid said, Now listen, will you, I'm going to take you for a walk in spite of you or anybody like you. If you try to follow us and walk so fast you cant keep up to us and you'll get lost and want know your way home and it will be your own fault and you hear that Bert said.

O yeah? Bert said.

Meeing he followed us before without anything like that happening, and Sid said, Now listen, you dumb kid, I'm going to fix it so you'll put your face in and bert you, do you understand?

O yeah? Bert said.

Meeing it would take more than Sid to scare him, and Sid said, Well Bert, if you wont listen, it you promise not to follow us I will give you something.

What do you mean something, Bert said, and Sid said, My piece-ran whistle.

All rite, I promise, give it to me now, Bert said.

Well then, and just then Mrs. Hunt looked out the window saying Bert, if you're going for your dancing lesson it's time to start.

Yes mam, said Sid. And he quick ran down the street.

Proving he couldent of followed us anyways and Sid said, Confusing the luck, what's luck you know about that, little kids and what they use to be when we was little kids, he said.

Which maybe they aint.

ESTABLISH NEW WORKSHOP THEATRE

MONTREAL—A workshop theatre where anyone with a theatrical leaning may get a chance to display it has recently come into being under the auspices of the National Theatre Society. Original plays will be produced during the season 1932-33 before members of the Workshop Theatre and new talent will thus be given a chance to appear. Stage setting and production will also be carried out. Another service which the workshop is planning is the establishment of a dramatic school in which beautiful and beautiful Canadian-English will be taught, and which will train acting representatives.

A partial realization of this ideal will take form in the Moyse Hall on the evenings of May 27 and 28, when premieres of six one-act Canadian plays will be presented. Four English and two French plays have been chosen for this occasion, which also includes one short Shakespearean story Theatre's current season. These six plays are the outstanding responsibility of six directors drawn from the well-organized amateur dramatic groups in the city.

THERE IS SOLID ROCK UNDER CANADA'S FEET

INSTEAD of straining our eyes looking "around the corner" for that phantom which men call "Prosperity," and never overtake, let us look at some facts:—

Our natural resources are still beyond any accurate estimate; our national wealth over $30,000,000,000.

Our banks are solvent.

Their debits are 11 per cent. more to-day than they were ten years ago.

Their savings deposits more than 22 per cent.

Twice as much life insurance is in force.

While the optimists were peeking around that "corner" and the minor prophets whispering blue ruin, Canadian corporations in 1931 paid out in dividends $226,351,000, an increase of $32,500,000 over the average for six years, and $50,000,000 better than any year in Canadian history prior to 1929.

Why should Canadians stop working to shake apart with Fear? All the "terrible things" that were to happen are fading out of focus.

Outsiders knocked down our dollar but our bills to the world have been paid, our taxes met, our hungry fed, and our helpless sheltered.

Masses are always blinded by the immediate view, but our Canadian people are coming to see that a riot of economy is just as foolish and just as dangerous as a riot of extravagant spending.

Sane men of every class must realize the necessity of keeping a constant unrelenting contact with this market that is slowly and surely regaining confidence in itself.

There is no contacting medium so close to the Canadian consumer as his daily newspaper.

At The Belle

TOM MIX, LEW AYRES AND MAE CLARKE IN DOUBLE BILL

Bellowing plaudits, cracking whips, wild riding and roaring West turn-id inside out in a whirlwind of screen action.

That is the sort of tidal wave of movie excitement to be seen when the great cowboy star, Tom Mix, appears on the screen back to the screen in "Destry Rides Again" is the title of the highly exciting film and it will be seen on the two feature program per gram at the Belle Today and Monday, with matinee daily.

The popular Mix Brand novel of a wildcat cowboy who was framed to prison by a ring of unscrupulous politicians and who emerged from this harsh years later, to pay his debt to each member of the jury, is a perfect vehicle for the virile screenpersonality. The millions of fans who wondered how Mix was going to fare with the microphones when the talkies came into vogue, will be pleased to the core when they hear him speak in a most pleasing, he-man voice.

Mix is superb in his newest role and he seems destined to bring back his modern pictures that stick of dynamite film action that they need so badly. His reputed one million fan letters will grow into many millions and one of the greatest screen stars who ever appeared before a camera is going to become even greater, as his celebrated cowboy character rides and shoots his way through our new-est-day film entertainment when the sound of the hoofbeats of the many other realisms.

Tony, Mix's wonder horse and inseparable pal of many a movie campaign, is back too, and even he may prove to be smarter, more alert and agile by reason of his circus experience.

"Tarnished Maiden" Thrilling

A girl who was willing to go the limit and a boy who was true stand out their love drama in "The Impatient Maiden," which is the feature offering on the same program. It's one of the season's best productions. And any book that is not bad?

In his form as a novel by that daring writer Donald Henderson Clarke it was one of the season's best sellers. The boy is Lew Ayres and the girl is Mae Clarke. The "All Quiet" boy and the "Waterloo Bridge" girl for the first time realize to the full the promise they gave in those two notable productions. The supporting cast is splendid, too. John Halliday, Una Merkel, Andy Devine, Helen Jerome Eddy, Ethel Griffies, Ben Hall—all splendid and all in splendid roles.

CARNIVAL IN WONDER FILM OF THE TIMES

Maiteson Lang's impending appearance in "Carnival" at the Capitol Theatre on Monday and Tuesday will be an important attraction, not only for the fact that the reactions that are listed to appear in many of the scenes are unique, but the unbelievable showing of this supposedly ordinary film, that it marks a new era in Empire-made entertainment will make the appearance of England's great actor and actress of the "All Quiet" and "Waterloo Bridge" girl for the first time available to the full the promise they gave in those two notable productions.

The supporting cast is splendid, too. John Halliday, Una Merkel, Andy Devine, Helen Jerome Eddy, Ethel Griffies, Ben Hall—all splendid and all in splendid roles.

Maiteson Lang was born in Montreal of Scottish parentage. He plays the part of "Silvo" in "Carnival", is the youngest of seven sons of a Presbyterian minister, and was born in Montreal in 1875. He was educated in Scotland and destined for the Church. A calamity that did not materialize. He commenced his very successful theatrical career at Wolverhampton in 1897, in association with Sir Barry Jackson. Subsequently he joined F. R. Benson's Company in which he played a number of parts. His apprenticeship under Benson and very experienced actor's gave him an advantage on which he has never failed to improve. It is interesting to note in connection with "Carnival" that he produced the stage play of that name when he entered on the management of the New Theatre in February, 1930.

FLEES WARD

Has Note Book in Which Mention is Made of Kitchener's Death

New York, May 23.—A man whose identity police withheld, but who, they said, has a diary or note book intimating he was in some way responsible for the death of Lord Kitchener, Chief of Staff of the British Army who lost his life in the North Sea during the war, was under arrest at police headquarters today.

Burning of Vessel

Police said the man was being held in connection with the burning of a British vessel in which several lives were lost, during the war.

Although police declined to disclose the identity of the prisoner, it was learned he was Capt. Fritz Joubert Duquesne, who escaped from the prison ward in Bellevue Hospital in 1919 and fled by aeroplane to Mexico. Duquesne, a native of Cape Colony, South Africa, was an adventurer, was wanted in England on a charge in connection with the burning of a vessel following an explosion.

W. YORK VOTERS HEAR SPEECHES

Mitchell Hepburn Returns to Fight After Being Laid Up

Toronto, May 22.—The week-end in West York was one long round of political speeches.

With less than a week remaining before election day to the polls to choose a successor to the late Dr. Forbes Godfrey, former Ontario Minister of Health, candidates and their supporters toured willing and numerous listeners. The week-end was featured by the entrance of James S. Woodsworth, Labor member of the House of Commons for Winnipeg North-Centre, and return to the battle of Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, who was reported to be suffering from a severe cold last Friday.

Mr. Woodsworth urged nationalization of water powers, mines, forests and other national resources.

Launching a vigorous counterattack against Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Ontario Minister of Mines, Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal Leader, said that if the attack had come from any other source he would have called the gentleman a "contemptible cad". Mr. Hepburn described the minister's speech as "full of misrepresentations, misquotations and untruths."

If he were in power, the Liberal leader said, he would not hesitate to change the system of taxation and "put the burden on those who have wealth." He promised an "inside" investigation of provincial government department if the Liberal party came into power at the next provincial elections.

The Hunterdon county grand jury convenes today and is expected to consider the case of Curtis, now in jail accused of giving false information and hindering the hunt for the kidnappers and murderers of the child.

The Norfolk man's counsel, Wm. Dodd Chesebro, conferred with him yesterday after a trip to Philadelphia where he was understood to have tried without success to raise $10,000 bail.

Hunt for Bootlegger

Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf said the hunt was still in progress in Maryland for a New Jersey bootlegger said to have predicted the finding of the child's body.

Richard Bedford Bennett Wins Race, Our Premier Had Lent Name to Horse

Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett Tells Interesting Story of Turf and How He Came to Have English Race Horse Named After Him

Ottawa, May 23—Richard Bedford Bennett has won one of the feature races of the English flat season. In case the Canadian Prime Minister may be coupled with Lord Rosebery as one of the sport premiers of the British Empire, it should be explained that the race was won by a namesake of his and not by a horse owned by him.

And thereby hangs a tale. Many months ago, the Prime Minister received a cable from Lady Houston, one of the richest women in Great Britain and the backer of the last Schneider Cup races. It sought permission to name a horse after him.

Mr. Bennett was agreeable—providing the horse was a "good horse."

Another cablegram arrived. It was from Lady Houston. It congratulated the Prime Minister upon lending his name to the winner of the race. His name-sake had won in a driving finish over a large field. And it explained that a great ovation from the crowd greeted the winner as he crossed the line. Mr. Bennett was very happy. Apparently the horse was "a good horse."

The Prime Minister told the story last night at a dinner given by Col. Hanford MacNider, United States Minister to Canada to the member of the Parliamentary Press Gallery.

Judgment in Taylor Estate Reserved at Close of Hearing

Many Witnesses Examined in Case of Melrose Will

THE EVIDENCE

At 5:45 on Saturday afternoon at the close of the addresses of counsel in the John Taylor will case, Judge Deroche reserved judgment.

Continuing his evidence on Friday afternoon Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C., of being unable to find Archie Taylor's home and of having a conversation with Mr. Taylor.

"The question of Mrs. Sampson came up. He told me he felt that she had had a pretty hard time in life and he felt she should receive some consideration. He asked me whether to give her $1,000 in cash or $1,000 annuity. I advised him to give. He asked me to find out what she wanted.

"As the result of this what?" asked counsel.

"She told me she would not tell him how to make out his will." Then he left her the $1,000 in cash.

"In the meantime the doctor had returned and after I had written the will, then read it and as before I named cash person and asked what she would do with it. It was signed and witnessed."

"What statement was made of Jos. Taylor on that will?"

"I believe that was the occasion when he told me that Joe would get the farm and nothing else. That was when Joe said he could make $5,000 and asked for a switch in lawyers. The will is now in my office."

Parents Promise to Punish Lads Who Put Stones on Rails

On a charge of attempting to derail a C.P.R. express train three local boys appeared in the Juvenile Court held before Magistrate Mikel this morning and after hearing the charges read, pleaded guilty.

The three lads admitted they have placed stones and rail spikes on the C.P.R. tracks late last Monday afternoon, at the east end of the local C.P.R. yard limits east of the hospital. The stones and spikes were noticed by a freight train crew, who were in the siding nearby awaiting the passing of the fast express train and the members of the crew dislodged the stones and spikes thus averting what might have been a serious wreck. Later the boys were apprehended by C.P.R. Investigator W. A. Ramsay and summoned to appear in the Juvenile Court this morning.

The court severely reprimanded the three lads and as their parents were present and assured the court that they personally would punish the boys, the lads were allowed their freedom after being warned to stay away from all railroad property. His Worship pointed out to the lads the seriousness of their folly by telling them that they had endangered the lives of many citizens travelling on the trains. The boys were given a suspended sentence and handed over in custody to their fathers, who promised to see that they would stay away from the railway tracks in the future.

Clean Up, paint up and brighten up, the business and residential sections, and thus make a brighter and better looking Belleville, a pleasing sight to motorists passing through or those who will say "there is a real live community which views life with a smile and can see nothing but happy days ahead."

Much can be done before the month of May ceases to be—let's all get busy—let's hire a man or woman to help us, if we can. Just phone the Government Employment Office, 887, and a man, woman or boy will be at your disposal for an hour, a day, or a week.

WEESQUIRRELS GROW RAPIDLY

Orphans Occupy Fine New Little Home on Burnham St.

Homeless and motherless the four tiny baby squirrels which were adopted by Mrs. F. White of 166 Burnham street last week are Sunday morning, are rapidly growing.

The little animals were the offspring of a silver black squirrel which had its home in a tree in front of Mr. White's home, where she had lived for a number of years being, as she and always was a friendly neighborhood. The mother, she died, was killed and left the little ones motherless, which the made her nest on the morning of May 14th. Neighbors knew about the addition to Mrs. Black squirrel's family and upon finding the mother dead they investigated the nest home and found four little black squirrels a few days old. Mrs. White took them into her care and has successfully reared them by means of a bottle. The way the little animals lap for the milk in the bottle is quite an attraction as they seem to be quite adapted to feeding that way now.

Yesterday for the first time the little fellows, now about five inches in length, not including their long bushy black tails, were first introduced to drinking milk from a dish, and after experimenting about the contents of the dish for some little time they at last reached the milk which they lapped up with evident pleasure. Since then the little fellows also eat quite freely of soft nuts, which are ground up for their food. One of the little squirrels fell out of its cage last week and is no more fortunate than the other squirrels.

Mr. Vic White, son of the genial Mrs. White, who took the little squirrels into her care, has built the little animals a fine home with all the comforts of an up-to-date squirrel's modern residence in it and the little fellows are as much at home as though they were with their mother. It is quite a sight to see the little fellows wash themselves and then scamper after brothers or sisters, as the case may be, to receive attention from each meal. The three little squirrels are pure black from the end of their nose to the tip of their bushy tails and are quite tame. They come to Mrs. White at her calling and literally climb all over her with their feeble that they know she is their friend and benefactor.

TRIBUTE PAID TO POSTAL SERVICE

Courtesy and Efficiency of Officials Marked

In a recent communication to the Department, a correspondent pays the following tribute to the Canadian Postal Service.

"I have had occasion to write from one end of Canada to the other and have received a reply each time. I am at most of our post offices. I would like to say on every opportunity that I have never seen any post offices in any other country that equals our own. In our post offices the politeness and assistants are most obliging and attentive and go out of their way to assist one. The attention and consideration shown by them are as good as the most efficient and highly competitive business assistants and a lot better than some. I have had quite a few in twenty years of travelling, only have two complaints to the post office. All the others are so deserving of praise that I cannot say enough.

Whoever is responsible for this organization is most efficient, courteous, obliging and efficient employees is to be highly congratulated. Personally I wish to thank the post office officials that I have come in contact with for their kindness and courtesy and I am pleased to think that the Canadian Post Office is not equalled by any post office I have had any contact with.

Obituary

JAMES H. MOON

Yesterday there passed away at his late residence, 322 Albert street, a citizen of Belleville, who has for many years been favorably known and highly respected by all, in the person of James H. Moon. The deceased was born in Huntingdon in 1840, and for some years after his school days engaged in farming. Having a bent toward woodworking, he forsook agricultural pursuits and started in carpentering, gradually branching into contracting work. His craftsmanship and thoroughness won him a clientele, which ever remained true to him. He was a member of Bridge Street United Church for over a half century. To those left to mourn his loss is extended the sympathy of a host of friends and acquaintances in Belleville.

The immediate family surviving are the widow, one daughter Mrs. M. F. Brigal of Montreal and two sons Roy of Huntingdon, Ind., and Albert of Los Angeles, Calif.

It is estimated that the black race is doubling its world population every 40 years the brown and yellow every 60 years and the white race every 90 years.

GRAND OLD MAN OF CLAN HONORED

Philip Denyes, at 90, Celebrates Birthday With Friends

Honoring one of the pioneer farmers in the district, Philip Denyes, who is widely and favourably known as a large circle of friends, relatives of Mr. Philip Denyes, Trent Road, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Denyes to observe with him his ninetieth birthday. It is interesting to note that Philip Denyes has reached this advanced age so active in his mind as well as has he retained his faculties. He possesses a keen intellect and takes a great interest in world affairs.

Born in Thurlow Township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Denyes, Mr Denyes was one of a family of ten of which he is the only surviving member. He began the career of farming, when methods were such, that few remember today. The life of a farmer was then toilsome and arduous. Modern farm machinery was unknown. Fields of hay were cut with scythes and cradles were used at harvest time. In his middle life Mr. Denyes came one of the most prominent and successful farmers in the district and retired some years ago after a prosperous career. Mr. Denyes has always been a lover of horses and even today he gets up at an early hour to feed his pet horses. Motoring, however, is one of his enjoyments and only recently he returned from a very pleasant trip to Toronto and Niagara.

The gathering Friday was a happy one. A sumptuous dinner was served at which forty immediate friends and relatives were present from Odessa, Sidney, Foxboro and Belleville. The centre of attraction was the table where the birthday cake glowing with ninety candles.

The toast to Mr. Denyes was proposed by Rev. J. C. Baiter who referred to Mr. Denyes' many outstanding qualities in fitting glowing terms spoke of his faithful attendance and support of the church.

Mr. Henry Denyes, ex-M.P.P., one of the prominent members of the family, also paid a fine tribute to Mr. Denyes as the "Grand Old Man of the Family." In an interesting way he told of many amusing instances in the life of Mr. Denyes when farming was done, laboriously by hand.

A pleasing event in connection with the celebration was the baptism of two of Mr. Denyes' descendents. The little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd, the baker, Mr. Denyes' daughter, and also his great grandchild, the child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor, were christened by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Butcher.

22,000 VOLTS PASS THROUGH HIS BODY

Cornwall, Ont., May 23—John Mackay, 17-year-old Balmoral youth "fighting for his life in the hospital today after a 65-foot fall from the top of a power line tower at the end of his father's farm Saturday.

Young Mackay went to the rear of the farm to close a gate, climbed to the top of the tower at the last pasture field, despite warning posters. Members of a crew of a freight train on a siding adjoining the farm saw the youth climb the tower. While walking between two of the wires a flash of flame leaped from the boy's body as he fell to the ground, here he lay for nearly an hour before help arrived. Linemen say that 22,000 volts of electricity passed through his body.

SPECIAL ONE WEEK SHOWING OF MADE-IN-CANADA FRIGIDAIRES

FIRST MODELS MADE-IN-CANADA NOW ON DISPLAY

Today as the first made-in-Canada Frigidaire models are presented in Frigidaire showrooms, Radio and Refrigeration Shop, 316 Front Street, Belleville, wheels are turning, men are busy and new Frigidaires are coming off the assembly line at the new Canadian Frigidaire factory. Production is being speeded up as much as possible so that the large number of orders received from dealers in all parts of the Dominion can be filled as quickly as possible by this recently established industry.

Establishment of the Canadian Frigidaire factory followed through investigation of the Canadian field by executives of the Frigidaire Corporation in Dayton, O. In commencing on Frigidaire's new made-in-Canada policy, W. C. Wright, Canadian manager, said:

"Establishment of a Canadian Frigidaire factory is another manifestation of the vigorous administration policies announced for 1932 by Mr. A. G. Biechler, president and general manager of Frigidaire Corporation. Mr. Biechler said that Frigidaire's advertising and promotion program for 1932 would be directed toward surpassing 1931, when Frigidaire built and shipped a very much larger volume of household models than during the preceding year."

Immediate production schedules of the Canadian Frigidaire plant call for the building of ice cream cabinets and commercial refrigeration equipment as well as household models. Employment is being increased in many points in Canada through the placing of orders for motors and other parts for the Canadian Frigidaire.

Frigidaire Corporation is one of the pioneers in the electric refrigeration business. It was one of the first to engage in extensive advertising and merchandising activity, and to put its manufacturing on a low cost, mass production basis and so help pave the way for the tremendous popularity of electric refrigeration. The electric refrigeration industry, due to the increasing demand for its products, and wide general acceptance as an economic necessity, has been one of the bright spots in the business world for the past two years.

Showrooms Decorated For Frigidaire Displays

In celebration of the arrival of the first made-in-Canada Frigidaires Frigidaire dealers are conducting a special one-week showing of the new Canadian-made models, beginning today. Showrooms have been decorated for the occasion. "Open house" at every showroom invites visitors to feel free to come in and examine the new products of Canadian workmanship. Special demonstrators will be on hand every day and evening during the Show Week to point out to guests the many features of the new Canadian Frigidaires.

When interviewed the local dealers mentioned the new low made-in-Canada prices as a factor which will be a revelation to visitors to the shows. "These new Canadian Frigidaires, known as the Moraine line embody the important Frigidaire features, yet, size for size, they are offered at the lowest prices at which Frigidaires have ever been sold in Canada."

First Showing

CANADIAN-MADE

FRIGIDAIRES

HERE'S important news for everyone. We are making a special showing of Frigidaire's new made-in-Canada refrigerators. These new refrigerators embody revolutionary principles in cabinet design . . . new, more compact models for the modern efficiency kitchens. Powerful, two-cylinder compressors in every model. And, size for size, they are selling at the lowest prices in Frigidaire history.

Make this an eventful week by seeing this special showing of the new Frigidaires. Visit our showrooms. See our special displays and the interesting demonstrations. Any day or evening this week.

NEW COMPACT DESIGN

The made-in-Canada Moraine Model Frigidaire are compactly designed to occupy a minimum of space in the kitchen without sacrificing food storage space. This affords more food storage space than any other model refrigerator of the same exterior dimensions.

New Frigidaire Models Combine Compactness, Ample Facilities

Moraine Series, Now on Show, Featured By Large Shelf Area, Together With Small Floor Space Occupied, as Well as Beauty of Design

The new made-in-Canada Frigidaire electric refrigerators, being shown for the first time at Frigidaire display rooms, Radio and Refrigeration Shop, 316 Front Street, Belleville this week, are made in three popular sizes and are known as the Moraine Model Frigidaires.

Chief features of the three models are the compactness and beauty of design, the great amount of shelf area as compared with the small amount of floor space occupied, a durable exterior of special finish, powerful and quiet two-cylinder mechanical unit, flip type shelves for tall containers, stainless chrome finished hardware, cold control for quick freezing bar type shelves which prevent tipping of containers, sealed freezing compartments, stainless aluminium trays and flat service shelf tops.

Advanced electric refrigeration principles and features, made famous by Frigidaire, are found in the new cabinets. The cooling coils are of copper and brass, the most efficient metals for transferring heat, and silver solder is used on all pressure joints. The compressor, being of the two-cylinder type, offers a reserve of power which assures adequate refrigeration on the warmest days.

The same high quality cabinet construction that has contributed to Frigidaire's success is followed in the Moraine models. An outstanding point of this construction is the sealing of the insulation before the steel sides are placed on the cabinet. Asphalt is the seal, which forms an effective barrier against destructive moisture.

Ample Storage Room

Probably one of the leading appeals to housekeepers is the large storage capacity of each model, as the Moraine cabinets provide the maximum in food storage space with the minimum in floor space. The smallest, the four-cubic-foot model, has 8.7 square feet of shelf area. The five-cubic-foot model has 10.3 square feet and the six-cubic-foot cabinet has 13.3 square feet of shelf space. Owing to their compact design they are particularly suited to small homes and apartments where space is at a premium.

All models have two stainless aluminum ice and dessert trays. The freezing capacity of the smallest cabinet is 30 cubes, or four pounds of ice at a time, and the other two models will furnish 42 cubes or 5 pounds of ice at a freezing. The food compartment lining is a one-piece steel construction, with rounded corners to facilitate cleaning. Chromium, the hardest known metal, is used as the finish on the hardware. It does not require polishing.

The four-cubic-foot model stands 53 9-16 inches, while the second model is but 11-16 of an inch taller. The six-cubic-foot size is 64⅞ inches high. The width of the smallest cabinet is 24 inches and the depth 17⅛ inches. The middle size is 28¼ inches wide and 21 inches deep. The largest size has a width of 28⅛ inches and a depth of 22⅛ inches.

All models have the famous Frigidaire super-power, which makes possible Frigidaire's remarkable performance in fast freezing cubes and of large quantities of ice cubes.

CHIEF OF WOMEN FLIERS

Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam has set a record unequalled by any flier in history. She has crossed the Atlantic in a solo flight and has flown the ocean as a passenger. She is the first woman ever to fly the vast expanse of the ocean.

The fact that her trip across was marked by exhaust trouble for ten hours makes her victory all the greater, proving her a woman of undaunted character and of matchless resources. She has battled against storm and rain and fog and except for the first three hours of her trip she did not find it possible to use the altimeter, and hence she could not tell at what height she was flying. Four hours after leaving Newfoundland the manifold of the exhaust burned out and she decided it was as advisable to go forward as to return. Herein she showed heroism of unlimited command.

Some time ago it was said that men were better motorists and women better fliers. Whether this is true or not Mrs. Putnam has proven for the world that woman's sphere is like man's unlimited and unbounded, for she has done what only one man has ever equalled by her solo flight.

Mrs. Putnam's name will go down among woman aeronauts at first to achieve the conquest of the watery waste.

The whole world thrills at her daring and command.

The first crossing of the Atlantic was by two Englishmen thirteen years ago, Alcock and Brown. They blazed the trail which others have been following and trying to follow.

RESPONSIBILITIES OF WEALTH

"Short selling may or may not be justifiable, but 'rigging the market' on an extended scale, and 'cornering' it with large sums of money, will find few defenders," says The New York Times. "This is particularly true in the cast of that pool for dealing in Radio Corp. which the Senate operations were uncovered in Washington on Thursday. Several very rich men went into it with the intention, at least with the obvious effect, of misleading the public with regard to the stock, which they bought with one hand and sold with the other, and individuals outside investors to buy at the higher prices so as to net to the organizers of the syndicate a profit of $5,000,000 within the space of one week. The affair has two aspects. One relates to the machinery and rules of the Stock Exchange under which such dishonest transactions could be conducted. If they were really, as they appear to have been, in violation of the regulations, somebody ought to be brought to book for the offense. The other question provoked by the disclosure has to do with the personal morals and the social responsibilities of men of great wealth who took part in and profited by what was plainly no more than a gamble.

"It was admittedly a mad time—those years of 1928\and 1929. Standards not only of finance but of ethics seemed often to be thrown upon and discarded overboard. But as we get new light, from the records of this particular pool, upon the methods then in vogue, we see how reprehensible they were and how infallibly they created throughout the country a profound distrust not only of the New York Stock Exchange but of the men who have come to control of large capital. This is the most disturbing thing about this latest revelation. It seems to have left a number of men of rich mien entered into a secret speculation without inquiring into its nature or consequences, without asking themselves what the judgment of public opinion would be if the facts were known, and without permitting scruples about their personal obligation to their fellowmen to weigh for a great one the possessors of large wealth to influence their conduct in the matter.

"No inquiry by Congress, no attack by agitators or demagogues, could injure these men half as deeply as they injured themselves by the course which they followed, and which has now come to light. They flouted the chief commandment laid upon men of immense means in a democracy —namely, that they must not, or must not appear to be, the soul of honor in their dealings with the public. They forgot, and must now suffer because they did, that richesse oblige."

NEW TYPE OF ROADS

Steel roads are being tested in England. Triangular plates are set in asphalt mortar, three of them forming a rectangle no larger than a paving brick, the Mail and Empire says. The upper surface of the plates has diamond shape projections to prevent slipping.

The history of roads has meant for the greater part of history the macadam road. The Roman people gave a great impetus to construction by their extension of the empire and some of their roads are yet to be found in various parts of what was once the Roman Empire.

Modern traffic has brought forward concrete and asphaltic roads, but as stated above iron roads may be a possibility.

AN ADOBE ROAD
By Aline Michaelis.

I would ascend again the sun-baked ledges
That closely clasp the hill,
And from the crest would see the valley's edges,
A golden land, and still.
From the adobe roadway, rising, winding,
I hunger to behold
The climbing path, its sunlit whiteness blinding,
The hills, the haze of gold.
The humble flowers, smiling from the grasses,
The whip-poor-will's refrain.
The lambs that gambol up the hillside passes,
All these I want again.
These joys I want that tranquilly abound there,
The ease from care's sharp goad;
Ah, does it wait me still, the peace I found there,
Up that adobe road?

A BRIGHTER AND BETTER BELLEVILLE—Plenty of work now to clean up and paint up. Don't overwork and invite disaster to your physical being. There are plenty of good workers who would be glad of an hour's work, or a day or a week, men, women and boys; and they need it badly. Don't be overcareful. Keep'em busy. WHAT SHALL WE INVENT NEXT? is a question which is occupying the thoughts of inventors. Perhaps it will be a new sun-power motor; another would go miles deep in the earth for heat; another wants solar energy turned into electrical form; another is looking for ether waves in since now unknown; others are working on television, crime detector and protection against germs and insects. Labor saving machinery is also being turned out to insure that workers will be turned out of work when they get into operation. Reader of this column gives his reasoned opinion that there should be a moratorium upon the making of more labor-saving machinery. With thousands out of work there is no necessity of saving labor, all that can be accomplished is to save some employer the price of labor so that he can get ahead of his competitors, until they in turn improve on his machine and throw more men out of work. Aforesaid reader says that 10 days or three weeks labor saving machinery was just coming into use on the farm, there was much hand work and there was always a few more anxious hand on the farm. There was a job for everybody who wanted to work, there was plenty of work everyone, and there was absence of that mad dash which fevers the blood nowadays and fills the church yards with victims of shattered nerves, high blood pressure, heart disease, stroke and heart ailments generally. Labor-saving machinery has resulted in one machine doing the work formerly done by many men, many, thus thrust into the ranks of the unemployed, cease to be buyers, and industry suffers from lack of purchasers, from lack of money to buy the products of other labor-saving machines and as the circle ever widens customers become fewer, and fewer and fewer get fewer in every line, stagnation results. What does it profit, said aforesaid reader, if we invent machines that will do away with all work, if it also does away with the power to purchase the product of these machines, and swells the lean, lank and hungry ranks in the bread-line. All of which gives ground for interesting thought, in this wonderful machine age, and era of chines in which we are living, and many avenues of human endeavor.

Mrs. Snagge new lodger had brought in his usual supply of butter for the week. When he sat down to tea one day, however, he noticed that it was rapidly diminishing, and he at once called the attention of the landlady to the fact. She said the cat must have been at it. Picking up the plate and looking first at the butter and then at the cat, he exclaimed, "You artful creature, to go and cut it with a knife to make me believe Mrs. Snagg had done it!"

Other Papers' Opinions

EFFECT OF BUREAU EXODUS

The majority of countries are suffering from a lack of equilibrium between the population of the towns and that of the country districts. Of all the ills which afflict our nationality, the rural exodus is the greatest, and the' one which demands from our economists and our rulers the most prompt and effectuous action. Heal this illness which each year saps the strength of our vitality and we will have banished the greater part of the economic and moral evils from which our society is suffering so grievously.—Le Droit, Ottawa.

TRANSIENT GLORY

James Cagney, movie director, who has been getting $1,000 a week, has demanded a weekly increase of $2,500. He is reported to have said that, unless she gets it, he will quit motion pictures and enter Columbia University to study medicine. We also note that Marlene Dietrich has rebelled against working under a substitute director. Which only suggests that cinema celebrities sometimes don't realize from what altitude their wheelbarrows are buttered. Once in the movies, a comfortable job is nothing to fool with. "Nowhere yesterday, here today and where tomorrow?" is the sum up of the ambition for many a Hollywood highbrier. Every actor knows his position in a salary spotlight, but it's no fun having to chase it.—Buffalo Courier-Express.

IDLE FARMS

There are among the unemployed in the cities of Canada thousands of people who would be glad to work in farming. They were attracted from the rural districts by the boom of industrial expansions that followed the war.

In order to enable these people to return to their original vocation and thus increase the total wealth and of an hour's work, or a day or a week, men, women and boys; and they need it badly. Don't be overcareful. Keep'em busy. Brighten up your own home and premises and brighten up some other home by giving work to the unemployed.

Mrs. Snagge new lodger had brought in his usual supply of butter for the week. When he sat down to tea one day, however, he noticed that it was rapidly diminishing, and he at once called the attention of the landlady to the fact. She said the cat must have been at it. Picking up the plate and looking first at the butter and then at the cat, he exclaimed, "You artful creature, to go and cut it with a knife to make me believe Mrs. Snagg had done it!"

CLOSE WATCH NECESSARY TO FLEE RICKETS

Proper Diet Removes Danger of Faulty Nutrition

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. F.A.C.P.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

The way to avoid the development of rickets in your child is to give it the proper diet. Rickets is not a disease, but so many health ailments are diseases, but so many health ailments are due to faulty nutrition. The trouble is that the soft bones, but the trouble is that the faulty diet shows in the bones.

Another name for rickets is rachitis. It is particularly prevalent between the ages of six months and two years, but since the development usually escapes the notice of a physician, there is no way of knowing for many months. They become noticeable when the child commences slanted and takes her first walk in the doctor.

Sweating of the head should always be considered a dangerous sign. The same may be said of unusual irritability. Fretfulness about at night, in an otherwise healthy child.

Constipation is a symptom that persists throughout the course of the disorder. When there is constipation, together with fretfulness and sweating, no time should be lost in having the child thoroughly examined, so that a definite diagnosis may be arrived at.

One of the earliest bone changes to take place is enlargement of the ribs. Where the cartilage joins the rib there is a hard bony part, a small knob or nodule appears. This is known as the chest and on each rib. This string of nodules is often called the rachitic rosary because of its resemblance to a string of beads or rosary used by Catholics in their devotions.

When the disease progresses the head tends to become large, the forehead protrudes and the top of the skull is flat and square. The face is also changed. On the four corners, as it were, of the forehead are prominences called "bosses" that emphasize the square appearance.

A very common bone change can be recognized by examining the teeth. Defective nutrition of the bones in rickets causes these added changes in shape.

Children suffering from this condition are usually irritable and nervous. Convulsions are common. Various kinds of spasms are also met with in diseases of this type. The typical general anemic state likewise is unusually present.

Rickets does not kill, but it may lead to other diseases. It also determines the system and predisposes the child to pneumonia. Often finds that children with rickets are usually undernourished, suffering from undigested rickets, which is known as the acid intoxication.

The cure of rickets lies in building up the general health and building up the general health of the child. This, of course, is best done in a few days. In rickets, it is not the child that is sick, but rather the system is again functioning properly.

The trouble with a diet that is rich in starches and sugars and Protein also, but to a lesser degree, is Fats.

Babies who get plenty of starch and sugar foods, such as fruits, may appear robust and well and be free from rickets. Nevertheless, the same thing may be true of an infant that has been breast-fed so long, the mother's milk not containing enough Vitamin D.

It is best that a physician supervise the child's diet, as the needs for individual requirements may differ. If you have a baby, your child needs such foods as milk, eggs, fish, cereals, vegetables and fruits. Plenty of exercise, fresh air and sun baths are essential.

When rickets has been definitely established it is necessary to treat the disease with Cod liver oil. Therefore the sooner rickets can be detected the better.

Mr. and Mrs. Hall, residing in Thurlow, was in town today exhibiting a monument of extraordinary size and weight. This monument which is to be erected in the cemetery at Thurlow, is also can be imagined from the fact that it weighs two and three quarter pounds.

Many citizens were this morning in attendance at the sale of city horses and harness, conducted by the city treasurer, Mr. Price. The various lots were all up for sale were all bid upon and sold. In some cases the bidding was of a spirited nature.

A party of prominent Belleville citizens will leave in a few days for a trip to the old land. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hall will sail tomorrow on the steamer Victorian. Dr. and Mrs. Ponton, Mrs. Ponton and Miss Anna Ponton will sail on the 29th per steamer Empress of Britain and Mrs. R. J. Osborne, will sail on the 29th per steamer Royal Edward.

The city council will meet this evening when one of the subjects that were thrashed out at the last session will again come up for discussion. Most sincerely it is to be hoped that the council will be in a better and more work. The time spent in debate, in the long drawn out arguments have once been stationed to the city's interests. Two-thirds of the talk after the first speech or two on any subject is simply a big waste of time. Definite action of what has already been said would be more to the point. It is to be hoped that the resolution of Ald. Ketcheson and Wallbridge, to limit each alderman to one speech on each question in committee of the whole will be adopted and some other regulation that will prevent undue discussion. Such a rule is stated to be in force in Boston Education and works satisfactorily. In some places there is a rule that the council shall stand adjourned after a certain hour without motion. The rule is a good one, provided it expedite business wonderfully.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay. De.)

MODERN MOUSE TRAP—

Mr. Bert Empey, jeweler of Acre one day last week stepped into his store and was astounded almost as tall as himself. "It had stopped", explained the young lad, who had been sent to wind the clock. "I wound it up with the key and it was wrong with it." "It seemed to be all right, except the pendulum did not swing right—and if the pendulum didn't swing right nothing else would happen to it. Finally it stopped and not one of the pendulum could be found to be wrong with it." The last court WHEN DO YOU WIND YOUR clock, man, and the clock was left there, and when Mr. Empey arrived the clock was examined a small mouse was found crushed to death among the larger wheels and gears of the timepiece.

At some time or other the little mouse must have crawled into the large clock for shelter and in the dark and in some manner the tip of his tail was caught between the teeth of the mechanism, holding the little animal fast. As the gear turned relentlessly around the mouse's tail the clock the little creature was slowly drawn closer to the wheels. Closer and closer he came to the gears and finally was killed. The body reached it and was steadily but slowly crushed with the turning of the wheels and gears of the clock. When the wheel had travelled over the body then the bulk of the little animal stopped the clock entirely. Apparently such must have been the cat but it has also accounted for a good many mice, too.

SUNDAY SERVICE—

All of which brings to mind the story of the two Irishmen strangers who came to this country some time ago and got a job on the farm. As was the case on all farms Olaf was supposed to get up very early Monday morning to call the others, but that was the , hardest job of the week for Olaf. Every morning found him grumbling for half an hour after the rest had left the house. Finally things got so bad that the family chipped in and bought him an alarm clock, then everything went lovely. It was the first alarm clock Olaf ever owned, and he was so proud of it that the first ring found him up and dressed long before the others had stirred.

One morning however, Olaf slept in—the clock had refused to work. That night he wondered why, and next morning he investigated, but began to experiment. He took the clock apart, but failed to find the cause. A dead cockroach. At some time or other the bug had crawled in and had been killed inside the works. The corpse however, was still in a good state of preservation and could easily be identified by Olaf who had seen it crawling on the wall. In the course of his wonderings, therefore he knew what it was: "Humph!" muttered Olaf, "this wonder clock run anymore, Engineer bane dead!" Empire Day Events

Empire Day was duly observed in Picton by a public gathering at the War Memorial. The school children marched inside and gave several patriotic songs. There will be a concert tonight. The monument will be decorated with flowers. Sunday, May 24th.

The Kiwanis Club will be responsible for the big dance and bridge in the armouries. Special arrangements are made for equipment for the children's new playground, and other features of interest are expected to attend.

It is expected that there will visit the apple blossom districts on the holiday, especially those at Wallbridge and Roslin.

FOXX, GROVE, LEAD A'S OUT OF DARKNESS

Now Only Three Games From Second Place Senators

RALLIES WIN

Braves Are Certainly Causing Anxiety in National

By HERBERT W. BAKER
Associated Press Sports Writer.

The good left arm of Robert (Lefty) Grove and the mighty bat of Jimmy Foxx fast are leading the Philadelphia Athletics out of the darkness of the American League standing.

Behind Grove's at shit pitching and with Foxx at first or home run by Foxx, Al Simmons and Mickey Cochrane, the Athletics swept over the New York Yankees, 4-2, yesterday for their seventh consecutive victory. As a result, they moved into third place, three games behind the second place Washington Senators and four and a half behind the Yankees.

Grove, in winning his sixth game in a row, outpitched Henry Johnson by the narrow margin of one hit. Johnson allowed only five hits in the eight innings he worked and struck out seven but could not keep the home run ball away from the A's "big three".

Washington got four-hit pitching from young Lloyd Brown and Sam Jones shipped the Boston Red Sox, 7 to 1. Cleveland dropped into fifth place as a result of a 4-2 beating at the hands of the St. Louis Browns, who made only two hits off Clint Brown but bunched them for four runs in the fifth.

Ninth inning rallies won two games for the Chicago White Sox from the Detroit Tigers. Johnny Hodapp's homer won the first, 3-2, and Lew Blue's single was the high spot of a five run rally that won the second, 6-5.

National League.

The Boston Braves drew to within two percentage points of the National League lead by splitting a double bill with the Phillies while the league leading Chicago Cubs were taking another beating at the Cincinnati Reds.

Ed Brandt fanned five-hit ball to give the Braves the opener, 4-2, but singles by Fred Hirst and Cresent Davis in the tenth inning gave the Phillies the nightcap, 5-4. A record breaker crowd of 46,331 saw the battle.

Roy Kolp had the better of a pitcher's duel with Charley Root as the Reds won from the Cubs, 1-0, when Brooklyn cast offs, Babe Herman and Ernie Lombardi, drove in all four Red runs.

Bill Clark held the New York Giants to five hits as the Dodgers won a 2-1 victory with Alfonso Lopez driving in both tallies.

Pittsburgh won the first game from St. Louis Cardinals, 5-3, but dropped the second, 5-3. Steve Swetonic pitched his third three-hit game for the Pirates in the opener and would have had his fourth shutout but for a home run by Pepper Martin. Bill Hallahan was walloped for 12 hits in the second game but was tight in the pinches. He struck out eight and to run his season's total to 51.

Saturday's Games.

The American League's swainmin claimed attention in Saturday's games. Jimmy Foxx leaguer pounders as many games as the Athletics swept the Boston Red Sox, 18-6 and 6-3, but Babe Ruth kept pace with a pair in the third game against Washington, which the Yankees took 14-13. Lazzeri and Dehrig also hit for the circuit. The Yankees also took the second game, 8-5, urged on by Ruth's record homer with two aboard and his strong pitching by the opener. Detroit subdued Chicago 5-1, with Vic Sorrell scattering the opposing hits, and the St. Louis Browns put on a four-run show in the ninth to turn back Cleveland 8-7.

In the National League the Boston Braves also made things struggled in innings before Wes Schulmerich's double, scored Gus Dyrnada, gave the Braves a 6-5 win. Guy Bush walked Hack in the ninth to give Cincinnati a 6-5 victory over the Chicago Cubs, and the league's only doubleheader for the day found the Giants and Dodgers all even. The Giants' eight run outbreak in the eighth inning settled the opener, 13-8, but Van Mungo handled them in the second game, 7-2.

The executive of the Belleville and District Ladies' Softball League met on Saturday night at the Y.M.C.A. and the team managers were given their player's certificates for the coming season. Although nothing sensational was passed along as to a playing field was definitely unofficially, that they would again play their games on the Armouries lawn. We hope so, due to the fact that the fans like attending games there, as it is quite central.

All four teams seem to be ready to face the barrier and each team manager predicted victory for his players. The loop only consists of four teams this year and we are of opinion that the league of fall will be much faster than heretofore.

The question of umpires took up considerable time at the meeting. A number of umpires' applications were read but the team managers drew a little dubious as to the ability of some of the applicants. After considerable discussion the following list was drawn up and those of their choice by a majority vote of the team managers: C. B. Colling, W. Gerow, R. Hey, H. G. Woodley, Jas. Ethier and K. C. Colling. Some of the applicants whose names had been submitted, were left as a reserve roster of umpires and may be called upon to work in the loop at any time the executive feel that their services are required.

We are of the opinion that as the league had advertised for umpires it was no more than fair that all applicants should have been given a thorough trial on the diamond. Some of the team managers seemed to have petty grievances against certain applicants and it is their names were shelved for the time being. Maybe they will find favor with services before the season closes. Such things have happened before.

Promoters Harry Robinson and Joe Semain announced that they were staging a monster ironing bout to be staged in the Belleville arena on the evening of June 1st. They assured us that there were to be at least ten high class boxing bouts on the program.

Local lawn bowlers please note!-Several important revisions were made by the Dominion Lawn Bowling Association at their annual meeting which was held at the Victoria club Friday night. The most drastic change was the adoption of the group style of play used by the South African Bowling Association in their carnivals. The group style will now be used in Canadian tournament play instead of the old system of elimination. It has proven unsatisfactory in the past.

The Belleville Victorias will hold their initial work out of the season on Wednesday evening.

Queensway Romped to Win in 73rd Running of King's Plate

Second Successive Year For Owner and Colt Set Record

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Gallant little chestnut daughter of old Koenig-Christoberti, Queensway, three-year-old star of the W. R. Cowie's stable, has brought double honors to her owner. In a sparkling performance at Woodbine Park Saturday the filly won the 73rd historic King's Plate but set a new record in doing so. It was the first time in fifteen years that any owner won the Canadian turf classic in two successive years.

King O'Connor, three-year-old gelding from the Seagram stable, whose entries have won the Plate seventeen times, was second, three lengths behind Queensway and four lengths in front of W. R. Wright's three-year-old Spey Creek. The winner paid $8.00 to $2.00 for first, $4.60 to third dollar after the race long had been accepted as winter favorite, Cowie's filly romped over the nine furlongs in 1.55½, cutting 3/5 of a second from the previous record set by Poland in Newsy Troutlet in 1927.

After an unusual delay at the post the eleven horses shot out into the stretch in a bunch. Easter Hatter, the heavily backed favorite on top. Close on her heels was Queensway which negligent seat to make up the deficit. The two see-sawed positions until the latter finally extended his charge as he swung into the home stretch. Queensway Easter Hatter dropped back into third position as Speedy breezed on to finish all by herself.

By her convincing race for an owner who specializes in the sport prominent Canadian racing men but two years ago Queensway won $20,430 and 50 guineas donated by His Majesty the King.

The favorite finished in fifth place three lengths behind the other head of the Cowie stable. Jockey Wood of two horses ever to beat Queensway. The other was Bull Dandy, who beat her in the mud. The owal Charger, however, was dry and that exactly the conditions suited to the champion.

More than 20,000 people cheered the Cowie filly on to victory — a victory in the Canadian classic run feature in America.

Lord Beaverbrook, the Governor-General, presented to owner Cowie the coveted trophy. Earlier he was feted by Queen Victoria in 1859 to the best of Ontario three-year-olds and upwards.

The Thorncliffe stable entry of Brodus and Bull Dandy never proved any serious threat; neither did the Hedgewood Farms' Easter Dandy, who tired himself by his misbehavior at the post.

Farmers' Softball League Formed

At a meeting held in the town hall at Wallbridge on Friday evening May 20th, it was decided to form a Softball League, only farmers residing in Sidney being eligible to play. Eight teams signified their intention of entering a team, namely Wallbridge, Penboro, Harmony and River Valley in one group, and Lower Fourth, Rossdale, Centenary and Bayside in a southern group. Each team plays twelve games, starting on May 24th and finishing July 1st with first two teams in each group playing off for the championship.

Rochester Moves Into Second Place Over Weekend

LEAFS LOSE TWO

Newark Bears Continue on Winning Way in Loop

(By the Associated Press)

The Reading Keys may not be the best team in the International League standings, while most of the other clubs are fighting for first place or something near it, but the results of the past few days make it clear that Clarence Rowland's men are not disposed to give up anything without a struggle.

Leading first Rochester, a leading contender, and then the league leading Newark Bears, the Keys have carried four of their last six games into extra innings. But they won only one of them.

Last Wednesday they battled the Red Wings into a morning going down 1-0. The next day they took an 11-inning decision from Buffalo, and then went down four times in a row, two in 10 frames, Saturday and 13 in yesterday's first game.

The 13 inning affair was interesting enough to attract 18,000 fans, the day's prize attendance. It was a pitchers' battle and they fulfilled the promise that drew the crowd. Between them Reds and Keys pitchers around the lot for ten runs and fourteen hits, Rochester with three hits and 10 strikeouts in the last 11 innings. Newark kept pace and in the 12th, Dixie Walker drove a double down the Newark left field walk, two aboard to give Newark a 13 to 10 decision and the league lead. It was nearly read to win the second game 5-5 but Rochester broke the tie in the ninth on a homer by Harry Holaclaw from the bat before him.

Red Wings Second

The Rochester Red Wings, whose playing has been almost as attractive to the fans as Newark's, provided an exciting game for 16,000 spectators as they jumped into second place with a double victory over Buffalo. The Red Birds had to go 11 innings and then were two runs in the last half of the final game to win, 6-5. A four run rally behind Ray Starr in the sixth gave them a 7-4 decision in the second game.

Montreal entertained 11,000 by taking the measure of the Toronto Leafs and holding a virtual tie with Rochester for second place. In losing gave the Royals the opener 3 to 2 and second game, 6-3. Montreal won with four hits in 6 2-3 innings of the second game and the opener after first contest 9-7 while Baltimore Jersey City failed to take the second 4-2. Clancy and Outen of Jersey City hit a homer apiece in the opener.

Saturday's Games

Saturday's games in the International provided a division of honors in the Queen City, and single victories by Newark, Rochester and Montreal. At Toronto, of the Toronto Leafs, blanked the Montreal Royals 3-0 with five hits, but the opening game of a double-header was won by the Royals, 9-7, with a double and triple by Ernie Orsatti in the last half of the nightcap. Newark's Bears were extended 11 innings by Reading before the Keys succumbed 2-1. Colonels' pennant fans were treated with a flourishing slide home settling the issue. Rochester broke a strong finish with Manager Southworth's home run to defeat Buffalo 9-7, while Baltimore and Buffalo's Baltimore scattered the Jersey City rig and Kamm, Kamm, Delancey and homers and Jordan and Packard one each.

VICS CALLED TO PRACTISE

B. A. Fanning Willing to Foster Intermediate

B. A. Fanning, last year's president of the Belleville Victorias, has signified his willingness to help local intermediates this season and has issued a call to prospective players to attend the club's first practice at the Y.M.C.A. next Wednesday night of this week. Up to the present the possibilities of the Victorias operating this season as an intermediate club but Mr. Fanning announced Saturday night that he would sponsor intermediate baseball in Belleville this season. There are plenty of young players about town, who would make first class intermediates if they would but heed the call of the Victorias at their initial work-out on Wednesday evening.

The Victorias were league runners-up in the Trent Valley intermediate league last season only being eliminated by the Dunbar Moulders after a rather hectic play-off series. With the stars who graduated in the ranges of the Victorias turned out to be the mainstay of the players that Manager Gerow of the Nationals can farm out to them for early season games. They are able to field a first class intermediate team as represented in the Bay of Quinte League.

UPON REFLECTION

By R. H. Wilkinson

"It wasn't my fault," stormed Marie Hendrickson. "It wasn't! And I won't take the blame! That stupid old Bob Henderson wouldn't get on his own side of the road and I ran right into me—on purpose! I swerved like Dad used to, automatically, almost impulsively, as it was the last desperate attempt to save herself. Her black eyes were large.

"Don't be absurd, Marie," Tom Hendrickson reprimanded. "No man deliberately runs when he's driving long as Bob Henderson, is going to run into anyone on purpose—not even a woman," he added with a touch of bitterness in his tones.

"Well, I'm satisfied that it was no fault of mine," Marie answered stubbornly, ignoring the hint of the defensive in her attitude. It was this that aroused Tom's suspicions, prompted this interrogation. It wasn't like Marie to protest without doubt, even by her attitude, that she could be in the wrong. Tom and Tom engaged themselves in an argument.

"But good heavens, Marie!" Tom went on, "our car was found way over on the left hand side of the road. You must have been partly to blame."

"If my car was found where you say it was," Marie returned, "Bob Henderson knocked it there. I'm sure you, dear husband, I know right long friend, for that matter—of course, dear, but if you were in any way to blame, you would collect. I want you to admit it. It's no matter to me if Bob can collect from the insurance company, it's only fair that we shouldn't stand in his way. Leave it to the whole thing again," he pleaded. "Just where did you say the accident occurred?"

Marie sighed resignedly. "I've told you a hundred times, Tom. It was near the lake, between Mondon and Milford.

"There's an open stretch there," Tom said thoughtfully. "Really no excuse for an accident. It was close to sunset, wasn't it?" he asked.

"Yes, I remember distinctly. The sun was lovely," she replied coldly and curtly, and Tom was quick to see the sudden change in her expression.

"You were alone, of course," he said. "I remember now, You've been driving those two cars of yours since a week to look at it. You haven't watching the road!"

"I was! I was watching the road! I was watching the road! I was watching the road

GOVERNMENT

...ank with a view to revision of Bank act next year. The question of establishing a central bank in Canada will be studied. Connection reached by the commission will become the basis for study by the Banking and Commerce Committee of the House of Commons next session.

Postal Savings Interest

The government is prepared to cooperate with the chartered banks in lowering interest rates by reduction of the rate paid on postal savings deposits. The Finance Minister declared in favour of reduced interest rates on certain bank deposits.

"In my judgment," he said, "this reduction is a necessity if we are to reduce the interest rate of bank loans, on mortgages and on long-term bonds to a level where business recovery will be most effectively stimulated." He paid a tribute to the Canadian banks. "Under the impact of the severest financial storm that history records, our banking system has fully maintained its enviable reputation, meeting every demand upon it and retaining the fullest confidence of the public," was the Minister's assertion.

Canada can maintain her financial position "only by the maintenance of sound financial and monetary policies," Mr. Rhodes emphasized.

Inflation Dangers

"Much has been heard in recent months about inflation," he continued. "Some of the advantages claimed for inflation may seem alluring to industries harassed by falling prices and declining turnover, but let the sponsors of inflation never forget that apart from the other difficulties and dangers involved in their programme, one inevitable result would be a flight from our dollar, a withdrawal on a large scale of the capital invested by foreigners in this country in the form of securities and bank deposits. There are also to be considered internal reactions to any steps which might impair confidence in a country's currency."

"Against policies which might lead to such dangers, this government has resolutely set its face," he concluded.

Optimism characterized the declarations with respect to Canada's trade. While announcing a drop of $205,521,500 in the foreign trade of Canada for the 11 months ended February 28 last, as compared with the corresponding period a year ago, Mr. Rhodes found cause for congratulation.

"It is a matter of satisfaction that, under the great trading handicaps we have been so well maintained," he told the House. In 1922 Canada had won back her position of fifth trading nation of the world. In 1931 she had dropped to seventh. Also, he declared, the loss in dollar value of total trade was not so great for Canada as for other important trading countries.

For the 11 months just ended, the trade of Canada had amounted to $817,082,000, of which $372,421,000 were imports, $437,329,000 domestic exports, and $6,332,000 exports of foreign goods.

70 Millions Balance Trade

The favorable balance of trade (excess of exports over imports) Mr. Rhodes placed at $70,240,000. This he said, was a remarkable showing as compared with a favorable balance of $35,680,000 in the months of the previous year.

A trend toward increased trade with Empire countries as a result of agreements entered into at the Ottawa Economic Conference was noted by the Finance Minister. While stating that the tariff agreements entered into at that conference had been in effect only a few months, he said that "significant developments of the utmost importance to our trade with Empire countries are indicated."

Increase of Empire Trade

In the 10 months ended January 31 last imports from the British Empire were over 30 per cent. of Canada's total trade as compared with 25.23 per. cent. for the previous corresponding period. Exports to Empire countries in the same period were 44.34 per cent. of the total trade as compared with 37.94 formerly.

"In imports from the United Kingdom, the chief gains have been in textiles, coal, manufactures of iron and chemicals," the Minister said. "So far as exports to the United Kingdom are concerned, important increases are being registered in many products of the farm, forest and factory."

97 Millions Gold

Next to South Africa, Canada is now the largest producer of gold, Mr. Rhodes said, in discussing financial conditions in the Dominion. It is estimated that the production for the present calendar year will be $97,000,000.

With respect to the value of the Canadian dollar, the Finance Minister asserted that "it had been maintained at a moderate discount in terms of the United States dollar." It had been allowed to find its own level and as a result it has been fluctuating about the halfway between the United States dollar and the English pound." This might be a not unsatisfactory compromise between those of our national interest which would be benefitted by close and stable relations with sterling, and those on the other hand which would be seriously affected by any large and fluctuating discount in terms of New York."

THIRD DEGREE NOT APPLIED

Questioning Officer Denies Allegation Made At Court Martial

London, March 31 (AP)—An intimation that the third degree had been applied to Lieut. Hamish Baillie-Stewart when army officials at Aldershot, began an investigation of his alleged wrongful acts as a prisoner in Germany was the course of today's session of the young officer's court martial.

Lieut. Baillie-Stewart, an officer of the Seaforth Highlanders, is being tried on charges of betraying army secrets to a foreign agent.

Lieut. Col. F. N. Syms, who conducted the preliminary questioning of the accused officer, denied on the witness stand, however, that there was anything in the nature of a third degree in the course of this questioning, or even that Lieut. Baillie-Stewart was cross examined.

Lieut. Col. Syms was questioned at length by Lieut. Baillie-Stewart's counsel, Lieut. Col. Sir Edward Grigg, after the officer's explanation that £200 he had admitted having received from Berlin was in connection with a liaison he had with a young woman in that city.

He replied that he did not believe the explanation, "because I thought he was pulling me off with this story simply to please me." He added that he had been unable to learn any details as the story could be checked.

The courtroom was cleared early in the afternoon and the examination of further witnesses continued in Camera.

MARKET PERKS UP SLIGHTLY

Advance in Wheat is Also Considerable Favorable Influence

New York, May 23. — The stock market perked up a little today, after quietly absorbing a further sprinkling of liquidation in the morning.

Trading was still in small volume, but the ability of the market to hold fairly stationary during the past three sessions, in the face of continued cropping out of localized weak spots, was regarded as encouraging, and apparently prompted further retirement of short accounts. Another advance in wheat was also a favorable influence.

In the early afternoon trading, a number of issues pushed up a point or two above last week's final prices, including American Telephone, Allied Chemical, American Tobacco B, Business Machines, International Harvester, International Shoe, Pullman and Union Pacific. Also Atlantic Refining, Curtis Publishing, Du Pont, Kelvinator, Consolidated Oil Preferred and Texas Gulf Sulphur.

Industrial Rayon dropped more than three points, and Loew's, Public Service of N. J. and Southern Pacific-Manhattan Transit were moderately heavy. Liquidation of preferred issues continued, resulting in numerous losses of one to three points, with little traded issues.

The scattered selling that continues to flow into the market was attributed in brokerage quarters as coming from individual account, which for one reason or another are being liquidated. It was pointed out that selling of Industrial Rayon, following recent liquidation of Loew's, seemed to bear out this theory.

EXCHANGE RATES.

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Exchange rates at noon were as follows: Pound sterling in Montreal, 4.24¼; pound sterling in New York, 3.87¼; Canadian dollar in New York, 86½.

SESSION IS A QUIET ONE

Members of Exchange on Long Holiday Cause Lagging

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Pre-holiday feelings and absence of members and trading taking the long week-end resulted in a quiet session on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market in the forenoon today, with price action firm though confined.

Trading in higher-priced stock was limited to odd-lot transactions. Lake Shore turned over at $27.00, up 10, and Teck Hughes at $2.40, up a couple, though a few small blocks changed hands around noon at slightly lower prices.

Base Metal shares, while inactive, displayed a somewhat stronger tendency. International Nickel sold up at $5.80, Noranda 3 at $14.55 and Hudson Bay at around at 11.10. Steel of Canada, a cent to 13, recorded the only change in the oil section.

BANK SHARES ARE STRONGER

Nearly All Banks Have Risen, Some as Much as 5 Points

Toronto, May 22.—Stocks moved in a narrow range in typical pre-holiday trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Price changes were small, and for the most part unimportant.

A favorable factor was the strength in bank shares. Montreal added about five points, while smaller gains were recorded by most of the other issues, with the exception of Royal, which sold about a point lower.

Bell Telephone, Brazilian, and C. P. R. sold lower, but other Utilities were unchanged. Apart from the only industrial to change, gained half a point.

Beverage, mining and oil shares were practically unchanged.

Conditions in Turner Valley are reported today decidedly favorable for the building up of a varied clay products industry.

Tells of Sister of Service Work

Missionary activities of the Sisters of Service, the Catholic religious order especially dedicated to the work in Canada, and wholly Canadian in organization, was graphically brought to the attention of a large audience in St. Michael's Academy auditorium last evening at an illustrated lecture given by one of the Sisters. The lecture was under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League and many members were present, supporting sub-divisions were present for the occasion. The speaker was introduced by Rev. J. P. Nicholson, V.G.

The Sisters of Service, maintained largely by the Catholic Women's League, were organized ten years ago, their chief centre being Toronto, and their aim to care for new Canadians. Each boat is met by the Sisters who learn where Catholic immigrants are destined and get in touch with the parish priest or the league members there. Help and training are given the newcomers' spiritual welfare. Besides the new Canadian are given a "home away from home" for overseas girls who come there less to find employment than views of happy gatherings and May processions at the house were very interesting.

The work of the Sisters of Service is of special importance in the Canadian West, where they offer a helping hand to Catholics dwelling in isolated points far from church and friends, and in this regard the "Catechetical House" in Edmonton is of interesting interest. From this building in Edmonton are sent forth thousands of letters containing catechism lessons to children all through the west who are out of touch with the church and with churches. Six thousand children are reached in this way and through the correspondence lessons, their first contact with organized teaching of their religion is made and the little ones are prepared for First Holy Communion and Confirmation.

But the Sisters in charge of the Catechetic courses are expected not only to teach the children but act as an information bureau for their mothers and fathers to whom the letters from the Sisters are frequently the lonely settlers only link with others. The post office is also wanted as the Sisters are perhaps the only ones these far off Western areas receive.

The slides shown were most interesting illustrating many phases of the activities of the Sisters of Service. The view of the hospital and nurses at Vilna was of special appeal to Belleville and Sister Mary Marsh, R.N., a graduate of St. Michael's Academy, is the Sister Superior in charge of the institution.

The thanks of the audience for the splendid lecture was expressed by the president of the league, Mrs. Fitzpatrick.

Mail Delivery 19 Years Old

Nineteen years ago tomorrow, Victoria Day, 1913, the first mail citizens of Belleville, commenced for the delivery of mail to the doors and windows for the postman.

It was the first day upon which Belleville had been served by the homes of Belleville and it was indeed a great event.

Victoria Day in that year fell upon May 24, and it was celebrated on Monday, May 26—so it was a Monday-day when the postmen began their routes.

eleven o'clock in the morning the postmaster announced that all the attractive uniforms were ranged outside the Post Office and the post office, loaded with letters and papers and the men from on the city were assembled many promising send-citizens. A photograph was taken by D. Copeland, and Mayor Thompson, immediately after which the mail was delivered to each one of the letter carriers by Mr. E. Guss Porter, M.P., Mr. J. W. Bell, M.P.P. and Mr. Wesley Bullen, President of the Board of Trade. Three cheers were given and three hearty cheers for the King.

The first delivery was accomplished with much difficulty—letters and papers were stuffed into the mailboxes and it was indeed a great day looking at the men and women in the directory and in other sources of information.

However, the last carrier finished his route at eight thirty o'clock in the evening and the second to the one delivery that day.

The original letter carriers were:—C. H. Lloyd, H. Symons, S. W. Bird, G. A. Irvine, W. Clarke, Wm. Kinkham, M. Baker, R. C. Andrews, F. J. Bowen and P. O. Pitney. In addition to these A. Irvine, Claire Jenkins and Fred Bowen have passed on from this life of activity, but still members of the carrier staff. Soon after the system was inaugurated the following were added to the staff and have been in the service for years:—C. Burton, W. J. Holland, W. R. Hinchey and D. M. Farrell. Only Mr. Hay has been on the staff for about six years. Charles Jelfs for ten years, Charles Turner for two years, and L. R. Wannamaker for two years. The staff now numbers fourteen.

In the picture which was taken upon the post office steps are to be seen the likenesses of many well known and prominent citizens many of whom have since passed away.

Situation Looks None Too Good

TORONTO, May 23—(By the Canadian Press)—Unemployment in the eight major Canadian Industrial centres increased from 382,844 in January 1930, to 736,694 in March of this year, according to Dr. Otto E. Lang, who addressed the fourth annual meeting of the Canadian Welfare Conference Association here today.

"The situation in Canada looks worse than in England," he said. "Between February of this year the percentage of unemployment in-Great Britain stood at two per cent less; in Canada, the figure was 35 per cent less. During the last three years 16 per cent. of the total possible working time in this country has been lost as a result of unemployment."

The beautiful is not to be stared at, but to be lived with.

POLICE COURT

Several cases were heard in the local police court this morning before Police Magistrate Ponton. Yesterday morning, when Harold Goodwell appeared after being remanded for one week on a nominal charge of drunkenness, he was found in good physical condition it was thought wise that he should be under medical care for the next six months and therefore he was sentenced to serve three months' definite and not more than one year indeterminate in the Ontario Reformatory. Wm. Bayer appeared before His Worship being charged with intoxication. He owned youth and was pleaded guilty and the case was enlarged for one week sentence.

J. D. Sleeper also appeared before the bench charged with driving a car while under the influence of the Post Office. It appeared that the Provincial Police had also preferred the charge while driving a car in a manner dangerous on the King's Highway and in the city and upon evidence it appeared that he was not competent to drive. It was also pointed out by Constable Hart and Sgt. Major Harold McPherson, Capt. Hunter, Superior of Fisheries and Mr. A. Slack.

THREE MEN DROWN

Kingston, May 23—When their skiff capsized in the Cataraqui River on their way from a fishing trip off Bell's Island about 6 o'clock Saturday night, three members of a party of four were drowned and the other was saved.

The men drowned were: William A. Woods, aged 56, of 52 Bay St.; John P. Farrell, aged 36, of 20 Rideau St. and Angus McKenzie, aged 44, of No. 6 Victoria Terrace, Montreal Street. Travers Parslow who was saved, lives at 38 Concession Street.

The bodies of the three drowned men were retrieved, and efforts worked over them for over an hour in an attempt at resuscitation, but without success.

According to Parslow the skiff was upset as he was changing oars with Farrell.

The four men clung to the upturned boat for a time but when John Farrell, a non-swimmer, made a move to come in a rowboat not soon at the skiff was given, they found Parslow alive but the other three gentlemen gone.

Parslow was hanging on to the body of Woods, when the bodies of the other two men were found floating.

Once he had recovered from the ordeal, Parslow related that it was while he and Farrell were changing oars that the skiff turned over. All four occupants managed to get hold of the craft, but one by one, Mc-Kenzie, Farrell and then Woods were forced to let go, their fingers numbed by the cold, water.

Resuscitation Fails

The bodies were then brought to shore and Dr. Dawson who had been summoned worked on them. Coroner Dr. J. J. Gardiner, after hearing the circumstances of the case, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

All three men who were drowned were carpenters, and on Friday night had planned on fishing party which had a tragic ending.

William Woods had lived in Kingston for 40 years and is survived by his wife, three sons and two daughters.

Chesley Man Fatally Hurt

Owen Sound, May 23—C. W. Coles, teller of the Chesley branch of the Bank of Montreal, was instantly injured about the head in the accident on Saturday and had remained unconscious. Coles' car, which is a total wreck, was driven by his wife, three sons and two daughters.

Bronte Boy Drowns

Bronte, May 23—Becoming alarmed when the leaky rowboat in which he was going up the Twelve Mile Creek began to fill with water late Saturday afternoon, Harold Henshaw, aged seven, of Bronte, son of Fred Henshaw, leaped into the water and was drowned.

His body was not recovered for several hours.

The boy was in the boat with another lad, Harry Osborne, when it began to fill. Efforts to bale it out were unsuccessful. Henshaw in jumping into the water, tripped over a line in the boat and sank out of sight almost immediately.

Carl Cunningham and an unknown man were standing on a nearby bridge and they dived into the creek in an effort to locate the body. They were unsuccessful and then Cunningham took the other lad safely to shore.

One Dead, Two Hurt

Ottawa, May 23—Pinned in a right roadster which made a complete somersault and went about 90 feet after crashing into a motorcycle at a street intersection here Saturday evening, Phillip Blandford, 19, was so badly injured that he died less than an hour later.

His cousin, Albert K. Bailey, 19, of Camp Borden also was driver of the car, who escaped unhinjured, is on $5,000 bail following a technical charge of manslaughter.

Charles Dolan, 20, who was riding the motorcycle, is in hospital with a fractured left ankle and seriously bruised chest and head. Israel Wolf, who was sitting on the fender hurt, although both he and Dolan were thrown with the machine

The Tale of Shabbytown

It was a pretty little village when it first came into being, but that was when everything was new. But somehow or other, nobody seemed to care much about keeping it so. When approached on the subject, they always said: "We're so busy building a bigger town that we can't stop every little while to Clean-Up and Paint-Up."

But the funny part of it was the town failed to grow. It just stood stationary, and folks who came there visiting, with an eye to settling down, or opening a store, or building a factory, shook their heads and kept moving.

MORAL: Progress and Paint seem to go together.

Man Killed, Woman Held

Hamilton, May 23—Temporarily blinded, it is alleged, when a gust of wind blew a fur neckpiece across her face, Mrs. Florence Skerritt of Oakmount Road, Toronto, drove her car into Stephen Jacob, Hungarian gardener, on the Dundas Street Highway near Waterdown, Saturday night, the police say, and instantly killed him.

Traffic Officer Darby, following an investigation of the fatality, arrested Mrs. Skerritt on a charge of criminal negligence and later she was released by Magistrate Vance of Wentworth on bail of $5,000. Her trial was set for May 30.

The body of the victim was buried in Potter's Field, Toronto, where he was reported. He died instantly. The bicycle he was riding was demolished.

MOVIE AWARD MAY GO TO ENGLAND

Threat to Hollywood is Seen in Recent British Films

Will British be awarded the Academy of Motion Picture Arts' coveted award this year? Critics are speculating whether Matheson Lang's performance in "Carnival" will bring Lancashire's accolade to England, or the scope of this award is widened to include other studios than Hollywood, which seems likely in view of the fact that Hollywood no longer so completely dominates world production of films, the prophecy is made that Matheson Lang will bring the emblem of acting supremacy to England. British actors and actresses, including several outstanding Canadian stars, have helped make Hollywood famous.

"Carnival" which will be the attraction of the Capitol theatre for Kingston next week is likely to be ranked among the ten finest pictures of the year when the annual poll of critics is taken. Lang has given a fortune observer of screen topics reason to the likelihood of Hollywood storming Matheson Lang for his role in "Carnival," and says:

"I believe that Matheson Lang's performance in 'Carnival' is the outstanding screen portrayal these eyes have seen since Emil Jannings astonished us by his powerful acting. George Arliss is the only other actor I have seen who could dominate the screen, and I predict that Mr. Lang will receive his most serious rival for the title of 'the screen's finest actor.'"

In addition to Matheson Lang, the work of Dorothy Boucher will arrive a treat to her many admirers in Kingston. Miss Boucher is completely captivating.

In addition to superb acting, the production of "Carnival" is also notable for the quality of the lilting music that considerably enhances both story and action. Canadians will have their first glimpse of the musical skill of Ralph Brunis and his sweeping Europe with their unusual melody, Alfred Rode and his Gypsy Band were also heard throughout

"Three Women"

By Faith Baldwin

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Elizabeth turned and went out of the library. It was an odd thing about that room. She remembered that once a Christmas tree had stood there, in a corner near the hearth. Candles had burned on it, a silver star had guided the aspiring wings of an angel made of wax. She remembered that. It was almost as it now, as she turned back at the doorway, a dark room.

She plugged in the electric light and paused at the door of the nursery. The nursery had been Jane's room. Then Joyce lay in her little crib, kicking her bare pink feet her tumble was in her mouth, incorrigibly. Nanna, putting outdoor hannels and coats away, straightened her strong, old back and smiled at the girl in the doorway.

"She's just as good as gold, little Elizabeth. Can't see how she'll laugh if you but speak to her."

Elizabeth came, bent over the crib. White, ignorant blue eyes stared up into hers. She turned away her hair slipping from the pins fell, a straight veiling of sable gold. Joyce reached for it, with acquisitive hands and pulled happily as the enchanting fell.

"Nanna, how strong she is!"

"Yes, she's a handful." The old nurse chuckled and came to Elizabeth's side. "So like Master Lemont so like. I remember the day—"

"It's late, Nanna. I must go—"

Elizabeth turned. Stealthily her hair from the hurting little fingers and left the room. She fled along the hall as if pursued by endless reminiscences.

Curious, to recall that once she had been avid to know what Lemont had been like as a baby—how he had looked, how smiled, what antics he had been wont to do.

There in the room she had quitted, lay his daughter—his child. No one else—thought Elizabeth, almost running—if only she had looked like him. I could endure it. If she looked like me perhaps she might hate her too—

There were steps on the stairs. Elizabeth had reached her room. As she opened the door, shut herself in Louisa entered the nursery.

"Did I hear Mrs. Sheldon in her last nowt"

"Yes, ma'am, she stopped by for a moment."

Louisa bent over the crib. The eyes so like his, the little tunnel of ears, the baby hair, curly, pink, silky, dark hair, curly, pink, smooth, smiling. She picked the baby up in her arms, gently, almost casually, and sat down with her in a chair by the window. Nanna looked at her a moment—she could believe herself back, over twenty years. She stole silently from the room.

No, not a feature like the mother's. All Sheldon, all Lemont, such as she might.

Yet behind that rosy mask of infant flesh, deep in the unawakened eyes, would not Elizabeth wait, to recognize her? Some child had Elizabeth contributed to this child? How much?

It could be eradicated, thought Louisa, watched for.

If she had loved the father, her son, how painfully she loved his child. His flesh and blood. Of him. And yet not altogether his, here too, child of that hated mother, whose white skin and soft hands and characteristics could had robbed Louisa's son of honor and herself, Louisa of pride. If there was a mistake left to her, she felt, she must live it was to guard this child from her heritage, to hold her close, so close, and sheltered, so much her own, that nothing could touch her.

Lemont had been her own. She had lost him, for a little while. Then he had died. But she had found him again. This child she would make her own, this child she would keep.

This child would be a solace to her a living weapon.

Joyce struggled a little sat the arms which held her closed about her with an involuntary harshness. She whimpered a little, her face against that hard, flat breast.

There was nothing shy or timid about little Joyce Sheldon. But she was not a particularly precocious child, neither was she what her grandmother called, disapprovingly "forward". It was simply that she was quite friendly and had no fear. Her first six years were occupied in eating, sleeping, growing and exploring. She was possessed by a most insatiable curiosity. Healthy, not susceptible to the distresses and discomforts of childhood, she nevertheless engineered a series of accidents, quite cheerfully. A burned finger, a cut thumb a burned finger, even in her first year at school, a broken arm, she endured with stoicism and interest. She was gallant under pain, and extraordinarily taken by the apparent omnipotence of medical men. A day or two after her arm had been set she lay in bed, her little body plumply outlined under the sheets, her dark hair scattered over the pillows, her grandmother sitting by her, concluding the reading aloud of a children's story.

"Grandma—"

"What is it, Joyce?"

"When I grow up I'm going to be a doctor."

Mrs. Sheldon smiled. The child was always surprising her into a silent amusement.

"Indeed? And go into the medical profession—"

Joyce bounced in her bed, said "ouch!" more or less automatically, and turned eager eyes to her grandmother's.

"Oh, yes," she contradicted serenely. "Some me, Grandmother, but they do. Miss Howells was telling me—her sister's one."

Miss Howells was the nurse who had been called in, who at the moment was taking her hours off duty.

Mrs. Sheldon informed her grandchild—she never called down Joyce—"and women doctors have not the standing of men. That means, dear, they are not highly considered, or looked up to. They never will be, furthermore. It is hardly a profession open to gentlewomen."

"Don't want to be a gentlewoman!" muttered Joyce.

Mrs. Sheldon spoke severely.

"I am afraid you cannot help it." There was a hesitating step at the door. Elizabeth looked in.

"May I—"

She entered, sat down a little removed from the bedside, reached out to touch her daughter's hair with a shy, light hand.

"Is the pain very bad, dear?"

"No, Mother."

Mrs. Sheldon surveyed her daughter-in-law. It impressed her at almost instant, this aura of pale youth, which she carried with her. Of course Elizabeth was a lovely, lonely twenty-eight. but there was something about her—Mrs. Sheldon cast about in her ordered mind for the correct term and settled, rather ironically grim, upon virginal. Yes, Elizabeth had matured into a remarkably. Slim, blonde, a little colorless, a trifle remote, a saint on a picture postcard.

Elizabeth continued to question her child with a shy, fearful courtesy. She viewed Joyce as from a great distance. Her child—she had carried her in anguish, borne her in agony—hers. Yet she had never been able to feel any sense of possession. Perhaps one didn't, or was it because she, Elizabeth, lacked something? Or because of this interaction between them, this other woman to whom Joyce ran with all her little exploits?

Joyce was charming with her mother. Yet with the wholly unconscious mimicry of childhood she had picked up a shadow of her grandmother's attitude toward her. Joyce was never haughty with her mother, never answered back; treated her with a childish chivalry. Any bellies that Joyce fought in her pursuit of happiness were waged with the older woman. They were good enough friends for that, thought Elizabeth bitterly.

Presently she made some excuse and left them; she could not bear to be with them for any length of time. It hurt so intolerably to witness the companionship from which she was barred; to realise how futile she was, how inefficient. A real woman, she told herself a thousand times, would assert herself, demand her rights in the child.

When the door had closed behind her mother, Joyce turned to Louisa and resumed the attack.

"But I want to be a doctor!"

She like arguing with her grandmother. They rarely agreed but—well, there it was. Her grandmother always had time for her, always an explanation, a contradiction or an answer. Never, in all her little life had Joyce taken a problem to her mother. As quick as all intelligent children to pick up under-currents she knew quite well how unimportant her mother was in the household, how, as it were, on sufferance.

She and Grandmother had secrets from Mother.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

Joyce, passing out of babyhood into childhood, was more startlingly like her father, physically, than she would be again until she reached maturity. She had his eyes, his hair, his very gestures, and the feminine counterpart of his clean beauty of body relief temporarily, in the round chubbiness of childhood. There the likeness ended. Never a dreamy child was she was eager, alert; never a shy child, she was curious, gregarious—"forward", Nanna called the trait. Nanna, persistent and timid living with relatives, came often to see her nursling. The old woman was a little disappointed that Joyce was not like her father in temperament. "She don't care for learning the way he did," said Nanna.

Nanna was wrong; learning appealed to Joyce. She wanted to know everything. She read early; books would never be a problem with her—books were words, caged between covers, and there was a wide world beyond them to explore.

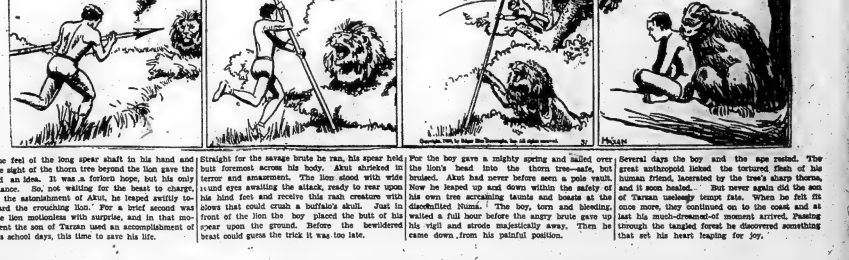
TILLIE THE TOILER

By Russ Westover.



BRINGING UP FATHER

—By George McManus.

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 31.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

The feel of the long spear shaft in his hand and the sight of the thorn tree beyond the lion gave the lad an idea. It was a forlorn hope, but his only chance. So, not waiting for the beast to charge, to the astonishment of Akut, he leaped swiftly toward the crouching lion. For a brief second was the lion motionless with surprise, and in that moment Tarzan used the last vestige of his school days, this time to save his life.

Straight for the savage brute he ran, his spear held butt foremost across his body. Akut shrieked in terror and amazement. The lion stood with wide jaws awaiting the attack, ready to rear upon his hind feet and receive this rash creature with claws that could crush a buffalo's skull. Just in front of the lion the boy placed the butt of his spear upon the ground. Before the bewildered beast could guess the trick it was too late.

For the boy gave a mighty spring and sailed over the lion's head into the thorn tree—safe, but bruised. Akut had never before seen a pole vault. Now he leaped up and down within the safety of his own tree screaming taunts and boasts at the discomfited Numa. The boy, torn and bleeding, waited a full hour before the angry brute gave up his vigil and strode majestically away. Then he came down from his painful position.

Several days the boy and the ape rested. The great anthropoid licked the tortured flesh of his human friend, lacerated by the tree's sharp thorns, and it soon healed.— But never again did the son of Tarzan uselessly tempt fate. When he felt the once more, they continued on to the coast and at last his much-dreamed-of moment arrived. Passing through the tangled forest he discovered something that set his heart leaping for joy.

ALL EYES ON THE CAPITOL CARNIVAL NOW

The terrific success of "Sunshine Susie" which is being run for a fourth week at the Uptown in Toronto, and for which a booked for a short time at the Capitol Theatre exhibition at the Capitol Theatre early in June, evidences the ever increasing popularity of British films.

Without undue stress on the talker obsession, "I told you so," an article on the quality and future of British films written by Manager Holmes of the Capitol Theatre appeared in an issue of the Ontario Intelligencer some months ago. Predictions made then by Mr. Holmes are materializing with a gratifying degree of perfection. The first evidence of this was the popularity of the box office reaction of "Michael and Mary," when we receive the second of the 1932 product from the Gaul Company in "Carnival."

"CARNIVAL."

"Carnival" has everything desired in entertainment and that "everything" is delightfully blended, that the net result is "Masterpiece" and everything that goes to fully justify the word.

"Carnival," with its costly production of the days of the Merry Monarch in Venice, the gayest city in the world, with its wealth of interwoven plot for its wonderfully spectacular setting.

"Carnival" is superb in acting. Jessie Matthews, Sonnie Hale and Lang, one of the world's most famous actors, have never handled better known as "Chili," actress since she made her debut as one of the English stage; Joseph Schildkraut, a powerful actor with whom the better known smooth vanishing type of American actors not possibly hope to compare.

"Carnival" has a story which has no equal, containing, as it does, dancing, palace, comedy, gaiety romance, love and romance, all with a real twist.

"Carnival" as a production, commands credit of directorial genius. A background of beautiful scenes is given us in the wonderful and splendacious spectacle of abandoned gaiety and revelry, the fortune of the Bellevue Theatre management to present on the screen.

"Carnival" has a chance to hear the orchestra which is the regular Capitol Theatre feature, played a command to appear before the King. Alfred Rode and his Gypsy Band, whose members are collected from the most inconceivable country in the world, and each and every member a master of his own instrument. When you have heard Alfred Rode and his Gypsy Band, you will feel an inferiority to any responds to the performance of mankind.

"Carnival" the superb, play at the Capitol Theatre today and Tuesday daily at 2.45, 7.15 and 9.00.

"SKY BRIDE" ROMANTIC STORY STUDDED WITH REAL LAUGHS

"Sky Bride", a romantic adventure story, now becomes a thrilling motion picture aviation melodrama. Paramount has taken John Blythe's original aviation story and transformed it into a gripping portrayal of how a "third man" regains his lost courage and wins the love of the girl he adores. This picture depicts the hair-raising stunts of barnstorming aviators flirting with death, as they put over their stuff in an air circus, a popular holiday and county fair feature of a few years ago.

According to Captain E. H. Robinson, aviation technical expert, stunt flying, as shown in "Sky Bride", requires the highest degree of courage and flying ability.

Director Stephen Roberts, a former army aviator and stunt flyer himself, knows the air circus game from experience. He revealed in his direction of "Sky Bride" that he still minds him of his own stunting days of yesteryear.

Richard Arlen, who, with Virginia Bruce, Jack Oakie, Charles Starrett and Robert Coogan, features in "Sky Bride," feels greatly refreshed by the role of the aviator. It revives his memory of "Wings", and the daring days when he was flying for real entertainment.

During the months we were on location in Texas filming "Wings" we had our fun with flyers," Arlen said. "The pilots who contributed most to the picture were those who loved to fly, and they thought people were crazy of them."

In reminiscing about air pictures, Arlen referred to Captain Robinson, who actually trained and doubled Lindbergh. Robinson just recently supervised all of the air scenes in "Hell's Angels," the cash because of the hazardous air thrills the picture will feature.

"Robbie," as Captain Robinson is best known, can't keep away from flying tag with the clouds," said Arlen.

The film city has cradled many of the country's most daring and most skilful aviators.

Art Goebel, first flyer to span the wide expanse of water from California to Hawaii, did all of his early flying in Hollywood. He made the first throw from West Hollywood. He was a member of a famous band of stunt flyers known as the "Black Cats," a barnstorming troupe of daredevils. Goebel did a lot of thrill flying for the films, as did Frank Clarke, another of the Black Cats, who has made a big name for himself as a stunt flyer.

Assisting Robinson with the air scenes for, "Sky Bride" were five of the most daring of the pilots now flying for the films, Ira Reed, Earl Crosby, Clint Hetherego, Jack Dunn and O. C. Le Boutillier.

Today, in Hollywood, there are only sixteen authorized and licensed film flyers, all members of the Association of Motion Picture Pilots. Requirements for entrance into this organization are extremely rigid, and a pilot must demonstrate his ability before he will be considered for membership.

Richard Arlen, a former member of the Royal Flying Corps, knew to fly, and is entirely at home in his "Sky Bride" role of a daredevil pilot, temporarily out of luck, who joins a troupe patterned after the old Black Cats.

"Sky Bride" will be presented at the Belle today and Wednesday, starring with "Hollywood Luck", a funny comedy with scenes laid in the motion picture studios of Hollywood, Metro Newsreel and Screen Souvenirs, showing amusing interesting events of the last thirty years.

Came to Office.

"On the 16th of March he came into the office with Maggie Sampson. I gathered they had been discussing the situation and were coming to live with him for the rest of his life. Their relations were most cordial. He had heard of settling house in Winnipeg."

Q. "Did he make any opinion of her as a housekeeper?"

A. "He apparently seemed as if he was well pleased."

"They made no monetary agreements that I know of."

"I don't saw Mr. Taylor some time previous to that. He told me that he would build it, or who understood it?"

"No."

"You don't know much about the barn, the wife, Mr. Taylor's affairs generally, do you?"

"No."

"John Taylor said he was a neighbor of the late John Taylor.

"Mr. Taylor joined him on the sidewalk below. That was the last time I saw him."

"What was his attitude towards his relatives?"

No Discontent.

"He never mentioned any discontent with me until 1930, when he came in in September, 1930, he was discontented with his relatives."

"He never mentioned any discontent with me until 1930, when he came in in September, 1930, he was discontented with his relatives."

"In the two wills that I drew, he did not make any bequest to charities in friendly terms, except in the case of Maggie. Murphy also had a son but he gave her mother the money."

Speaking of these interviews, and transactions did you ever have any conversation with Mr. Taylor?"

"Not very much other than being introduced. Mr. Butler asked:

"Did you ever have any conversation with reference to John Taylor?"

"Grandsons on friend."

The case of the estate of the late John Taylor, was resumed Saturday morning before Judge Deroche, Kathleen Murphy.

Mrs. Murphy early gave Kingston as her home, declared acquaintanceship with John Taylor, late Taylor and stated she had nursed him after losing previous illness. John Taylor was a single man, she stated, and Joseph Taylor was an uncle.

Miss Gladys Taylor, Taylor had declared his friendliness towards Maggie Sampson, and had helped him the farm. But, she said, he declared that was all he was going to do. Miss Taylor said that banking book belonging to John Taylor, Belleville, stated the banking books were found in the office of Mr. Carmean.

One time, witness stated, her grand uncle had declared in Mr. Sampson's office that he was not leaving, Mr. Taylor had put his affairs in the hands of Mr. Carmean and declared that he (Carmean) would look after his affairs. The future he would have any legal business with. Miss Murphy stated that Mr. Taylor was taken ill while attending his affairs, but was taken home safely.

Mr. Herrington asked— "How old was Mr. Taylor?"

"Almost every day."

"What do you mean by that? What was the nature of these meetings?"

"Just sat on my work around the farm and house."

Question of Letter

"Do you know Mrs. Sampson?"

"Do you know how she came to visit Mr. Taylor?" "John Taylor got me that Robt. Young had written to her to come down. When she came down my grandmouse was very glad she came."

"During those latter days you visited John Taylor, did you notice?" "He was worried. He told me once that Robt. Young had not been to see him for many years, now they were all coming, they were trying to get control of his money."

Mr. Butler took up the examination of witness and brought statements from Miss Murphy that she had had conversations with Mr. Taylor's words with Joseph Taylor.

Miss Murphy said she ever say to Joseph Taylor, after one row, that Joseph had been to see him for many years?" "I can't remember any such statement."

Under questioning of notes entered, Witness claimed that once, when there were callers at the home of Mrs. Macyrtle, some time in the year 1930, Mr. Taylor referred her presence if she would secure some of the notes, Joseph Taylor held.

Mrs. Murtel English, Mrs. Murtel English testified she was related to the late John Taylor through distant connections. A conversation was held by Mr. John Taylor in the farm, during the course of a business in Belleville. She remarked that her husband would some day be executor. Witness stated that Mrs. Sampson had remarked from time to time that Maggie had been a good housekeeper. When things were not right, Mrs. Sampson would go off in a corner and sing. At one time Mr. John Taylor, relative to witness, stated that the differences affairs had been settled to his satisfaction.

"Did he ever speak of deposit?"

"Yes, he said once that nobody had gotten all he was going to get."

Mr. Butler:—"Did John Taylor have any business with everybody?"

"I would not say so."

Mr. Butler:—"He told you he had settled with everybody satisfactorily? That was in August wasn't it?" "Yes he said everything was settled to his satisfaction."

Witness was then questioned by Mr. Herrington as to her knowledge of certain letters and a telegram sent to Mrs. Sampson in Winnipeg, and if John Taylor had ever referred to such to conversation with her, himself. She knew nothing of these herself. John Taylor had told her that Mr. Taylor had never sent a telegram to Mrs. Sampson in Winnipeg. He and Mrs. Sampson sisters were sent of which he knew nothing.

Mr. Butler:—"Did you ever hear him say anything about Mrs. Sampson?" (A) "Yes, he said Mrs. Sampson would go away and sing."

Singing After Complaint.

Witness brought out in further testimony that the singing occurred after some complaint. Mr. Taylor had made to Mrs. Sampson.

Mrs. Eggleton further testified on question from Mr. Butler that "Mr. Taylor had the utmost confidence in her husband and myself". "I have known him very intimately since our marriage." Mrs. Taylor never asking us to do any particular business for him."

Mrs. Margaret Sampson was the next witness to take the stand and after taking oath was examined by Mr. Herrington.

Testifying she said she was daughter of Mr. Taylor's sister, up to a year she had lived in Winnipeg where she had conducted a rooming house. She had lived in the West 24 years and returned to Mr. Taylor's home in December, 1930. The reason for her return was that she had been informed by her sister-in-law of her husband's bereavement (the death of John Taylor's brother) and after writing him a letter of sympathy, she received a reply from him. She left Winnipeg. December 18, 1930 and went to her uncle's (John Taylor's) home first, though she had often visited a day or two. The next day she had been met at the station by Joe Taylor on this occasion. Had remained there until July 13 following 30th of March, though originally intending to stay only between Christmas and News Years, but did not do so, owing to the barrier been taken ill. Her uncle had made her a proposition to remain and care for him and look after the house her all he had. Her uncle had been ill and had affectionate attitude toward her.

Arrangements were that she was to receive $30 a month, nipeg sell her boarding house business and live with him. She had previously been in Belleville on her return ticket to Winnipeg which had been extended as her stay was prolonged, and her uncle had asked her to stay. She had come to Melrose after her business in the west had been cleared up.

Mr. Herrington read letters and a telegram (and marked as exhibits) from Mrs. Sampson, in 1931. One letter advising her of conditions in the west, and another advising her to come. The remainder purporting to be from her uncle asking her to come. That the telegram back knowing and was receiving of stating that she had not been asked him about the telegram or letters. Mrs. Sampson stated about it." relative to the letters she had received at Winnipeg signed Arthur English and Mrs. Taylor, uncle had told her "he knew nothing about them." She had remained at her uncle's home until 1931.

Made Up Her Mind

The old gentleman's mental condition was discussed, and how at times, sometimes, other times he had clearly spells.

How—Some late Mr. Taylor was 84 years old when he died.

To honor the memory of Belleville's sons, citizens turned out in thousands to the new War Memorial Park. Over five thousand were in attendance and a parade in charge of fours, which extended in length from the upper bridge to the corner of Bridge and Front streets, marched from the Armouries to the park. The finest and most representative parade seen in Belleville in years. It was a Belleville day through and through, those taking part in the procession were of Belleville, and the ceremony at the memorial was carried out by Belleville men. Had a person been searched for throughout Canada he could have delivered no finer or more suitable oration than that given by our own clergyman, Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., M.C. Representatives of the other churches of the city took part in the ceremony, Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and Rev. G. O. Wright of the Church of England, Rev. Dr. Seymour of the Presbyterian Church, and Rev. R. Hall of the United Church.

Veterans Pay Honor.

The veterans of this city were in attendance in hundreds to pay honor to their fallen comrades. Never since their return from overseas have they in such numbers, as a unit, joined in any ceremony. About two hundred and fifty were on the parade, while others unable to march were at the park.

As marshal of the parade, Lt. Col. Dave Barrager had called for the assemblage of the various units at the armouries by 9.15 a.m., and they were there taking up the space assigned to them by that time, and at 9.30 promptly the head of the parade moved off, Major R. A. Gilmore as aide to Col. Barrager, saw to it that each unit took its proper place and moved to fall in at the proper moment. There was no hitch or time lost in all the management of the procession was admirable.

The Parade.

Headed by the Argyll Pipe Band, Lt. Col. Barrager and Mayor Tice led the procession followed by the ex-commanding officers of Belleville military units, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., M.C.; Col. R. E. Graham, Lt.-Col. Roy Riordon and Lt.-Col. Ponton. The members of the city council was next and following came in order of the parade was the R.C.A.F. Detachment, 34th Battery, Argyll Light Infantry, Veterans, Belleville Principal Band, Sea Cadets, B.C.I. and V.S. Cadets, Field Battalion, Ontario Regiment Deaf, Queen Mary School, Salvation Army Band, Queen Alexandra School.

The most interesting part of the procession, to many, was the part taken by the pupils of the Ontario School for the Deaf, who in their gay and uniform dress and splendid marching brought forth favorable comment on all sides.

On arriving at the park no time was lost, each part of the parade taking up its allotted space. Under direction of Major R. D. Ponton, K.C., with R. S. M. Jordan, M.C., D.C.M., M.M. as assistant, everything possible had been arranged there to avoid confusion and their plans worked out most satisfactorily.

5,000 In Assemblage.

An assemblage of five thousand and more, reverently followed the order of service as carried out as follows:

"O Canada".

NOW WORKING ON FOXBORO-MADOC RD.

Preliminary work for the construction of the permanent road between Foxboro and Madoc is now in full swing. Just south of Madoc and at intervals along the road, gangs of men have been laboring with drills and crowbars breaking and chipping the huge boulders and rock which line along the line of the new widening. Post holes for the new fences are being dug, teams and scrapers are at work levelling and scraping the high knolls level with the grade, and rock crushers grind and roar as they spout the crushed stone into the waiting wagons and plume-clouds of dust into the air. A considerable force of road men along the stretch of road have found employment on this construction work.

FEW COMPLAINTS MADE BY POLICE

The quietest 24th of May for years was the opinion this morning of the city police force who commented on the fact that few complaints were registered against the indiscriminate use of firecrackers and fireworks by the younger folk of the city. This view was shared by Fire Chief William Lynch, who pointed to the fact that a minimum of two calls were received by the force. Both were insignificant smouldering, of small origin and were not traceable to firecrackers.

The fine evening added a beautiful pyrotechnic displays were observed in the residential district of the city, but they were not as numerous as they had been in other years. Casualties from the use of the burning powder contained in the firecrackers were confined to some fingers and small holes burned in the clothes of the youngsters.

THINK RUDDER DROWNING MAN

Excitement Caused By Drifting Boat Near Bay Bridge

Great excitement prevailed amongst several residents on the Front Street Tuesday afternoon when a skiff was seen by them to be floating out from the mouth of the waves on the bay, at a considerable distance between the pump house and the bay bridge, and clinging to its stern there appeared to be a boy or a man. A call was sent to the city police department and the officers were quickly upon the scene. After some slight delay a boat was obtained and the officers were soon to the rescue. The floating boat had been sighted from the Prince Edward shore and rescuers had put out from that shore in haste. The city police, however, arrived first and greatly to their relief they found that what they had thought might be a person hanging on to the boat, fearful that a slip of the moment would be washed away or be compelled through fatigue to relinquish his grip and go down, was only the rudder of the boat.

Quite a run was running at the time and as the boat was being towed ashore, the rudder gave every appearance of a person holding fast to the stern.

The skiff was found to be the property of Mr. George Graham and it had become free from its moorings at Mr. Graham's water front. The police officers rowed the skiff to the city and turned it over to the owner.

BEACH REPLACES SHIP GRAVEYARD

(By The Canadian Press)

BOOMTOWN, Mass.—Many of the East Boston water-front fi in two parts—"before" and "after." Instead of old timbers, rusty irons and decaying ribs of hulks of abandoned ships there will soon be a beach of glistening white sand for the safety and happiness of all the children in the neighborhood.

Off and on, the people of East Boston, living near the docks and bridges, have fetched their pails and hoes and wheelbarrows down to the waterfront to do a little beautifying themselves. Frank Flaherty, who has always lived in their district, decided the best thing to do would be to make a bathing beach where the water was shallowest. The men of the neighborhood, working without pay, have started to cart away the debris and when this work is completed, the Port Authority will level off the area, which is naturally a sandy beach. With further assistance from the Boston Port Development Commission, which owns the land on which the useless ships were beached, Boston Sand and Gravel Company, which offers sand at a cheap rate and free trucking to the beach, and the City of Boston, through the efforts of City Councillor William H. Barker, a shore of shining sand will emerge from the chaotic jumble of hulks and planks now oddly asserted levels.

"The Port Authority," states a Boston newspaper, "was not created to make neighborhood beaches. But it has had an appropriation of some $45,000 to remove the old hulks that have been making the waterfront of East Boston and Chelsea Creek an eye-sore for years. With this it has done much, putting unemployed men to work, blasting out the ancient ships that were beached years ago and left to rot in the sun and storms. It hopes to get more money shortly, on an emergency measure, perhaps $100,000 to continue cleaning up the waterfront removing the debris that could be touched with the original appropriation."

The clearing out of sixteen old hulks, for years a menace to the health of the neighborhood, a breeding place for rats and a danger to the children who used to play among them was some of the original work of the Port Authority. Mr. Flaherty and his helpers started and proceeded to get others interested in his beach idea. The removal of rocks and old rotten wood, and the levelling of the beach will all be done as a generous gesture by the neighborhood.

Petitions Against Oiling to Receive Attention of City Council Committee

$3,500 to Be Expended to Beautify Filtration Plant Grounds

THREE BY-LAWS

Water Meters Put in Schools and Hospital to Reduce Pumpage

Slight opposition was noted at the council meeting on Tuesday night, when a recommendation was passed to improve and beautify the grounds about the Filtration plant involving an amount of some $3500. A few of the members took exception to this expenditure, believing that the money could be spent otherwise, but Alderman Bennett, chairman of waterworks, championed the scheme and after a vote was taken, it was found the measure went through. Alderman Bennett explained that over 50 per cent of the money suppended would be used for labor. Ald. Inniss was against the project, stating it seemed like a lot of money at this time and Alderman Woodley agreed, simply because it was a blanket order with no definite amount set. After the insertion of a clause in the recommendation that the work be not to exceed $2500.00, the chairman fell in line with the majority. Ald. Inniss and Ald. Woodley stood out purchased as it was found that seeding would not result in the result as the water would run down when it rains and wash the seed out of the ground, Alderman Woodley was in favor in as much as the Waterworks Department believe they could take care of the expenditure without increasing the general rate.

Objection to Meters

The Waterworks Department were again under fire later in the evening when Alderman Inhabi objected to the placing of water meters in the schools and the impression to be too high and that it would decrease the revenue now received from this source. Again Alderman Bennett believed the move to be the best interest as it would reduce pumpage and prevention of the filtration plant and give the schools a better service. "It is either a case of conserving the supply or raising the rates," said Alderman Bennetts and "the Board of Education believes now that the metering of the school to be in the best interest."

It was decided again to oil a number of streets in the city, although there are two contracts existing against this work proceeding this year on certain streets. Alderman Donahue, chairman of Public Works stated to the meeting that it was time to oil to preserve their streets, oiling was the only method and showed that by consistent oiling, that the road would stand up long after the guaranteed life of the particular piece. The liquid asphalt will be purchased from the Imperial Oil Company and the oiling is to be done by the Municipal Road Sprayings and Paving, the same as in other years under the supervision of the City Engineer and the chairman of Public Works. A committee consisted of Alderman Marshall, White, Bennett, Morgan, Donahue and the City Engineer was appointed to inspect the streets on which petitions have been received not to oil.

Wiring Completed

A hydro electric certificate of inspection, which was satisfactory, has been received by the council in respect to the wiring recently completed by the Finn Electric Company and the approval of the chairman of Market and City Property, Alderman Marshall, has been given and the council ordered that the amount of the under $377.80 be held to the Finn Electric Company after receipts are received from the companies from which supplies were purchased, Aldermen Donahue, Bennett and Armstrong were appointed a committee to confer with the Canadian National officials respecting the protection at Grier Street crossing. A letter was received from Mrs. J. A. McFee requesting the playgrounds but Alderman Bennett stated that this matter was left by the Board of Education and the communication was referred to that organization for their consideration and action.

A letter was also received respecting the legalizing of sweepstakes in Canada, to say that the money now going out of the country for these lotteries might be kept at home and used for a purpose. The council concurred in the resolution, Aldermen Sprackett, Morgan, Bennett and White voting against. There was no discussion on the matter. A report was received by the committee appointed to confer with the Curling Club re the moving of the Curling rink to the fair grounds, they stating that it was prohibitive and on motion the report was filed. The committee on the Suburban Road matter also reported and it was their belief that College Street from the Madoc Road to the Cannifton Road should be taken over by the Suburban Area Commission.

Petitions Granted

Petitions were received from residents requesting that sidewalks be put in certain sections of the city. One petition asked for a walk on Dufferin Avenue from the south side of Lot 24 to the north side of Lot 26. This petition was fully signed and the council granted the request. The other was for a walk on Bleecker Avenue from Bridge St. to Queen Street and this was referred back to the City Engineer and Clerk for checking.

Three by-laws were presented and passed in the regular way. One called for the borrowing of $25,000.00 for the two public improvements built last year, one for $20,000.00 for the two bridges and one for an agreement between Harold Wheeler and the City for the collection of garbage in the city.

The council will consider the estimates on Thursday night and there being no more business the council will adjourn immediately that time. Those present were Mayor Tice, Aldermen Woodley, Hill, Donahue, Bennett, Sprackett, Brickman, Inhabi, Morgan, Foster, Marshall and Armstrong.

Edgar H. Cook Back From World Labor Conference, Interviewed

VISITS CITY

Canada Not Bound to United States By Labor

Mr. Edgar H. Cook, second son of the late Mr. Purdy Cook, has been in the city for a few days visiting his sisters Miss Elizabeth Cook and Mrs. James Finn, Charlotte street Mr. Cook is on his way home to Winnipeg from Geneva, Switzerland, where he represented the Department of Labor of the Federal Government as a delegate to the International Labor Conference, which was in session from April 12 to May 1. Mr. Cook's report of the conference will not be made public until after he has reached Winnipeg, when he will prepare it and forward it to the Department of Labor at Ottawa.

Progress Fee Relief

"I may say, he-ever," remarked Mr. Cook, "that the programme for unemployment relief, which is put into operation in the building and forward and constructing public works, was the same as advocated and adopted by the great labor leaders of France, Belgium and Germany as a palliative solution to the unemployment situation in the construction of a highway from the Baltic Sea to the Mediterranean.

25 Millions Idle

"Statistics, which were considered, showed that there were 25,000,000 unemployed people in the world —including the 12,000,000 people employed in the United States, which country was not represented with the fifty-one countries represented at the conference. Resolutions were brought forward and adopted at the conference calling for increased co-operation among the countries of the world to solve this unemployment problem and it was manifested at this conference that the conservative, employers and workers' delegates were co-operating to remedy this serious situation.

Eyes to London

"I feel that as Canada is a nation in the Commonwealth of nations within the British Empire, and as its fortunes are tied to the British Empire, that we should accept that position and turn our eyes to London, where the fact-facing, far sighted wisdom and statesmanship is fast re-creating the basis for renewed Great Britain of her former position as the centre of the world's industry, commerce and finance.

Canada Not Bound

"If ever there was a time when Canadian business and labor needed to realize that it is not bound hand and foot to the country south of the border it is now. Canada today is the bright spot on this side of the world and Great Britain is the bright spot on the other side."

Mr. Cook is intensely interested in all labor problems and all movements made to better the existing conditions in the interests of labor. He is engaged in working on the formation of a system of uniformity of social legislation applying to provinces.

Mr. Cook left Belleville in the year 1906 and went to Western Canada in the service of the Canadian Northern Railway, which he became associated with the Grand Trunk Pacific and he is in the employ of the Canadian National Railways, since the amalgamation. He has been railroading for twenty-five years and enjoys the confidence of those over him in the service and also of those associated with him in the employ of the company. The fact that he was sent by the Department of Labor at Ottawa as a delegate to the Labor Conference at Geneva, shows the high regard entertained for him by the labor interests in this Dominion.

Interest in City

Mr. Cook is glad to be back in his old home town for a few days and has been expert astonished on visiting many of the old places

HOCKEY STAR HIT ON HEAD

Howie Morenz Surprises Burglar in Home of Relatives

Montreal May 25—Unsensional bandages last night were wrapped around the head of Howie Morenz, reteoric centre of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League Howie was cut and bruised early yesterday when an gunman brought the butt of his revolver down across the hockey player's head, inflicting painful injuries.

Morenz grappled with the bandit, who was lurking in the home of Mrs. W. Stewart, Howie's mother-in-law. After a brief scuffle, in which the intruder shed his overcoat to break away from Morenz's grip, the bandit escaped. Here is Silent.

Morenz, who is as noted among sports followers for his modesty as for his speed and ability, could not be induced to describe the affray, but an account of the incident was gathered from police.

Mrs. Stewart spent Sunday evening at Morenz's home, and early in the morning Howie drove her home. Mrs. Stewart lives on the Lake Road, and preceded Howie into the house. Switching on the light in the front room, she was faced by a tall man who covered her. Behind a door and pointed a revolver at her, demanding money. Morenz entered, telling the intruder he should not bauble a revolver so carelessly.

While talking in a matter-of-fact manner, Morenz suddenly overtook him and, pulling the overcoat down over his arms and partially trussing him up. The man worked an arm free and slashed the hockey player several times over the head and temple. He then wriggled out of the sleeves of his coat and left a last blow at Morenz, and fled.

RUSH TRIAL OF JOHN H. CURTIS

'Jafsie' Appeals to 'John' to Return Money Paid

Hopewell, N. J., May 25. — The State of New Jersey will be ready today to rush the indictment and trial of John Hughes Curtis, 72-year-old Bronx, for his bogus negotiations in the Lindbergh kidnapping mystery.

His case will be called when the grand jury tomorrow morning. Although authorities hope to avoid calling Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as a witness, the flyer's name is known to testify at the trial if Curtis is indicted and such testimony is required. He was on board the Nelly.

Prosecutor Anthony Hauck, Jr., decided to proceed at once against Curtis after conferring with Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the State police.

Meanwhile, at Becket, Mass., Dr. John F. Condon, the "Jafsie" who paid the $50,000 ransom to swindlers, hoped for a reply to an appeal he made to "John". This was the name given by the gang who got the money in a Bronx Cemetery.

"John, money I gave you is useless," the appeal said. "You can't get rid of it. Return it to Dr. Condon bergh in time. Get your $23,000 reward."

The reward was issued by the State of New Jersey in a proclamation issued yesterday.

J. J. WALKER OF NEW YORK TO FACE PROBE

Income of New York's Mayor to Be Under Scrutiny

BRIBERY HINTED

Many Instances Mentioned of Mayor Receiving Gifts

New York, May 25. — James J. Walker will meet Samuel Seabury face to face today in a verbal duel that may affect the political life of the United States.

The eyes of the nation will be focused on the bar of the Hofstadter legislative investigation when the dapper Mayor of New York at last confronts the grim-faced prosecutor with an explanation of his financial dealings in the past six years, and a denial of charges of graft and corruption in the municipal administration.

Newspapers have repeatedly forecast that Seabury's probe would constitution Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, a leading candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, to remove Mayor Walker, on the ground of misconduct in office, more than a year, and that the Governor will display his prestige before the Democratic national convention meet next month.

Governor In Quandary.

Governor Roosevelt is politically in a quandary. He has been faced with a delicate decision if he is called on to take action. If he should unseat Mayor Walker he would face increased enmity from Tammany Hall; if he should not he might lose the support of some of his followers elsewhere.

Mayor Walker, whose income tax returns for the years 1926, 1928, 1930 and 1931 are under scrutiny by Federal authorities, faces the following principal accusations:

That he accepted a $26,333 gratuity, in the form of bonds, from a Wall Street house which was financing a lucrative traction merger in favors of the city administration.

That he paid for many of his expenses on a European trip in 1927 with a $13,000 letter of credit purchased by an agent of his interests planning a monopoly of New York City's surface transportation.

Theatre Company Mentioned.

That he received $15,000 for "special legal services" from a theatre-holding corporation which employed regular counsel.

That payments made to his brother and his missing accountant by a salesman were exactly half the commissions paid the latter for the sale of equipment to city departments.

That he condoned the disappearance of Russell T. Sherwood, accountant, who transacted the Mayor's business for six years up to August, 1931.

That he was the "boy friend" of State Senator John A. Hastings, "political contact man" between Wall Street financiers and the administration.

While official confirmation was lacking, United States Attorney George Z. Medalie and Hugh McQuillan, Internal Revenue Officer in the city's district, were understood to be delving into the Mayor's income tax returns for the past four years of his term, with particular interest in the $26,333 gift of bonds in 1928 from J. A. Stato and Company.

STICK UP MEN ROB GAMBLERS

Montreal Joint Raided and Patrons Lined Against Wall

Montreal, May 25.—Hold-up men took $4,000 in cash from 60 patrons of a gambling establishment in Cote St. Michel yesterday.

Eight men surprised the gamblers at play. Two revolvers flashed into sight and the sixty gamesters were lined against the wall. The intruders produced a burlap bag, which was placed in the centre of the floor, and the guests were made, one at a time, to drop their cash into the sack. No jewelry or watches were taken.

HAY BAY RESIDENT IS THROWN FROM BOAT

Ellis Huffman's Body Has Not Been Recovered

Napanee, May 25.—Ellis Huffman only son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Huffman of Hay Bay, was drowned a short distance east of Huffman's Island, on Hay Bay, shortly after 7 o'clock on Monday evening. Constable Armour of Toronto ,the driver of the overturned boat, is safe.

The accident took time when he was rescued by Wilbur Hagerman, Harold Hagerman, two brothers, who were fishing near by, and who witnessed the accident. The boat, owned by C. E. Smith of New Bedeville, N.Y., was one which had started out for a spin a little before 7 o'clock. Besides Constable Napanee who were ascending the holiday at Dickson's Farm, which is on the opposite shore, noticed the boat, and estimated the speed at about 35 miles an hour. It is thought the men were thrown out while the boat was rounding a curve. The boat continued on its way, and when near the shore on Dickson's Farm pushed a 20-foot boat, after which it took fire. The fire was soon extinguished by the parties on shore. Huffman's body has not been recovered as yet. Grapplers intended starting dragging for the night. Huffman is survived by his parents and two sisters.

A FITTING MEMORIAL

Thousands paid their tribute to the noblest contribution man can make to service and sacrifice of himself to his King and Country and the good of humanity, when the memorial on Memorial Park to Belleville's one hundred and thirty-six dead of the Great War was unveiled and dedicated. Though in the shrine of the hearts of the relatives and friends and of the people, their memory is green and abides despite the passage of years, some outward token of their deathless contribution to human life and human institutions is required to keep at all moments their memory to the fore because often the mind is apt to forget though only for a moment and to instil in the minds of the young that sense of national duty which makes a nation.

This granite memorial bearing on its two panels the names of the city's dead will endure longer than those who stood about its base on Victoria Square to gather about its base in another century a new generation which will pay a debt to the memory of the dead whose deeds created the warp of history. Time may pass and efface in generations hence the personal association linked up with the cenotaph but the influence upon the ages yet to be will be unending.

Nearly all if not all of the men whose names appear on the memorial were born in the last decade or two of the reign of Queen Victoria and it was fitting that this memorial should be dedicated upon that day associated with the Queen.

Though almost fourteen years have rolled away since the war's end, the memory of the dead has grown not dimmer but are remembered as individuals which have enriched the lives of those who knew them in life. The war is not so far off that the personal grief has yet been effaced.

Both monument and dedication bear the marks of that simplicity which comes from chaste taste. The dignity of the city's tribute was simple because heartfelt, and the monument in its simple and appealing lines indicates the influence upon the minds of the deeds of those it commemorates.

Half a generation separates us from the days which made such a scene as Victoria Park possible. The new generation which knows of war only by influences which have been marked indelibly upon the pressure of mind by tales of daunting heroism has arrived at young manhood and young womanhood, but this young generation was pressed to pay its tribute to the fathers and elder brothers who fighting fell or who were privileged to return to their homes to aid in reconstruction. They may not be with those who knew the war days as days of the thrill of victory, days of gloom in the loss of friends and days of dark suspense and of ultimate triumph. Both are inheritors of the deeds of the men who struggled overseas.

The rearing of this stone to immortalize the fallen was aptly conceived and the memorial is a fitting symbol of memory. To the estate of the late Mrs. R. J. Graham, to the Provincial Fund trustees, to various organizations, to the scholars of the city and to the citizens individually who assisted with contributions, Belleville is indebted. It is a splendid endeavor to repay in part by the completion of the memorial by placing the figure which is to crown the stone. And to the sculptor assigned the efforts have at last borne fruit in being in accord with the wish of the late Mrs. Graham that some memorial worthy of the fallen should be reared on the Park which was given the city for memorial purposes.

CAR ACCIDENTS

Motorists are at the opening of another busy season and it seems that attention should be called to the using of more care and precaution in protecting life. Accidents will happen but a few careless drivers can build up a record of fatalities which at the motorists' hands.

Now and then one hears of accidents in which men are drivers who are impecunious and who have not enough money to buy gasoline but none to pay for protection. It often would appear as if the person who has an ill-gotten car which he does not take the trouble to have insured probably because he can ill spare the money, is inclined to be careless as he feels protected by lack of cash which would prevent civil action against him for damages. There ought to be some way to get at this type of driver. Such drivers as a rule are very careful and take little chance, but the havoc caused by reckless and careless drivers is out of all proportion to their numbers.

FROM AULD SCOTIA

The Scottish trade mission to Canada has been markedly successful and bids fair to attract the eyes of Canadians to the land of cakes and other Scots.

Here is another effort that will strengthen the imperial tie, which is no tie at all but the bond of union of thought and ideal. Scotland has given the world much, she can give more in the way of trade and in thought.

All hope the mission will provoke increase of trade as it surely has provoked interest on this side of the Atlantic.

SERVICE
By Alina Michaelis

Weavers of words and dreamers
Vowed to the service of art,
Each one clasping a vision
Close to his eager heart,
Each one fashioning ever
Truth into beauty's mask.
Each one hungering only
After the joy of his task.
Gladness would be your portion
Always, could you but go
Rapt in the wake of your star-gleam,
Little of life to know.

Weavers of words and dreamers,
Knew life is not content
Ever to have you follow.
Freely, your fancy's bent.
Life will not let you labor
Vowed to the service of art,
Clasping your vision of beauty
Close to your happy heart.
Each man must share his life's burdens,
Each one its fullness must know;
Serve not his dreams, but his brothers
Ever life wills it so.

THEFT OF FLOWERS from the public parks and from the boulevards is a disgraceful and prevalent thing. This is a despicable crime. These flowers brighten up the city and gladden the eyes of many to whom flowers are a common sight. Motorists passing through speak of Belleville the Beautiful—and yet there are citizens who deliberately destroy the beauty cultivated with such care by the Parks Commission. Citizens who are proud of their city and loyal to its institutions and ambitions should help Parks Committee and Vigilance Committee and report any attempt made to steal flowers from public places, so that salutary lessons may be handed out to the defacers.

DO NOT HELP START PINK EYE OUTBREAK

Contagion Lies in Discharge From Eyelids Affected

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D.
Famous American Authority on Health and Psychology.

Pink eye is a peculiar name for acute conjunctivitis. But it means an infiammation of the eyelids which are called, in the latter, conjunctiva by the doctors.

The contagious element lies in the discharges from this. So if one rubs the fingers, tosses, penicils, books from the sick person etc. Most of us use our eyes carefully. We can realize and it is a wise precaution to keep away from them, not to touch the eyes any more than is absolutely necessary.

Usually the first symptom of pink eye is an itching or smarting sensation in the lids. Then they describe it as feeling as if sand were under the eyelids. Within a few hours, or perhaps not so quickly, the lids become enlarged, swollen and hot. The sight may even be blurred.

Examination reveals that the eyelids are very red. This is noted by turning the lower lids down, or rolling the upper ones over on a match-stick. A secretion soon forms which, at first, is thick and glue the upper and lower lids together. The discharge is really pus, and is highly contagious.

The eyelids seem to become painful, and the eyes are very sensitive if their delicate lining membranes (the conjunctiva) are exposed to wind or dust. Sometimes conjunctivitis (pinkeye) affects only one eye. It may also accompany an ordinary head cold, or hay fever, or follow measles or scarlet fever.

Pink eye may last only a few days, or a week or more. Whether it be the rule when treated promptly, or whether it clears up spontaneously, without any special treatment.

While the inflammatory process continues, dripping sleep in the eyelids usually mat the lids and eyelashes together in a solid mass. This can be removed with warm water or boric solution. Never use the use of boric acid or vaseline ointment on the lids because they often prevents them from gluing together.

When the condition begins in one eye it is almost sure to be spread to the other in a day or two. This again shows how much we need both eyes without being consciously aware of it.

In treatment of pink eye, a saturated solution of boric acid may be used in the eyes, about a three drops, let us say, in each corner of each eye, three to four times a day. Using boric acid solution in the eyes—just plain excellent. It should be done several times daily. When one does not get inflamed a few drops of the solution in the eyes is a very preventative, but the eye-glass used must be thoroughly washed and filled with a fresh solution before putting them on again.

Our eyes are so valuable that we should take care of them in every way possible. Keep children away from those who have pink eye. Avoid junctivitis and when they haven't it be careful to avoid contact-ing into contact with children who have the disease.

Using boric acid solution for the eyelids every few days is also a practice under any conditions. It helps to keep the eyes healthy and stimulate the lids.

CRIME IN CANADA

An organization called the Citizens' Service Association, which held its annual meeting at Toronto last week, made reference in its annual report to the possibility of an early break of kidnapping in Canada because of the recent activities of money-mad criminals in the United States in that department. The report called for an extra effort on the part of citizens to combat crime and prevent its entrenchment.

Canada has been fortunate so far in its freedom with criminals and its control of organized crime. The obvious reason is that there is not the wealth to be correspondingly honest. Public sentiment is strongly against criminal activity. There is no glamor made to reel his position. There is no glorification of his successful exploits. When he gets into the toils of the law he feels neither heroic. The courts do not fool. His trial, conviction and commitment to prison are cold-blooded official operations entirely devoid of affiliations that would cause the accused to feel that he occupied the role of hero. Usually the man who enters upon a career of crime in Canada collides early with the forces of the law. If his offences are of a serious nature he is pretty certain to be given a stiff prison term that confounds him, if he has any intelligence, that he is on the wrong track.—Galt Reporter.

In 1885 he went to the northwest Rebellion as Sergeant of "A" company of the Midland Battalion under Capt. William and was in the engagements at Batoche. A large number of the citizens attended the ceremony of raising the flag at Ontario street school by Mr. Wills, M.P.P., chairman of the Board of Education. The firing of guns was also imposed of companies of the Lloyd Lodge, Hastings Rifles and Company Hastings Rifles and the Hungerford Cornet Company Band. Splendid speeches were delivered by Mr. Wills and Mayor Cyrils Bogart.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay. De.)

A WELCOME CHANGE—

"A few years ago it became necessary for all the young ladies who wished to take up the study of business section of the street, to do a Highland Fling in order to help to avoid the well directed firecrackers which were cast at their feet by the young bloods around town who seemed to get quite a lot of fun out of this practice. Now it is not noticeable that the practise has been discontinued, and I wonder why. Whether the reason can be laid to the fact that the young men prefer to spend on the banging crackers or not, I don't know, but I do know the change is welcome.

BRAVE GUY—

Friendly Town was a brave little guy. All the children in the neighborhood were afraid to go near him. Therefore they looked up to him at all times in case of accidental thrills when occasion offered. Such a boy provided excellent opportunity for him to show his fearless disposition. He broke the monotonous routine of existence by his daredevil antics, holding them in his hands. The children would sit spellbound and am offered him their firecrackers for him to light and hold while they covered their ears. He would then applause cheered him and made him more reckless; then as a grand gesture he stuck a few in his teeth and exploded them. This was fine. Great stuff. But the third he lit wasn't so good; it exploded with a terrible bang and bits of the paper flew into his eyes. Predgy ran into the house. Mother ran for the telephone and the doctor ran over and dug bits of the paper out of them. Today he is looking at the world with one eye. The other one is covered—with a bandage.

WILD LIFE INCREASE—

Rabbits, partridge, wild duck and other wild life is said to be more numerous than they are this year, according to reports. There is a presence on the lakes and wooded acres of their country. But while other wild things have shown this increase in the vicinity, especially in the case of the canny, the porcupine, has increased to the extent that he has now added his unwelcome name to settlers and campers of the district. Many of the fine, soft, quill coated animal has been for some years a target for hunters, armed from rifle bullets and traps they have been responsible for many deaths in the camp in the dead of night or early morning in search of salt for their bodies in his daredevil way. He broke the monotonous routine of existence by his daredevil antics, holding them in his hands. The children would sit spellbound and am offered him their firecrackers for him to light and hold while they covered their ears. He would then applause cheered him and made him more reckless; then as a grand gesture he stuck a few in his teeth and exploded them. This was fine. Great stuff. EXCESS FAT AND SCIATICA

Short of Breath—Used to "Puff and Blow"

NOW GOES UP HILLS LIKE A STEAM ENGINE

"Fourteen weeks ago I had an awful attack of Sciatica in my hip. I took a large dose of Kruschen Salts every morning, and after a week the pain disappeared, and since then has not returned, thanks to Kruschen. And when I last weighed Kruschen had done for my hip, I said to myself, 'What about trying to lose some overweight.' I am 5ft. 5ins. in height and 12st. 8lbs. in weight, or 70 lbs. more than I should be. Well, this last 13 weeks I have been Kruschen Salts regularly and I feel a different being. My wind and action improved wonderfully—can go like a steam engine up a hill—whereas I used to collect wind, and had no breath. Now I never know I am on a hill, they are all the same, and I am not nearly as stout as I was."—H. S.

Curious, you may think, this double effect of Kruschen in ridding the user of sciatica and excess fat, too. Curious until you realize that sciatica and excess fat are twin troubles. The basic their common cause in sluggish eliminating organs which fail to respond to a call for and generate dangerous body poisons. Amongst these poisons is uric acid, which is invariably associated with sciatica, rheumatism, and kindred complaints. Nature embarrasses seeks to obtain; best oats and paddies have also been attributed to the same way. In this effort to obtain the name of champion of champions all. Bears are reported to be scarce this year and only a few have been sighted.

BOYS' SCOUTS

Third Belleville Troop Boy Scouts held a get-together rally Monday evening by entertaining the Second Troop Boy Scouts in the Second Sunday School. Programme, games, basketball tying, swimming and fine dressing relay, relay knot tying, trailing pods crackers and refreshments within one minute, council camp fire, opened by Scoutmaster James Wannamaker, assisted by Assistant Scoutmaster Churchill, Troop Leader Fred Churchill, Assistant Patrol Leader Harold Churchill. Talk was given by Rev. Wright, after which lunch was served by the mother.

Vote of thanks to the mothers, Chosen by singing Wave Crests to the End of a Boy Scout Day.

To relieve the system of the poisonbreeding waste material by storing in up in the tissues in the form of fat. The six salts in Kruschen stimulate the internal organs to proper elimination. They allow no particle of waste matter to remain unexpelled and so be reabsorbed by the body's chemistry into excess flesh. Your inside is kept clean and serene and the acid is afforded no chance to form. Internal cleanliness, moreover, means the circulation of clear, refreshed blood to every cell of your body and the possession of every vein of you into a tiny torrent of energy, filling every fibre of you with that "Kruschen feeling" of fitness.

BLIND HORSE FALLS IN RIVER

Wandered From Stable and Rescued By Police

Wednesday morning at five o'clock Constable Sandercock of the Thomson at the city police rescued a horse from the Moira River, at a point opposite to the plant of the American Hardware Company on Coleman Street. He was called by a telephone call that the police officers went to the bank of the river and they were able to grasp the halter chain and lead the horse from the water.

The horse was owned by John Pyzmara, 164 Bleecker Street. The animal broke loose and wandered away from the premises of its owner to the river where it is owing to being blind it had fallen down the twelve foot bank into the water.

It is understood that the horse was not injured. The owner was notified and took it home to its breakfast.

ADVERTISING for the MERCHANT of TO-DAY

Conducted by HAROLD S. EDGAR

A weekly article dealing on advertising and merchandising prepared for the Ontario Intelligencer and with the co-operation of The Ontario Intelligencer.

ARTICLE 11

Making Two Sales Instead of One

In these days of climbing overhead, profits come from decreasing cost per sale a..., by better advertising to bring more people into the store or more units sales and decreasing cost per sale.

The merchant's rent, taxes, proprietor's salary, clerk hire, etc., and items of similar cost remain the same, so that any reduction in cost is barely possible, without lowering quality of service.

The average daily expense of the number of sales per day gives the unit cost of each sale. If the total yearly expense averages $30 per day and the average number of sales per day was fifty—the cost of each sale would be 60c. If it could be raised to a ten cent spool of thread or a twenty-five dollar dress.

Considered closely, that this cost of making sales is the same regardless of dollar value, it is evident the increase of size of sale lowers the percentage of cost. Better merchandising and store service should be built around a definite policy of increasing the size of individual sale by—

a) selling additional relative products by suggestions

b) selling the larger sized packages

c) selling more units at the same product

(a) With shoes should be sold rubber heels—rubbers in season—running shoes for children at the approach of summer—polish, laces, and other cookery products should be linked up other cooking ingredients.

Where the commodities supplied are in short supply, the merchant can create future business by forming a few other lines. Undoubtedly the average housewife appreciates this "service" if it is not overdone.

"A trade paper tells how General Foods sent a group of women representatives to call on 200 retail grocers, and buy a loaf of bread or a package of cake flour and then spend anything up to $5.00 for what the individual grocer might suggest."

The report says that the women shoppers spent on goods suggested by a grocer was $1.60. Many were able to spend less than fifty cents, in face of the fact that each one of these hundred grocers could have sold $5.50 worth of goods if he had exercised sales initiative.

(b) Many products are put up in two sizes—the smaller size intended for those who are only doing a small amount of baking. The larger size usually gives somewhat better value and saves the customer money. It is usually better to sell two 65c sale may not seem as profitable as a 35c package today and another three weeks hence, you might not get the second 35c sale.

Place the customer's needs if possible on a plane above what may be in their minds. If you have been selling sugar and they usually live in five pounds. And you probably sell the ten pounds—at the same time—a little more strong and paper bag.

The idea of increasing by in one sized package also offer excellent opportunity for increased sales. Thread 3 spools instead of one—shoe laces half a dozen or a dozen instead of a pair—bits of soup 10c, three for 27c—breakfast food three instead of one even if you cut a little on the larger quantity the difference in cost is a matter of weights, day or evening wear. Men's hose, two or three instead of a pair—much more comfort for the wearer—sell him also a better quality of the customer and your own.

Leaders—pick one article in each department each week, bring it to the attention of customers that week.

All through the picture there are many ways of increasing sales to your benefit and the benefit of the customer.

NEXT WEEK—GOOD SALESMANSHIP

NATIONALS LOSE OPENING GAME TO KINGSTON

Nats Favored by Weather But Not by Lady Luck as Ponies Win Opener 13-7

Score is 13-7—Visitors Deserve Full Credit For Win

GALA OPENING

Nats Have Makings of Good Team and Will Bear Watching

Hitting, when hits meant runs and aided by the miscues of the losers, Kingston Ponies, champions of the O.B.J.L. last year, spoiled one of the best openings the Nationals have had in years, when they took the locals into camp by a score of 13-7, and looked all over the better team on the day's play. Some 1000 fans from the city and district gathered at the ball park on the holiday to witness the show off of the baseball season and to take a peek at the collection of ball tossers that Walter Gerow had gathered together. They certainly had nothing that did not go away on them, because of the cool, raw weather, but they did see talent power, that will come to light before the season is many moons older.

Opening Ceremonies

The weather was almost perfect for the opening gallebugh a high wind was blowing from the north west and this interfered with the outfield and also the batting, but otherwise the fans were able to shed their heavy garments and bask in the sunlight of a May day. The opening ceremonies were brief, but to the point, and featured the King Base-ball, and not a lot of officials clustering up the pitcher's mound and the centre field. Mayor George O. Tice was accorded the privilege of throwing the first ball with R. E. Colling, president of the O.B.J.L., at the plate, and Charles J. Symon, chairman of the park committee, his assuming the catching role. His Worship had a fair assortment of curves but they were not to fool the old baseball warrior and the league was officially opened. Pte. Walsh, goaltender for the Montreal Maroons, and a former player in this league, called "play ball" after the batteries had been announced and the ball settled back to watch the fireworks, inwardly hoping for a victory but being doomed through the inexperience of some of Gerow's hopefuls. The diamond was in first class condition, while from the mast head of the flag pole flutes waved proudly in the breeze pennants of which any team might be proud.

Not Interesting

As for the game, it was not the best game that has been played in the new park, nor neither was it the worst. There was plenty of hitting, some brilliant fielding sandwiched in, two or three plays literally thrown to the fans by their feet.

It apparently was not the Nationals day and one of the contributing they attempted went wrong, while the visitors could not make a mistake. Walter Gerow started with several youngsters almost then tapering their first senior game and the fans should not judge them on the game as a whole. The veteran catcher "Peeney" Mills naturally is the mainstay around which the team is built and he is still the same good catcher as of yore. Jimmy Morgan at shortstop, Ken Chamberlain at second, and "Skinner" Johnson at third, were three new faces in the infield and the two first got a spot to set the youngsters around the keystone sack, but Johnson on third is an old timer and he partly steadied the boys. Both Morgan and Chamberlain showed good speed in fielding but their hitting was light, while Chamberlain "muffed a couple de combat" early in the third frame when he was forced to retire with the knee, when Bert Vince came in little out of position due to his inexperience. Three stitches were required to close the wound by Dr. R. A. Fyrun and Vern Weir was moved to his old position at second. Morgan was too anxious in making his throws and thereby failed, but he knows how to go after a ground ball and has a good arm.

Outfield Can Hit

The outfield had the peerless Alex Weir in the centre berth with Crethery and Vern Weir at his left. Until Chambers was injured, when Herbie Morris, an old Hillcrest star went in for the last and Vern Weir moved into the inner works. The outfield has class and they can all hit and Walter Gerow has no worries in that department. Crethery will soon whip an infield into shape and then he may yet start to go somewhere. It must be remembered that Kingston has the edge on the Nationals in that they have had some before experience and have had plenty of practice, but the Nationals has not been in the best of shape, the boys being home from work but their pleasure and naturally their training will be benefited with a week's layoff before the next game, a different team will take the field and a number of men he has not tried and will give everyone a chance to make good. The boys will have to be patient and not lose heart when the breaks go against them there fighting with the league leading outfit championship is being handed out.

Not Pointer's Day

The manager elected to pit Verne Pointer against Kingston's Jamieson in the season's debut but it was not his day. The southpaw had his troubles, never really came behind him. Casey, who relieved, showed the fans a fast ball that is fast, and with proper coaching should be one of the sensations of the league. This boy knows what it is all about and he has confidence. Many times he made it look easy for the batters after he had him in the hole, but Mills will iron out all these mix-takes. Jamieson, who delights in taking the Nationals apart, is a strong team behind him and with the confidence that is more artificial than real, he should have little trouble in lies to turn the locals back. Pointer during his time on the mound got fanned six, while Casey took three out by the same route, while Jamieson whiffed seven.

Kingston Ponies Smart

Manager Smith, of Kingston, has rounded a pretty smart ball club out of veterans and youngsters and the Ponies will take some beating in the loop. They have a smart infield with an average under garden and plenty of reserves. Stone at first, Quinn at second, Mickey Compeau at short and Bob Elliott at the red-light corner were certainly clicking on the holiday and once they get the feel of the diamond will give any pitcher plenty of protection. Compeau, former pro in the Michigan Ontario loop, is the weak sister of the quartette, his playing yesterday being nothing to write home about. He is "fish" for a hook ball and he has a lot to learn about fly grounders even if he did play up with the big fellows. Jake Quinn is smart at second, his fielding at all times being brilliant, while his hitting although streaky generally comes in the pinch. Scrutton, Kingston's outside in the outfield are fast and they have real power with the stick. The Ponies are not unbeatable but they have a good senior club and will be the team to take for all the marbles.

Pounds Two Triples

Alex Weir was the heavy hitter for both sides, he having two triples and both of them were clean hits. Jake Quinn batted a homer and only made it by a bad play by the Belleville outfield, when two went after the ball instead of one going to take the relay. Mills also tripled and opened the barrage that scored a pair of runs. Stone and Elliott all pop singles and with more careful fielding could have been handled. The fielding features of the game were Compeau's one-handed stab of Johnson's Texas Leaguer in the second inning and Kingston's smart double play when Quinn took a toss from Compeau, pivoted and threw the ball over to first. For the locals Vern Weir provided the feature play when he raced over from centre field to take the throw when Darrah fielded Johnson's infield hit.

How Runs Scored

Kingston got away on the right foot when they scored two runs in the first inning. Mary Wood had walked and Arnel had been hit by a pitched ball and Percy Mills threw to centre field trying to catch Wood at second, both runners scoring. Again in the third frame the Ponies again garnered another two runs on three hits along with a stolen base sandwiched in between. Stone had singled and Quinn hit for the circuit and the Nationals retired. The Nationals ped two runs on one hit, an error and a stolen base in the fifth for the excitement. The Nationals opened their scoring in the fourth when Johnson got on on an error, Mills scored him on a triple and Johnson himself Alex Weir again tripled with the bases loaded and scored later on Morris' infield out. In their half of the eighth the Ponies helped themselves to two more counters on two hits with a sacrifice fly and two errors. Although the locals managed to get two men on with a walk and an error they could not score in their half of the eighth to bag four runs and make it 13 to 7 in favor of the champion Kingston Ponies.

CANADA'S BILLION DOLLAR INDUSTRY

With the racing season upon us 1934 third with fifty-two and then the Kingston Flats all over. Tipping the beam at 200 pounds, the biggest year of the biggest money in history, only a paltry forty-five million was wagered. And 1931, if memory serves, was the darkest year of depression. Depression in 1929, '30, '31, brought the levels down to forty-five to 29 to thirty-eight in '30, to thirty-three in '31. What will this year bring forth? Well, some of the story can be told Saturday when for the seventy-third time the thoroughbreds faced the barrier for North America's oldest racing classic.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

The Belleville Nationals, by losing their opening game, are right in style. In the days of depression every business is in the red therefore the Nats are right in the clover as far as being up to the minute is concerned after yesterday's loss to the Ponies.

Yesterday's loss was but the second loss that the Nationals ever suffered on opening day. In 1925, in the days of Bert Fenske, under Joe Daly, gave the locals a 5 to 3 drubbing. After another year the Nationals fally we are of the opinion that of 1926 but one of the changes the locals will be in that black of the fight by July 1st.

Will Crainey and Bert Vince were the big hitters of the day and take it from us the Ponies hate to see the "Big Boy" come to bat. Over since the veteran "Peeney" Mills started the locals rally with a two base hit a nice triple in the 6th innings, Jake Quinn was the Limestone City hero when he clouted for the circuit in the 8th frame. Although he was a hard hit ball Alex Weir's two triples were just as hard to field and one perhaps a little further in his outfield but the Ponies fielders were camped out near the fence back when Alex smacked his.

The locals did not seem to get the first man on base. Naturally they were in the hole all afternoon on as far as hitters went. Eight errors is altogether too many for a senior club to commit in one afternoon. On the other hand, however, there were a number of young inexperienced players working for the Nats and they gave their best. We will not go with them and feel assured that they will be heard tell of before very long

With the strong south-east wind, which yesterday afternoon Pointer had a tough day's work cut out for himself. He had to break his curve ball into the breeze all day. We have seen his curve to a much better advantage in the past, however, Carl Casey was called upon with the Tuna yesterday and the lad from Sulphide will be plenty of games for Nats this summer. Past that one in your hat for a month or so.

Errors of omission and errors commission spell defeat for the Nats yesterday but then again there was the marked evidence of lack of hitting ability on the part of the locals. Although they have had a week's practice there is nothing like the old ball game itself to get a batter's eye on the ball. The Nat's pitchers will be out to-morrow night, during the junket for game, while the entire res- t of the team will be out on Friday night to workout.

The cut which Ken Chambers was recipient of when Bert Vince accidently put him sliding into second was most regrettable as we are fond of a tooth by Umpire Walsh when "Peeney" Mills hands a mask full him in the face. While on the subject we might say here that "Peeney" is the best umpire we have seen come out of the Hillcrest since the days of George Sullivan.

Yesterday was the first time that we saw Jimmy Morgan at the ivories, or whatever you may call it, of seeing the famous Mickey Cochrane style of batting. To-day's exhibition is to be taken as a sample, then, we are firmly of the opinion that Harry Blakely can find a better shortstop ever to grace the C.O.B.L. We are backed up in our statement by players the calibre of Shinner Johnson, Penny Mills and Will Heckman, who believe Morgan was a victory at Monday night's baseball ball. He is a natural born big right hander looks to be in better physical shape than he had purpoces than he has enjoyed in some years.

The Nats are not at all discouraged and are going to Kingston on June 3rd for the express purpose of "taking the Ponies". The visitors have a smart infield in the person of Stone 1st, Quinn 2nd, Elliott 3rd and Compeau short. They work smoothly together and are in the game fighting all of the time. They saved the day for Jamieson when he wavered a number of times and Harold Hewitt Smith was in the ball park unanimously from the 6th innings on

The champion B.A.A.A. juniors strated out where they left off last season by trimming the rejuvenated Moose kids to the tune of 19 to 4 following the scelor game. Manager Herbie Morris has gathered together a smart team of juniors and will be heard from. We decided to fall.

LEAD OF BEARS IS THREATENED BY FOUR TEAMS

Defeat Yesterday Tightened Already Close Race Considerably

BISONS SECOND

Took Double Bill From Leafs Behind Real Pitching

(By the Associated Press)

The Newark Bears, pace-setting in the International League almost without interruption since the start of the season, were being threatened on four sides today.

The Bears' defeat by the Baltimore Orioles yesterday, 5 to 2, further threatened the Jersey City close race and left them only half a game ahead of the Buffalo Bisons. Rochester, in fifth place, was only two games out of the lead. Baltimore and Montreal, in a virtual tie for third place, trailed Newark by a single game.

Don Brennan pitched good ball for the Bears yesterday and his support folded up at critical moments and Baltimore cashed in to a comparatively easy victory. Walter Beck for dropped the Bears with seven hits, one a home run by Bob Rolfe. Baltimore's twelve hits included Frank Packard's 14th home run of the season, a triple by Russ Ariet, and doubles by Thurston and Jordan.

Buffalo moved into second place by winning two games from the Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-2 and 4-3. Buck Crouse's single off Art Smith in the ninth drove in the winning run in the second game. Buffalo needed Toronto to six hits, the same number of hits the Leafs had collected. Bartulis and Brewer stopped the Leafs with five hits in the nightcap, while Earl Cook was credited with the victory after relieving Ryan, given a life in the second game when he drove the home with the fourth Bison tally.

BISONS SECOND

Took Double Bill From Leafs Behind Real Pitching

(By the Associated Press)

The Newark Bears, pace-setting in the International League almost without interruption since the start of the season, were being threatened on four sides today.

The Bears' defeat by the Baltimore Orioles yesterday, 5 to 2, further threatened the Jersey City close race and left them only half a game ahead of the Buffalo Bisons. Rochester, in fifth place, was only two games out of the lead. Baltimore and Montreal, in a virtual tie for third place, trailed Newark by a single game.

Don Brennan pitched good ball for the Bears yesterday and his support folded up at critical moments and Baltimore cashed in to a comparatively easy victory. Walter Decanior dropped the Bears with seven hits, one a home run by Bob Rolfe. Baltimore's twelve hits included Frank Packard's 14th home run of the season, a triple by Russ Ariet, and doubles by Thurston and Jordan.

Buffalo moved into second place by winning two games from the Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-2 and 4-3. Buck Crouse's single off Art Smith in the ninth drove in the winning run in the second game. Buffalo needed Toronto to six hits, the same number of hits the Leafs had collected. Bartulis and Brewer stopped the Leafs with five hits in the nightcap, while Earl Cook was credited with the victory after relieving Ryan, given a life in the second game when he drove the home with the fourth Bison tally.

Gala Opening

The opening dance of the season held at the Bay of Quinte Country Club on Monday evening was an unqualified success. The club premises were beautifully decorated with Spring flowers by the ladies and over 150 young people danced until 3 a.m. to the accompaniment of the Commodores' Orchestra. A number were there from Belleville and from the Airport and all agreed the dance was one of the most enjoyable in the history of the club. The secretary announced that Mrs. J. A. Faulkner had offered a handsome cup for the aggregate score for the bridge tournaments to commence on Friday, June 3rd at eight-thirty sharp.

INTERESTING NOTES CONCERNING WEST HUNTINGDON COMMUNITY

WEST HUNTINGDON.— One of the oldest and most popular members of this place in the person of Mrs. Ann Ellis Kingston was smitten with a paralytic stroke on Saturday last, after partaking of a meal with friends. At 87 Mr. Paul Kingston lives until Sunday he will be 93 years of age.

Since the morning of his stroke he has not spoken but recognizes but little that takes place around him. The fear is entertained that he will not live long. He resides with his son, Albert.

Mrs. Milligan of Newburg, and a public school teacher at Shannonville spent the week end with Miss Evelyn McIlvroy.

Miss Winnie McIlvroy of Stella was home with her people over the week end.

Mrs. J. J. Wilson was taken by her niece, Miss Moorcroft, to Madoc, on Saturday last, where she is visiting for her sister.

Mrs. J. Wilson and family motored to Kingston on Friday last where they visited Mr. Wilson, whose present address is Kingston General Hospital, very encouraging indeed.

It is reported that he will soon be home. This event will be a gala one among friends.

The pastor only was admitted for a few moments to see Mr. Wilson today at the Belleville hospital on Saturday. She appeared a little brighter but was still in need of careful attention, which we know she will get at this hospital.

Many anxious neighbors and friends are calling at the home where her pal, Paul Kingston is sticking on. When the pastor made a hurried call on Sunday afternoon he found Mrs. Geo. Post, Mr., N. T. Sparks and Mr. Fred Wilson there, all of whom were very solicitous over their old friend and neighbor.

There was an attendance of 79 at the Sunday school today.

A good congregation greeted the pastor on Sunday morning, it was the second sermon in the series on "The Sunday Evening Hour."

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews of Eggleton, who only left Eggleton, on Friday last for their new home in Yarker, were back for a Sunday visit. They certainly offered a hand-some cup for the aggregate score for the bridge tournament, which commences on Friday, June 3rd at eight-thirty sharp.

HEAVY LIST FOR ROYALTY

King and Queen Return From Sandringham Greatly Refreshed

By Thomas T. Champion
Canadian Press Staff Writer

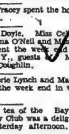
London, May 23 (C.P. Cable).—The King and Queen, after a complete rest at Sandringham from state events during the Whitsuntide holiday, today returned to London and the palace into a whirl of engagements.

Today they opened the royal tournament at Olympia. The Prince of Wales will visit the tournament tomorrow and will see, in the astonishing number of the programme, depiction of the present-day Army. The Duke of York's big infant son to the Welsh people at Caernarvon Castle this year was the first Prince of Wales, Edward, the Black Prince, was invested at the castle in 1911.

Their Majesties last night attended a performance of "The Miracle" at the Lyceum Theatre where Lady Diana Cooper, playing the part of the nun, was presented to them during one of the interludes. During the day, they went to the famous Chelsea Flower show, meeting there the Duke of Connaught with Prince Arthur of Connaught and Princess Patricia, former Duchess of Fife, and Princess Alexandra, King Manuel of Portugal, the latter's mother, Queen Amelie, the revolution of 1910 ended. Friday the King and Queen will attend a performance of the Royal Choral Society's concert at Covent Garden.

The Court will move to Windsor on June 14 for the week-end visit of Ascot race meet.

Fashion Flashes



Be prepared for cooler summer days with a stunning outfit consisting of a coat, dress and a two piece suit of white flannel. Smart shops in Toronto can be seen featuring this costume soon.

Don't fail to wear prints you will find some very good looking models. A neat, trim dress in the fashionable green and white print, and has a brown velvet sash. The maid in the picture and the model are worn over a chartreuse green silk slip.

Daisies tell a story of smartness these days, and one of the dainty print ensembles, one woman wears a hat of black milan ribbonet with white organdie collar and cuffs with small black and white daisies. The hat has a pinch crown and sat on even brim.

A wise move is to include at least one evening frock in your Spring and Summer wardrobe. It is well to be worn with success at many functions. A lovely gown is done in white crepe roma with stitched lines of straws embroidery matching the skirt and finished in the form of tucks. There is a high, curving waistline and a draped decolletage.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Expression, the Lighting System of the Face

Taking an eagle's eye view of the passing throngs of girls and vimmin as they rush in and out of fashionable shops, one comes clearly and readily to the conclusion that now, more than ever, the sisterhood is in need of facial animation. We are not referring to color that comes out of the paint pot or the paprika box, called the lipstick. We have in mind the highs and delicate shadings of expression.

Think now. Settle your mind on the subject. Maybe we're wrong, but doesn't it seem to you that the impertinent hat hanging by its eye brows to the back hair, the naked expanse of forehead, the abbreviated skirt, stunning garters—don't this combination make for the stereotyped appearance? There's a sort of maskiness that has descended upon the face of the sisterhood. Like those compacts you see in the shops.

Certain it is that a normal pair of eyebrows, undulations that rest naturally upon the forehead, and hats, of full-sized growth make a girl look human. Not that we don't that they aren't vogue; they are. Add to them an expression of aliveness, alertness, brain-on-the-job-ness and the curse of the year—a vold, vacant look—is wiped from the beauty slate. Expression, some sort of it, and calculating minxes assume the graven image blankness which stand for sophistication. It is their line and they are promoting it for all it's worth. They'll be prettier if they thawed a bit, look less frozen.

Also have a psychological effect. The laces, ribbons, confin-

An account of the military and political career of Major General Charles George Gordon during the seven years he spent in the Sudan is given by Bernard M. Allen in his book "Gordon and the Sudan." Dr. Allen, after exhaustive examination of documents, many personal investigations in Africa has traced the life of Gordon from London for Africa to work under the Khedive to open up the Soudan at that time to commerce and subdue the slave traffic. In the Soudan he met the hands of rebels during the siege of Khartoum, the capital and general of the Sudan, his life was a busy and adventurous one, full of many outstanding down incursions and setting the financial affairs of Egypt. Gordon's death coincided with only one British officer to escape from Fashoda in 1884 to January 26, 1885, is an important historical event. Gordon's death was an irony of fate in that he was killed by the rebels only two days before relief arrived after holding the town for nearly a year. Allen has produced a book of this volume: "His (Dr. Allen's) scrupulously careful study of the last eleven years of his life comes near to the truth." This biography should be.

MOHAWKS HOLD ANNIVERSARY

Sacred Vessels at Tyendinaga Witnessed By Visitors Sunday

The annual anniversary service in memory of the landing of the Mohawk Band on the shores of the Bay of Quinte was held on Sunday last in Christ Church, Tyendinaga. The church was filled and the church was filled with worshippers, many standing outside as well. As the bell ceased the robed choir and clergy marched down the centre aisle, the entrance of the choir where they entered the church and marched to the nave singing the Trinity hymn, "Holy, Holy, Holy." The choir was led by Miss Stella, the Catechist, the prayer desk and the clergy in their stalls. The prayers and lesson were taken by Archdeacon Gil, Rector of the Mohawks. A hymn in Mohawk was then sung, "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name." The Holy Communion service was then conducted by Kanaharohi of Canada and Shoje-lowaah of Belleville.

Kanaharohi gave a history of the band from the time of trouble in Mohawk Valley, New York State, at great sacrifice rather than give up the old flag.

A number from Belleville were in the congregation and were given an opportunity of examining the sacred vessels presented to the band by Queen Anne.

NORTH ATLANTIC ROUTE IS BEST

Transoceanic Fliers, in Convention Set Forth Views

Rome, May 25—((AP)—Regular aeroplane traffic over the North Atlantic already is possible on one route, and over the South Atlantic on two, Dr. Eugen Gutbrod declared in all nations, who are holding a convention here, agreed today.

They set forth their conviction in a formal resolution declared that the best North Atlantic route was via Greenland and Iceland. The South Atlantic routes apparently most favorable are from Bolama, Portuguese Guinea, to Natal, Brazil and St. Louis, Senegal, to Natal, with the Cape Verde Islands as a further alternative.

The flyers definitely rejected the direct route from Ireland to Newfoundland as well as the Azores and Bermuda routes. They called upon the governments to cooperate more closely in providing weather reports. Resolutions which were approved by the Conference, one to study North Atlantic flying and the other South Atlantic.

"With existing equipment the Greenland route can be flown at the present time, save for occasional frequent landing places," the clerk Atlantic commission reported.

"Since meteorological conditions are not always favorable it will be necessary to establish new weather stations and wireless stations.

FISHING GOOD OVER WEEKEND

Fishing was good over the week end as reported by many who sought success from city worries on the lakes or on the back country over the week end holidays. Very many good catches have been reported from many of the lakes in the back sections but others experienced indifferent success in having the wily trout and bass to the surface of the water which were dragged through the water from the rear of a slowly moving boat.

In some lakes the trout which were sought were found quite near the shore where they were supposed to be in pursuit of minnows, their favorite food, while fishermen who were on other lakes reported that deep water trolling was the only way they could e caught. The general opinion among them was that where you found them, there was a scale that

TWEED CADETS ARE INSPECTED

Corps Merits High Praise For Efficiency in Manoeuvres

Tweed, May 23 By Mail— The annual inspection of the cadets of Tweed High School was conducted on Friday morning by Lieut.-Col. Watson of Military District No. 3. Credit is due Mr. Ashley for the efficiency of the corps, which performed the various manoeuvres in splendid style. The officers of the corps are Captain Don McCrea, Platoon Commanders R. McCutcheon, V. Rashotte and C. Elliott. Following short addresses by Captain Watson who complimented the corps on their showing, and two or three members of the Board, school was dismissed for the day.

The first bridge party and dance held under the auspices of Tweed branch of the Army and Navy Veterans' Association was generously patronized by the people of Tweed and the surrounding community and a considerable sum of money was received to be devoted to local relief by the Branch. Prizes for bridge were awarded to Miss Lorraine Weddell and Mr. A. B. Allen, while Mrs. Archie Campbell and Mr. Thomas Graham were the winners at euchre. Dr. M. J. Sales, President of the Branch presented the prizes and tendered the thanks of the association to those who had generously assisted. The music for the dance was furnished gratis by Lafrenaye's orchestra, which is composed of Mr. M. Fawcett A.T.C.M. at the piano, J. Laffman, violin, Stanley Laffman, banjo, and Ira Brown drums and Jas. Arkells of Plainfield, saxaphone.

The guessing contest for the Confederation rugs offered by M. J. Quinn, G. P. Frost and A. C. Blakely was concluded on Saturday with Miss M. Baker, Tweed; Mrs. L. W. Vallmer, Ottawa, and Mr. Newton Fisher, Brighton, winners by virtue of having entered the nearest correct guess, the missing numbers on the tickets sealed on the rugs.

Mr. and Mrs. Spackman are visiting friends and relatives in Toronto this week. Mr. Spackman who is manager of the Bank of Montreal has just been well earned a rest and has received leave of absence for a month. During his absence Mr. A. E. Kelly accountant, will act in a managerial capacity.

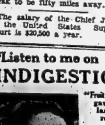
Mr. Roy Clafford, Bellefille, district superintendent of the Canadian American Oil Co., was in Tweed on Wednesday in connection with the installing of several gasoline pumps for Trudeau Motor Sales, near the C.P.R. station.

Mr. M. J. Quinn who came to Canada from Ireland at the age of nine years will visit his old home, accompanied by Mrs. Quinn. They plan to sail from Montreal in June and will attend the Eucharistic Congress in Dublin.

Stoco Lake, one of the premier resorts in Central Hastings for the followers of Izaak Walton, is being restocked with pickerel. Fifty thousand minnows were placed in the lake and maskinonge fingerlings will be received later. Mr. J. F. Hill M.P.P. for East Hastings was instrumental in securing this stock.

The condition of Mr. Geo. Shaw, manager of the local branch of the Dominion Store, is considerably improved. Mr. Shaw was threatened with pneumonia following an attack of tonsilitis. During his absence Mr. McFee of Bellefille and Mr. Bender of Toronto have charge.

Mr. Wallace Moon has been appointed Constable of Tweed village at a special meeting of the council Wednesday night.



The meeting of Bellefille Presbytery held in Madoc United church, on Tuesday was attended by Rev. E. B. Cooke, Rev. Wm. Johnston and Mr. W. S. Gordon.

At a meeting of the Council of the Board of Trade it was decided to hold a regatta at Memorial Park during the summer. Discussion took place concerning the organizing of a Juvenile Box Lacrosse League with the four towns who participated in hockey during the winter as possible entrants. A committee composed of F. Hinde and C. W. Curry, Secretary, was named to draw up a list of the achievements of the board since its inception.

Contrary to reports in Bellefille, Tweed is not menaced by forest fires. Mr. H. W. Crosbie, District Forester, reports the district out-break to be fifty miles away.

The salary of the Chief Justice of the United States Supreme Court is $30,500 a year.

CHOIR CONCERT PROVES SUCCESS

St. Peter's Presbyterian Choir, Madoc, Delights Large Audience

Madoc, May 23 By Mail— St. Peter's Presbyterian choir concert at the Empire Theatre on Wednesday evening came up to the most sanguine of all that have been offered the Madoc Public during the season. Other attractions contributed to making the attendance not so large as desired, but "made up in quality, any lack in quantity," and those unable to attend missed a delightful programme of choruses, solos and duets.

Assisting artists were Mr. James Bankier, tenor, of John Street Church, Bellefille, Mr. Charles Diamond, baritone, of Madoc, Prof. Ernest Wheatley, A.R.C.O., pianist, and organist of St. Andrew's church Bellefille, and members of the choir's church choir.

A brief introductory address by Rev. R. Bertram Nelles, Pastor of the Madoc Presbyterian Church, opened the programme, and Mr. J. F. Bedford, as chairman spoke of the assisting artists from Bellefille who had gradiously given of their time and talent to help make this programme a success.

The choir's first item was a rousing chorus, "John Peel" very effectively, Mr. R. Bell, conductor.

Mr. Bankier was called on and gave "Arise, O Sun" and rewarded the generous applause with "In the Long, Long Ago," which all enjoyed.

Mrs. Bedford gave a quaint selection, "My Grandfather's Clock" in excellent voice, followed by "Just As Years Go By."

Mr. Charles Casement, playing his own accompaniments, was at hearts by his rendering of "When You Are Happy, Friend of Mine," and his "The Year Little Girl."

Two little Scotch songs were Mr. Bankier's choice, "Annie Laurie" and "Lassie of Mine."

Prof. Wheatley, whose pleasing personality won a very appreciative audience, delighted all by his instrumental number, "Prelude in C Minor" and for an encore brought back with him his talented little daughter, Grace Maybee, and gave a duet, "Nola."

Miss Lenore Vandercoort followed, and in her usual pleasing way a vocal solo, "O Fair the Land of Spain" and "Where My Heart Is."

Mr. A. C. Anderson, Principal of Madoc High School, delighted the audience with his selections, "Invincible Soldier," and "Rollin' Down to Rio."

A full chorus by the choir "Bells of St. Mary's," was followed by duet by Mcars. E. Bedford and Wm. Hutchcroft, "The Miller's Waiting for the Sunrise," and concluding with an enthusiastic encore gave "Roll on Thou Shining River," Mrs. Bedford accompaniment.

Mr. Bankier then gave three Irish songs, touching many hearts with his "Mother Machree" and "Bendemeer's Stream."

A fitting close to the choir's first appearance in Madoc was a duet by Mcars. E. Bedford and Wm. Hutchcroft, "There's a Dear Old Garden," and the choir's last number left few eyes dry, bringing again memories of the war time with the Old Veteran's song "Don't Leave the Ones You Can't You Hear Them," and softly concluding with "Mother Machree."

Mr. Casement gave "Bluebird" and "My Longing For You," which were well received.

Mr. George Maybee was then called on for a piano solo, playing "Sonata Pathetique," "Beethoven" and receiving a vociferous recall gave "Polonaise in A. (Chopin).

After Mr. Bankier's closing number, the audience, led by the choir, joined in the National Anthem.

ROD RIDERS PAY HEAVILY IN WEST

Kamloops, B.C., May 23.—Three dead, including one girl, and two injured was the toll of train accidents occurring in this district over the week-end. The victims were transients, riding on the freight trains.

A companion, Hazel Kellar, of Moose Jaw, received a cut hand and bruised collarbone. A youth, named Belzecy, travelling on the same car, received a broken leg.

At The Belle

CLAUDETTE COLBERT, EDMUND LOWE AND EDDIE CANTOR ARE NEXT AT THE BELLE THEATRE

Kidnapped by Edmund Lowe and carried away in an autogiro to a lone cabin in the Adirondacks!

That is what happens to Claudette Colbert in "The Misleading Lady," the new laugh-filled comedy which opens at the Belle tomorrow, for two days, romance, did you say? In the film it moreover plenty of romance and as many laughs.

Miss Colbert has the role of a young actress who makes a bet with her producer that she can make woman-hating Lowe, just back from a South American expedition, propose to her. The stake is a coveted role. She misleads the unsuspecting Lowe into making love to her, and wins her bet.

When Lowe discovers the trick, however, he employs South American methods in his retaliation. He kidnaps the lovely Miss Colbert, who, in the course of her deception has fallen in love with him, packs her into his autogiro and sears away to a deserted cabin in the Adirondacks.

At least he thought it was deserted. For that's where the fun and the thrills begin. Stuart Erwin, who plays the role of an amorous Jonathe with a Napoleon complex, has taken possession of the cabin, and when he finds it with his Napoleonic tactics. A pair of drunks, and Miss Colbert's maid complete the further complicate the fast-moving action that precedes the long embrace.

An exceptional program of junior features has been arranged for the presentation, headed by the favorite of ten million movie fans, Eddie Cantor, in a funny song-filled offering titled "Insurance". Andy Clide and a host of Mack Sennett bathing beauties star in "Heavens, My Husband", the popular Belle two-reeler. Both these fine events will also be exhibited on the same program.

Dressmaker Tonight.

Each lady attending the Belle tonight will be presented with a choice dressmaker pin, by the courtesy of the managements of the management.

The fast-moving thriller, "Sky Bride", featuring Richard Arlen, Jack Oakie and Virginia Bruce, closes a highly successful engagement at the Belle tonight. The picture offering is augmented by the presentation of "Hollywood Luck", an original and funny comedy of the studios, the Metrotone News, and Screen Souvenirs, with its glimpses of interesting and amusing "shots" from pictures of the 1907 vintage.

Harold Barrett and Cliff McCormick in a delightful harmony offering were cordially received at the performances on the holiday, this portion of the program will again be repeated tonight.

FORGET ANIMALS AT MOVING TIME

Cases of Cruelty Brought to Attention of Montreal Society

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL, May 24.—Remembrance of dogs and cats during the moving period this May was urged upon the League for Justice to Animals to-day. 100,000 letters have been sent to public to give greater consideration to these dumb creatures who cannot look after themselves. Special cards are printed in English and French, one side of which is being made to resemble a dog and the other a cat and were distributed by aeroplane. This was done with a view to attracting the attention of children.

One case of cruelty brought to the attention the society was that of a police-type dog left locked in a city flat with seven puppies of about two weeks old. The animal had her pups had nothing to eat or drink for two days before her cries finally attracted attention. The puppies, when rescued, were in such a state that they had to be destroyed.

In another instance a dog was found in a flat in which a cat who evacuated is a week before his time had expired. The landlord was reluctant to break in under the circumstances but found the kitten finally forced and the animal saved. There have been many cases also in which valuable pets have turned loose by prospective movers, the league reports.

AMELIA'S REASON

London, May 23 (A.P.)—The real reason Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam flew the Atlantic alone was to escape some nasty things men say about women aeroplane pilots and women automobile drivers, she stated today.

The League of Nations' failures are due to the fact that the members of the Assembly and Council have not the courage to do a thing simply because it is right. It is the gospel of expediency that rules.—Lord Dickinson.

Her excellent performances in "Front Page" and "Waterloo Bridge" were not chances . . . she is consistently good. Walter Byron proves that the Jerry Dexter part capably; he is an interesting leading man, while Jameson Thomas is sufficiently suave as Arthur Philips.

The gift of silverware to be presented to the ladies on Thursday night will be a dessert fork.

At The Capitol

"THREE WISE GIRLS" STARS COMES TO TWO BRITISH

Out of the five stars playing in "Three Wise Girls" at the Capital today and Thursday (Universal Gift Night) three are British. These are Walter Byron, whom we saw in "The Lion and the Lamb" recently at the Capitol—he was born in London, England; Jameson Thomas, also born in London, England, and Marie Prevost who first saw the light of day in Sarnia, Ontario.

"The other two leading characters in "Three Wise Girls" are Jean Harlow and Mae Clarke.

"Three Wise Girls" Reviewed.

Scintillating, humorous, yet definitely serious, "Three Wise Girls" prove to be a genuinely entertaining good. Walter Byron was made in the selection of "the three wise girls," Mae Clarke, Jean Harlow and Marie Prevost. Individually they contribute interesting performances; the combination of the three is assets. Jean Harlow is cast in a sympathetic role and demonstrates that she is ideally suited to it. This picture should help her erase the stigma of "bad girl" parts.

The film relates the adventures of three girls in the city. Their friend, Gladys Kane, who is hopelessly in love with Arthur Phelps, is lured to the mansion of the matinee Gladys in grand style.

Gladys Kane learns that Jerry is married, she is advised by Gladys to "play" him up. Gladys does not want Cassie to fall into the same sort of "mess" as she is in. Jerry Dexter, Phelps effects a reconciliation with his wife, Gladys commits suicide. Cassie is so disgusted with her life in the big city that she returns to her home town. The picture ends happily however. Jerry finally gets a job for Cassie on a picture and he comes to Cassie to claim her for his wife.

Excellent comedy is introduced in the amorous adventures between and stables of William McQuade, one and a half miles east of Omemee. A high wind was blowing and great difficulty was experienced in saving the house, also the barns and house of Albert McDonnell, who lives across the road. McQuade's loss was very heavy as a large amount of machinery was burnt, also 30 pigs and a number of calves.

She made friends easily. Her early school years were full of adventures and encounters. She would bring children home from the street; she would venture into the hidden neighborhood and return gayly, the undisputed leader of what looked very like a gang of hoodlums. Her mother was never punished and expostulated in vain.

"But you have your own friends, Joyce!"

"Not as nice as Norrie!"

Norrie was a small Irish child, with a wide urchin grin, a missing front tooth, flaming hair and a front of brass.

"But Norrie is not a nice little girl, my dear. She—Surely," asked Mrs. Sheldon in despair, "surely you see the difference?"

"You said we were all equal in God's sight, Grannie!"

"Well, what was one to do? Reject all that sheer on one hand and caste on the other. Mrs. Sheldon surveyed the child with unveiled horror, with, perhaps, a stifled pride, for Jasmine's first child looked a little champion. From whence did she have those long dreamy blue eyes—ideals? Not, surely, from the Lennox or Sheldon side. And not Louisa herself, from the Howlands. The Howlands had not possessed dreams. They had a keen sense of class distinction. This was a development not to be laid at Elizabeth's door.

It was plain that Joyce enjoyed observing the lower and human manner of Norrie's teeming household. The noisy, slatternly mother, the good-natured, shirt-sleeved father, the reek and dirt and laughter amused her. Yet she was intelligent enough to realize that what became Norrie so well, what lent her a certain fascination, was not for Joyce. Her own manners did not suffer, she did not emulate Norrie in accent or bearing. She simply liked her and observed her and Norrie, for some occult reason, found no cause to resent this.

Joyce had always thought vaguely about her mother's grandmother. Growing up, her thoughts became clear, clean-cut. Grandmother punished. Mother did not. Grandmother was the court of last resort. Mother had no standing in court. Grandmother was succinct, understanding. Mother was gentle, affectionately tactless—when grandmother wasn't around—arms about you, a sudden caress, a kiss. But grandmother was always the same, cold, invincible, a person who listened to you, endorsed you, reprimanded you, short, a person you could depend upon. Mother was never in the foreground—exactly. She was remote, she was withdrawn. She was, it seemed, frightened.

Frightened of what?

Other girls' mothers were different. Joyce, decided at last and decided irrevocably, as girls will, to screw the resentment.

Another thing. Mother didn't talk about father to Joyce but grandmother did. Joyce had his picture, a young face looked out at her from a strip of cardboard. Gradually he became a hero to her. Hazard grandmother never tired of talking of him.

"He was your little boy—like I'm your little girl?"

"As my like, Joyce. Yes, my little boy."

Oh, Louisa, how your heart broke—twenty times a day. The child's hands folded about the picture, the child's clear, unimpassioned voice, putting the childish questions. And how good that heartbreak was!

Lennox—you understand. I've forgiven you! You've left me ish, Lennox—this darling revenge.

It had been only—almost laughably so. She had never once tried to assert her claim. She blended quiet girl moving about the dark house. It was as though she had no part in the child, tacitly admitted it, was reconciled. Yet she was not reconciled. Louisa knew that shrewdly. Sooner or later, it must come to a clash between them, and the elder woman was content knowing she held the conquering weapons.

Clash or not the first seven years were of unrest, imprisonment and those years Louisa, undisputedly ruled.

Their mutual routine was very placid. Visitors in town, broken before Joyce went to school, by trips to the South, Summers, Joyce, in the ugly, ornate house Mrs. Sheldon bought in Connecticut; a house with the lines of a handbag, a great porte-cochere, mansard roofs and mid-Victorian furniture. But the ground was not far away, there were lawns and trees and lovely gardens, and it was not greatly distant from the place where the Gastons, the Harrimans and the Van Alstynes summered.

"I saw Louisa Sheldon yesterday —she ages very little," people, at tea on some one's veranda, would comment.

"The child is a handful. She challenged my Tony to a bicycle race last week and a tree climbing test the week before. I'm not sure that means the true business, and would have won the race, he reported, but she fell off. What? Oh, not at all—picked herself up, brushed that mass of hair out of her eyes and laughed."

"Aren't they wonderful?" asked someone, a newcomer, "Mrs. Sheldon and her son's wife——"

"Naomi and Ruth——"

"Such devotion!"

"Envy? Oh! I doubt it. She's had opportunities. I have heard. I'm like that type, you know—and she's young, but she'll never leave Louisa."

"I wonder——"

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

Some one else wondered, had been wondering for some time. Ernest Sheldon, sitting in his office, stirred restlessly.... vocally Elizabeth remarry?

When had he first admitted in her with his friend's widow? He could not have said—he had never forgotten that glimpse of her, leaning from the carriage that wrought her home from the church. It had pierced his heart, an anthemic pang of beauty. But it hadn't happened then, he thought. Perhaps...After Lennox came back from England with the child. He had called at the house, had seen her drifting silently about the great rooms, a pale girl in a black frock. She did not look like a widow. The parlor maid was sometimes faintly stained with pink. He could not saw her, in his heart, as that stricken, uncomplaining figure.

He knew Lennox Sheldon—now he loved Lennox Sheldon's young widow. If a decent mourning would be a little glad, if he knew.

And Elizabeth?

He did not see her alone, often. Almost always she was with Naomi, then she—Ruth, he termed her, in—Naomi's absence. He was a man. He had never liked her. He was a young man with a clear ponderous but sound turn of mind. He hadn't needed Lennox Sheldon to see what she'd done to Lennox.

He might have pointed out to Elizabeth that she was free to come and go as she pleased—a married woman with a child—no girl to be chaperoned, and guarded and followed up. Yes, somehow he did not suggest this.

He had no belief in the Ruth and Naomi legend. He knew, he thought, he knew, that Elizabeth was afraid of her mother-in-law. He thought he could explain that—her youth when she had come to the Sheldon household, her years of being dominated, her tragedy, her financial dependence. He wanted to take her in his arms and say, "You need never be afraid any more."

He wanted, dreadfully, to teach her the ways of laughter. It seemed to him that she never laughed, not really. He wanted to awaken her to life. She was a statue, walking.

They had always been good friends, in a quiet sort of way.

Seven years — eight years — and then suddenly it was ten years and the Sheldons were back in the hideous, comfortable Connecticut house and people were making speeches in the town hall and working with the Red Cross, and half a dozen men from the summer colony had vanished, and were driving ambulances and some were flying with the R.F.C.

Joyce bounded into her grandmother's room.

"If I were grown up—and a doctor—I could go to France!"

She had a private hospital in the disused barn. There she tended an assortment of patients, broken-limbed dolls, stray dogs, a sparrow with a hurt wing. She had, at ten the hands of the healer.

This was in 1918.

Elizabeth thought, pushing the morning papers aside. I can't pretend to be—for years—all those boys—killed— mangled—dying——

"Why don't you go, Mother?" Joyce asked her once.

"Where?"

"To France, and nurse, Mrs. Elder has and Miss Howells."

Elizabeth shook her head. Mrs. Sheldon remarked, poured the tea. "Your mother has had no training, Joyce."

"She could learn."

rs. Sheldon answered, it seemed, Elizabeth said nothing. Frowned at the paper again, distastefully. Joyce thought—oh, she hates blood. She fainted that day I cut my hand—she isn't like me and Granny.

Contempt for her mother stirred in her heart. She turned to her grandmother, demanded abruptly, confidently, "You go!"

Mrs. Sheldon sneered. It seemed. regretfully.

"I'm too old, my dear."

Her tone seemed to add, with understanding—and you're too young.

Joyce looked at her in exasperation. Old? Why, of course she was old. But somehow it had never before occurred to the child.

Mrs. Sheldon rose.

"I am going down to the Red Cross rooms. Would you care to come with me, Joyce?"

"Oh, Granny!"

The blue eyes shone. Of course they wouldn't let her help, but she could sit there in that atmosphere of game and unleashed emotion and gaikum, and watch. Perhaps, if she were very good, they'd let her do something, a very little. Granny had shown her how to make those little sponges. You turned them inside out like a glove.

After luncheon they set off in the car, the two of them sitting there, straight backed, a shepherd on one another. Elizabeth turned from the window.

After a time she went out into the garden. She had been permitted some freedom there. She might give orders to the gardener, might cut flowers, might arrange them in baskets and vases. Mrs. Sheldon was pleased to allow her daughter-in-law such small, unimportant, decorative duties.

Day in, ay out, month and year. Her own mother, dead, her sisters married and away. Alice in the West with her university professor. Fanny in Boston with her young engineer.

No one belonged to her any more. She heard a car come up the drive. Some one for Louisa. Tired, a little warm, she went deep into the garden and sat down upon the long, rustic bench, under an arbor of cool, climbing green vines. She laid the flowers she had gathered beside her in their flat basket, stripped off her gloves.

"They told me I'd find you here." Ernest——

None other.

He sat on bench her, big, solid, almost as blonde as she.

"Are you going to the Country Club to-night?"

She looked at him in amazement.

"But I never——"

"Oh, I know—you never," he interrupted, laughing. "Come, why not? It will do you good."

He could not add, "Ten years is a long time, Elizabeth."

She looked at him a moment, silently. To—dance? To hear music that meant something personal to her? To listen, as usual, to laugh, to forget, a very little?

"But I don't know the new dances, Ernest. It's so long."

"Too long," he replied, steadily, his mouth a little hard under the small, blonde mustache, "far too long. But the dances don't matter anatom. You'd catch on in a second. Oh, do come."

Pains Across Back

St. Catharines, Ont.—"Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets were so beneficial to me that I advise any one who has bad kidneys, to give them a trial," said Mrs. Lois Grimes of 12 Seneca St.

"I was suffering with my kidneys, they did not function properly, I seemed to be constipated and were sore, I had pains across my back that were an nerves at times I could scarcely straighten up. THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 32.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

That which filled the lad with excitement was the fresh spoor of men—of white men, for among the prints of naked feet were the outlines of shoes. The trail marked the passage of a good-sized company, headed north, probably toward some coast settlement, the boy thought. He was all eagerness to be off in pursuit. The old ape objected. He wanted nothing of men. To him the lad was a fellow ape, for he was the son of the king of apes.

He tried to dissuade the boy, but without success. A few hours later they came upon the rear guard of the white man's caravan he was so anxious to overtake. Stumbling along the tangled trail of those ahead, a dozen heavily laden blacks were being prodded mercilessly forward. On each side of them walked two giants, blond white men, both using heavy whips on the naked backs of the poor natives. The boy's cry of greeting died on his lips. Even the great ape growled beneath his breath at the useless torture being inflicted. "So these are the creatures you would go with?" he muttered to the lad. "They ARE fiends," replied the boy, "but I will get them where is the nearest port, and then, Akut, we can leave them." He sprang to the ground, starting at a brisk walk toward the "safari." He was a hundred yards away, perhaps, when one of the whites caught sight of him.

The man gave a shout of alarm, instantly levelling his rifle upon the boy and firing. The bullet struck just in front of its mark, scattering turf and leaves against the boy's legs. A second later the others were firing hysterically at him. Jack leaped into a tree, unlimbs, the ape climbing excitedly after him. As the two disappeared, so quickly and in such a manner, the white men and natives huddled together to determine just what to do.

Four of Picnic Party Killed as Falling Elm Hits Truck on Highway

Homeward-Bound Young People Crushed Near Hawkesbury

TWO NEAR DEATH

Jobless Man Riding on Bumpers Killed By Fall Near Whitby

HAWKESBURY, Ont., May 26.—(CP)—Crushed under a huge elm tree which toppled onto their truck as it sped along the highway, four persons were killed most of them early last night. Two 14-year-old boys in Hawkesbury Hospital with injuries which may cause their deaths.

The dead: Lucien Lachaine, aged 23, Andres St. Amond, 14; Alphonse Dorocher 16; Paul Emile Larocque, 19.

Marcel St. Amond, 14, and Rolland Quinnet, 14, are the boys critically hurt.

The truck driven by William St. Amand, father of two of the boys was returning a Victoria Day picnic party from Hawkesbury to their homes in Chute-a-Blondeau, Ont. The boys had gone there to see the Carillon, Que., and had returned to Hawkesbury by motor.

A sudden gust of wind blew one of the huge trees which line the highway at this point across the back of the truck, pinning the six to the truck floor.

Pinned to Road

The heavy tree then swept the dead and injured from the back of the truck to the road, down a steep duck board, and pinning them beneath it on the road. Other occupants of the truck escaped injured.

Train Kills Jobless Man

WHITBY, Ont., May 26.—The breaking of a coupler on a C.N.R. freight train proved fatal to Leonard Plack, a young unemployed Englishman who was riding the bumpers from Belleville.

Plack, who has no particular address, boarded the train at Belleville, with Thomas Brown, another unemployed man. They were en route to Toronto in search of work. The flat car on they were riding separated, several others and Plack and his companion and at the rear end of the car. Brown sitting directly above the coupler, while Plack was at his side with his legs dangling over the edge.

Near Port Union, nine miles west of here, the front coupler of the flat car parted. The emergency brakes automatically came on with such force that both Plack and Brown were thrown forward. Plack fell beneath the wheels of the car and his body was badly crushed, while the falling his head was badly injured. Brown had a miraculous escape as he was on the coupler and was not forced from being run over.

As soon as the train had been brought to a stop Brown notified the train crew and the injured man was rushed to the Oshawa General Hospital where he died this morning. A jury was empanelled by Dr. F. J. Rundle, Oshawa coroner, and after viewing the remains adjourned for a week.

Brown is being held as a witness. Plack, who was aged 26, had been in Canada several years, having up until a few months been employed on a farm north of Toronto. He has relatives in England.

LONDON VICTIM DEAD

St. Thomas, May 26.—Robert Charlton 39, of London, Ont., died in the Memorial Hospital yesterday morning at 2.30 o'clock as a result of injuries sustained when he was struck by a car, said to have been driven by Stanley Dean, also of London, in Port Stanley on Sunday night, as he was walking along the beach drive with Miss Daisy Austin, of London. Both young people were crushed about the head and body. Charlton died without regaining consciousness. Miss Austin, who is still in a state of coma, was considered the more critically injured of the two, and more concern was felt for her. Hospital authorities late today reported her condition practically unchanged with a slight restlessness apparent. The extent of her injuries has not yet been determined.

Derby, England, May 25. — Two telephone operators wearing bathing suits at waist-deep in water to keep the telephone service at Driffield going yesterday. The two young ladies volunteered because that was the only way service could be maintained, since the flood waters, which have spread over the Driffield plain area of Derbyshire, have put 200 miles of telephone lines out of use as communication is concerned.

Some 8,000 American missionaries are said to be at work in foreign lands.

AGED SKIPPER OLDEST LIVING MASON IN N.S.

Captain D. C. Fraser, at 94- Says Work Keeps Him Fit

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX, N.S. — Good manual labor is the best recipe for health, in the opinion of Captain D. C. Fraser of Chance Harbor, Pictou County, who went to sea when he was 16, sailed for 58 years and still is active at the age of 94.

"I may not keep quite a day in three years," he told a recent caller who found him at the door of his workshop. Within the shop a farm cart, the woodwork of which had been fashioned by his hand, was nearing completion.

He rises at the stroke o'clock in the morning and seldom retires before midnight. Taking a keen interest in the affairs of the community, he attends most of the local meetings and functions, and it is not often he misses a birthday party. He is an ardent Liberal, but has never performed on proceedings of legislature and parliament.

He is hailed as the oldest living Freemason in Nova Scotia. The degrees of the order were conferred upon him at Pictou town in 1865.

Once a summer comes to see him, he goes to New Glasgow, a town about eight miles from his home, and looks after his affairs in a business-like manner.

Captain Fraser is a grandson of Duncan Fraser, who came out of Inverness, Scotland, on the ship Hector, which touched at Halifax on the way to Pictou with a load of settlers. His father, John Fraser, settled at Chance Harbor, where his boy, Daniel C., was born and learned to toss the line at the age of seven.

He began his long sea-faring career in 1853, as apprentice to a pilot of Pictou. He was called out of Pictou on the Witch of the Waves, commanded by Captain John Fraser. This vessel was built by John Fraser, brother of the captain, from timber cut on the Fraser homestead. His next berth was on the Pictou Packet, under Captain Currie, whose son went to the Ada Purvis, Captain Hugh Graham. After serving two years of cossting, he joined the brig Tancred, Captain Kirkpatrick, in 1856. The next year found him in the Light Pus, again under Captain Currie, in the West Indies trade.

In 1861 he took his first command, on the brig Ida, in the lucrative coastal coal to Boston during the American Civil war. In 1862 he was second mate on the Edgar Cecil, Captain Anderson, in the Dominion to the relief of the enterprise and have it from the very power in Toronto." James S. Woodsworth, Winnipeg Laborite, said it should be a "sorry triumph" if Sir Herbert Holt of Montreal gained control of Beauharnois.

The Conservative State pleaded for an opportunity for the House to harmon bondholders to share the prosperity on a paying basis. Armand Lavergne, Deputy Speaker of the House and Conservative member for Montmagny, Quebec, placed himself on record as in accord with the Progressives.

Debate Many Subjects.

The House spent Empire Day debating a wide variety of topics in a desperate effort to arrange for prorogation today or tomorrow. Practically without discussion a bill was approved setting up the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission to regulate a state-controlled system.

Miss Agnes MacPhail, Canada's only woman member of parliament proposed an elaborate program of farm relief, expressing regret "the government had made no pronouncement of a policy calculated to restore the purchasing power of the agricultural industry." Miss MacPhail outlined several suggestions, included in the program was National control and inflation of currency, reduction of farm indebtedness and interest rates; international agreements respecting tariffs; creation of an export marketing board and exemption from dumping duties of foreign goods received by exchange for Canadian agricultural products. The Saskatchewan member also urged that the Hall program will be debated further today.

Tempers ran high in a spirited prelude to the passing of the three-percent excise tax announced in the Rhodes Budget. Rt. Hon. Mackenzie suggested British goods be exempted from the impost as an Imperial gesture. Premier R. B. Bennett labelled this "fine talk" and accused the Opposition leader of attempting to make political capital out of the Imperial economic conference.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former Minister of Justice, took up the cudgels on behalf of his leader and charged the Prime Minister with "throwing a heap of abuses" on the shoulders of King, instead of giving reasons why the suggestion should not be adopted.

Royal Commission for Probe Into Beauharnois Activity Asked by the Progressives

Minister Thinks Inquiry Inopportune at Present

MOVE REJECTED

Garland Claims Beauharnois Structure is Illegal

Ottawa, May 25 (CP)—A Royal Commission to investigate Beauharnois affairs and the operation of the Hydro Electric Commission scheme by the Dominion under a Federal Hydro Electric Commission was urged in the House of Commons yesterday by members of the Progressive group. In turning down the Hall-Garland suggestion, Hon. Charles H. Cahan, Secretary of State said it was "the appeal of the ordinary burglar when he enters a house to take property he knows does not belong to him."

Robert Gardiner, head of the United Farmers led the Beauharnois attack Charges and sensational statements were thrown across the floor but a snag was encountered by the gingerites when Mr. Speaker George Black ruled out of order a motion embodying the two major proposals.

Through the sale of the bonds, money was secured by Beauharnois from the investing public "under false pretences," charged Mr. Gardiner. One of his followers, E. J. Garland, Bow River, said the time had arrived for the Dominion to take control of the enterprise and have it from the very power in Toronto." James S. Woodsworth, Winnipeg Laborite, said it should be a "sorry triumph" if Sir Herbert Holt of Montreal gained control of Beauharnois.

MONUMENT TO NORSEMEN IS PLAN IN N. S.

SITE CONTROVERSY

Opinions Conflict as to Where Famous Explorer First Landed

(By The Canadian Press)

HALIFAX, N.S.—That Nova Scotia is the "Markland" visited by Norsemen more than nine hundred years ago seems to be pretty well established in many minds in this province by the sea. The argument is about a suitable location for a monument to Leif Erickson and his crew of adventurers.

There are conflicting opinions in regard to where the Norsemen landed. Some say Upper Prospect, Halifax County, is the place and point out in their claims for Sandy Point, Shelburne County, Seal Island, Shelburne County, and Truro, Yarmouth County, also are mentioned. All may be right, but that suggestion does not solve the monument problem.

Just now the argument seems to be between two veteran scribes, M. H. Nickerson, former editor of the Shelburne Coaster, now residing in Gloucester, Mass., and W. D. Taunton, of the Halifax Herald, Mr. Nickerson believes Seal Island, in Halifax Harbor, is the spot where the Norsemen landed.

Mr. Taunton declares the Norsemen never got as far south as Halifax but lived there for some years. He would erect the monument there and not on Seal Island, Mr. Nickerson says:

"I wonder how Mr. M. H. Nickerson got it into his head that George's Island is the proper place to erect a monument to Leif Erickson. That Island has been known for hundreds and years ago by its undisputed fact. But there is nothing to show that the landed on George's Island or any other part of Halifax Harbor. A former British Consul has written a book which he published last year, in which he claims that Leif and his crew landed at Shelburne Cosstguard claims he landed near Sandy Point and states that others claim he landed somewhere on Cape Island or in the vicinity of Tusket. As a matter of fact, there is abundant evidence that the Norsemen not only landed at what is now Upper Prospect, Halifax County, but in the year 1121, in answer to the British Consul's contention, I have in my possession the actual landing place of the Norsemen's official correspondent in a letter to the Baron Breadal, gave the name of Rev. Fr. R. F. Walsh, parish priest of West End Prospect, now of Powell River, B.C., who has given me the information that he and others had discovered the original landing place and went to Prospect village and that there was every evidence that the Norsemen landed on some point on the spot which is now known as Upper Prospect. Father Walsh stated in the fact that the environments of Prospect village and harbor remain today there is none, but occasionally ancient stumps are dug up. It was the opinion of Father Walsh that the white spruce for the making of ships and sent to Europe, and that they lived and carried on their business at the same time that supply of white spruce was exhausted. The ancient Norsemen, Father Walsh Cragg claims that he and others discovered should be fairly good proof of the statement that the carvers of 1,000 years ago tarried long at Prospect, and that there is no evidence to show that they were ever in Halifax Harbor. The monument is to be erected to commemorate the landing of Leif Erickson on Nova Scotia and that Prospect should be selected as the proper place. Upper Prospect is only 31 miles from Halifax and is in Halifax County and it would not be a bad idea for any doubting Thomases to jump in their autos and run out there as soon as [illegible] roads are dried up. It's an interesting place, anyway, and well worthy of a visit, especially in the good old summer time."

To which Mr. Nickerson replies as follows:

"I am your reference to me doesn't cause me any worry; but how, as a worthy citizen, I object that could you state that port by and hit on a dump cove as the cairn site? That would be placing the cart before the water is bushel, but a peck measure. I selected Seal Island for the site because the work could be seen and admired by the crews of passing ships; but now I am suggesting to the city council, which has voted endorsement, that Point Pleasant Park be selected as the best spot for the monument to stand and tried the pedestal or base to contain the names of the Norsemen that were reformerly sailed out of Halifax across the Atlantic. That would also give the land throngs as the Czaba at Mecca draws the Islamic devotees, and with the monument but never mind, old chappie; go in with me and we'll make money. I'm not to die and your city, dismissing Pegg's Cove from your mind forever."

Mr. Taunton again:

"I hope my friend did not take my remarks in a personal sense. He is a man for whom I have the highest regard and admiration. He has always been a friend of the shore fishermen, and goodness knows if there is one thing they lack it is friends. And in this connection I rather fail to grasp his suggesting that the real landing place of the Norsemen should be passed over because it is a "dump cove". It is true Prospect is a fishing village, pure and simple, but if it is the intention or desire to place the monument not at the place where the landing was made, but where it will be seen and admired by the most people, then why not place it up in Ottawa? The Historical Society has been placing tablets on many old and in some cases unsightly buildings throughout the city, making the place look more historic or so and so. Would Mr. Nickerson have them place the tablets, say, on the Government House or the Provincial Building? But why drag Pegg's Cove into the discussion? That charming and highly interesting spot is not claiming the honor of being the landing place of the Norsemen, like Prospect, which is a fishing village pure and simple. It's a little more than that, C. R." It would be the same with Mr. Nickerson were he to visit it and see its wondrous formation. Its charm of sea and meet its splendid people. Why not invite them to a quarrel over that."

It is Mr. Nickerson's turn at bat.

School Furnace Explodes Following Royal Opening

Plymouth, England, May 25. — Six hours after the Duke and Duchess of York had formally opened the North Prospect school here yesterday, a furnace explosion wrecked a classroom and sent nine persons, three of them children, to hospital. After the Duke and Duchess left, the building was thrown open to inspection by the public. In one crowded classroom the door of a furnace blew off with a blinding flash. The room was filled instantly with smoke and all the windows were shattered. Police rushed in and prevented a general panic, as people struggled for the exits. They rendered first aid to the victims, while ambulances were being rushed to the scene. Only nine of those hurt were in serious enough condition to remain in the hospital. Most of them suffered burns and shock. The three children were burned about their faces.

GOMEZ PAYING DIVIDENDS TO COL. J. RUPERT

LENGTHEN LEAD

Braves Lose But Able to Hold Onto Top Rung

Vernon Gomez, the slim southpaw, who blossomed into one of the game's great hurlers last season after the Yankee treasury had staked him to a $35,000 reinforcement, is paying Col. Jake Ruppert plenty of dividends. He promises at the present rate to overshadow Lefty Grove, Wes Ferrell and all the rest of them before the current race ends.

Gomez pitched a brilliant exhibition yesterday when he struck out thirteen batters and allowed only three hits in beating the Athletics, 3 to 1. In setting the years new strikeout high, Gomez fanned Dykes and Heving each three times, Miller and Bishop twice each, and Foxx, Walberg and Simmons once each.

But for Chapman's muff of Simmons' fly in the seventh, Gomez would have been a shutout. Babe Ruth's 11th home run with two on base gave the league leaders an advantage they never relinquished.

Wes Ferrell could not protect a 6 to 1 lead as Cleveland dropped to 8oz came from the rear to score nine runs in the fifth and seventh frames and defeat Cleveland 11 to 7.

Bob Seed's homer started a five-run rally in the seventh for the Sox and knocked Ferrell from the hill.

Lefty Stewart, former Yale pitching hurler, rang up a 6 to 5 victory over the St. Louis Browns even though he wobbled in the eighth and had to be relieved by Earl Whitehill. Whitehill went to the rescue and fanned Burns and Campbell to end the game. Both runs made only six hits, but they were timely. Washington and Boston were not scheduled.

National League

The Boston Braves dropped a 6 to 3 verdict to Brooklyn but clung to their narrow hold on the National League top spot by a one-game-up Chicago, bowed to St. Louis 8 to 4.

Tight pitching by Van Mungo, Dodger recruit, and timely hitting by Lopez in the first inning with two on base caused the Braves' downfall. Cleveland Cantwell was because four of their pitchers could not check Lopez, Brooklyn shortstop, who had two home runs and a single.

The Cubs piled Phillies into last place with a 10-run attack that included a home run and a single.

Jimmy Wilson's single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning with two on base. Each of the Waner boys collected a pair.

Five Giants' hurlers were plastered for 15 hits as the Pirates smeared their series, 11 to 4. Lee Handley's single with the bases crammed four hits for the winners, while Mel Ott batted two home runs and a single for the losers.

Depaz ran a splendid race however, and the time of O.S.D. boys lead down considerably in the final dash to the tape.

The second place St. Michael's team was composed of T. Maslin, W. Whalen, J. Sheppard and Tony Doyle. The relay team from King George School was the third and last in the race.

Meeting Hoped to Bring Order Out of Chaos, Says Throne Speech

GREATER ERA TO BE

"Form of Closure" Shouts LaPointe to Cahan as Black Rod Knocks

Ottawa, Ont., May 26 (Can. Press)—The belief that the coming Imperial Economic Conference may develop a "vision" which will bring enduring harmony out of economic chaos, and provide the wise and courageous leadership which in other times of universal stress, the world looked for in and obtained from the British peoples," is declared in the speech from the throne closing parliament today.

"Canada believes that the closer economic association of the British Empire will herald the dawn of a new and greater era of prosperity both for ourselves and for all the nations of the earth," the speech concludes.

Optimistic Note.

This optimistic note is carried through the brief speech. "The fortitude and patience with which the Canadian people have endured the trials and hardships of these troublous times is commended. These same qualities, the speech declares, will enable them to surmount with ever difficulties may arise before the return of prosperity.

Legislation Passed.

Governor-General at London Sees Great Promise

SANE OPTIMISM

Many Landmarks in National Life He Tells Audience

London, Ont., May 26 (By The Canadian Press)—"If the conference is going to be a landmark, as we hope and believe it is, it is going to be so, not as the completion of a fabric but rather as the laying of a cornerstone. The building and completion of the fabric will depend on the goodwill and hard work of all of us, as much as does the construction of any other building upon the workmen concerned."

With this sentiment, His Excellency Lord Bessborough, Governor-General of Canada, today discussed the coming Imperial Conference at Ottawa before the Canadian Club here.

Give and Take.

"The spirit of give and take will inspire the Canadian people in the interests of Canada and also in the interests of Empire," declared His Excellency. "Who can tell but that the Empire saving herself by her efforts may not save the world by her example. We ever leadership more pressing than today's the world stunned and reeling as a result of the destructive hammerblow upon it by war, began three years ago to stumble more and more. We all saw things going week by week and month by month from bad to worse, without anyone producing a definite remedy for the situation.

Efforts Continue.

"We have seen during the ten years or so after the close of the great efforts towards the reconstruction of Europe. They still continue. The long vista of international conferences

BRITISH FILMS ARE PRAISED BY I.O.D.E.

Restraint, Softer Outlines Win Popularity

Toronto, May 26—Improved quality of British films is expressed in the report of the film committee, Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, in annual convention here today. The British movies, the committee says are completely changed favorably with those emanating from Hollywood and the English pictures, with their softer outlines, more restraint, are increasing their popularity.

A tribute is paid to the Ontario Motion Picture Bureau, which had supplied numerous films for chapters of the order. The report also consist of a series of moving pictures of visits to Canada by royalty and the particular aspects of each country."

CHURCH TRIAL RUSH CAUSES ALMOST RIOT

Rev. H. F. Davidson Denies Knowledge of Nudity in Picture

STORY BOMBARDED

Says He Thought Girl Wore Bathing Suit Under Shawl

LONDON, May 26—Several young women were injured today while attempting to push their way into Church House, Westminister, where the Rev. H. F. Davidson, 60-year-old rector of Gurfrey, is being tried on charges of immorality.

Sensational testimony during the last few days resulted in a large crowd of spirited spectators when the court reconvening this morning. Inside testimony started yesterday was continued. It revolved about a photograph of the elderly rector with a young girl who, the prosecution indicated, was nude except for somewhat ineffectual draping with a shawl.

Minister Arrested

Repeatedly and heatedly Mr. Davidson denied knowing that, aside from the shawl, the girl was naked. He said he thought she wore a bathing suit, explaining that the picture had been designed to advertise bathing suits. He was bombarded by prosecution questions the general purpose of which was to break down his denial.

WIELDS KNIFE ON CHILDREN

"Mystery Jake" Kills One Girl and Wounds Two Others

Cleveland, May 26—A knife wielder who called himself "Mystery Jake" turned on a group of school children today, stabbed one girl to death and seriously injured two more.

The man captured a few moments later by Patrolman Charles Mischely on school tattle duty nearby, in hundreds of pockets in their way to work gathered and threatened mob action.

"Call to Kill"

The man incoherently muttered that he "had a call to kill millions" and called on the police to shoot him, me, kill me, I have not killed enough."

The dead girl was Rose Elaine Mackin, aged 8. The critically injured were Lena Besand, 12, Rose Marie Parker, 8. They were on their way to St. Cecilia's School near where the attack occurred.

The man who gave his name as Jake Gordon, 40, suddenly plunged into the group of children, wielding a knife, and without warning stabbed the throat of Miss Mackin girl, witnesses said. Then he turned wildly on the other two girls and cut them about the face.

Talks Insanely

Screams of the children attracted Patrolman Mischely, who pulled his gun and fired as the man was in the middle of the street. The attacker continued to run, however, and was suffering from a dislocated shoulder as well as the various other injuries, received. The Weber family will be able to resume their journey to their summer camp at Bon Echo, where they have camped during the summer months for some years past. On their way to the camp last year, Mr. Weber had the misfortune of turning his ankle with the result that he was laid up for almost the entire first month of their stay in Canada. Mrs. Weber after receiving medical attention was able to accompany her family to their summer residence at Bon Echo.

Mrs. Weber was taken to Dr. J. J. Robertson's office where, after an X-ray had been taken, it was discovered that she was suffering from a dislocated shoulder as well as the various other injuries, received. The Weber family will be able to resume their journey to their summer camp at Bon Echo, where they have camped during the summer months for some years past. 13th Rib is Still Cause of Much Trouble to Man

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 26.—Medical science has found in some modern men the thing "Adam a ribs to droop and the pressure of the extra rib on an important artery is accentuated. It is liable to cause pain and a variety of circulatory and nervous disorders," he said, "a recent exposition at the Cleveland Clinic was told. The pressure on the artery may completely injure."

Twelve ribs are enough for a human being, he said. The physicians agreed.

COW MOOSE ON HIGHWAY AT MURPHY'S CORNERS EYES CAR

Jim Curran of the Soo Star may have stories of bears and wolves of the north but today the County of Hastings has a Moose story and that is news. Alex Munro, Million Brough and H. L. Thompson of Bancroft had occasion to believe that moose are as timid about as witnesses in a civil action and had the experience of their lives when they came upon a two year old cow moose calmly standing in the middle of the road and not the least bit disturbed. The moose was seen about three miles north of Murphy's Corners, which is about fifty-five miles north of this city. After viewing the car and occupants for a short time, the moose leisurely trotted through a swale and into the higher ground, where she was still in sight and again peacefully viewed the surroundings. Later it trotted off in the bush. Mr. Munro stated the moose appeared to be in first class condition and from its appearance had probably been over in this section for some time. Nobody likely the moose has been driven from the far north by excessive bush fires. It is an uncommon occurrence to see a moose so far south as this point and it is to be hoped it will miss the fire of a hunter's rifle and live to increase the population of moose, which is fast disappearing by the inroads of civilization.

Greatest Forest Fire Hazard Faces Province North Vast Tinder Bed

Ontario Takes Steps to Battle Menace of Drought

WINDS ARE HIGH

Conditions in Tweed District Reported to Be Favorable

Toronto, May 26—Facing one of the greatest forest fire hazards in years, Ontario today took steps to save her forest wealth. Unusually dry weather, coupled with high winds, have turned the province into a tinder box of vast bed of tinder, and numerous fires are burning.

A provincial-wide survey was made by Hon. William Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests today, and the following report issued to

No Rain in Temagami

"Temagami-no rain fell in the Temagami district and the fire hazard conditions are very high. This morning's reports indicate the possible shifting of the wind to the north, which is favorable. Twenty-eight fires have occurred in this district and thirty-four have been extinguished and twelve are under control today. The Dymond, McNish and Gibbons townships were still burning around the high wind but is hoped to hold them. In McNish township there are three camps still burning. Camp Service I of the George Gibbon Company has burned over 1,000 acres and of W. R. Taylor, in Gibbons township, one camp is burning. In Cassela township there are three pumps and 120 men and in Lorrain township three pumps and fifty

Debt Agreement With U. S. Signed Next Week

Paris, May 26—A debt agreement with United States similar to that negotiated by Great Britain this week will be signed by France next week providing for payment of its war debt annually which was waived by the Hoover moratorium, the foreign office announced today.

The agreement between Et Finances Ajeee said today the arrangement would provide for repayment of the French annuity as four per cent over a period of ten years.

RAINFALL WELCOME IN NORTH DISTRICT

Sun baked fields in the district surrounding the city were today eagerly absorbing the moisture of a gentle summer rain which had begun to fall early this morning, and later the better part of the morning, to the delight of the farmer's prayer, declare local agriculturists.

Great relief is also being experienced by gardeners in the back sections of the county, who point to the fact that the thick evening dry leaves and dead pine needles on the floor of the bush, as well as the dry branches on the trees themselves, will now be saturated with moisture to prevent any fire menace, which has been hovering over the wooded sections.

Private Practice is Doomed State Medicine in 50 Years

PREVENTION WORK

Toronto, May 26—Within 50 years, perhaps within the next decade, be eliminated, and only state and preventive medicine will exist, predicted Dr. J. H. Radford, in his presidential address at the Ontario Health Officers' Association here today. With the Ontario Medical Association is holding its annual convention.

Dr. H. B. Van Wyck, Toronto, appraised for enlargement of the scope of public health activity to deal more directly with the maternal welfare problem, and with the statistical information on maternal and infant deaths, he suggested. He said. An important function of organized public health work was the control of preventable he thought, and much maleading information eliminated.

U. S. SENATORS RESTORE TAX ON COSMETICS

Revenue Bill Before Body Today and Debate is Heated

REVENUE SOUGHT

Senators Take Up Challenge and Attack Proposals of Measure

WASHINGTON, May 26 — The U.S. Senate restored the 10 percent tax on cosmetics and toilet articles to the Revenue Bill today in a drive to add new funds to the budget balancing legislation.

Within a few minutes after the finance committee recommended restoration of a batch of Excise Taxes carried by the House of Representatives Bill but not in the compromise Senate measure, the Senate began carrying out the programme. The cosmetics and toilet preparations levy was put back in the bill without even a record vote. They added $20,000,000 in revenue to the bill.

$9 Million Revenues

The changes approved by the committee were estimated to produce $50,000,000 of revenue.

The 10 per cent jewelry tax was restoring to the Revenue Bill.

It also refused to act as did the committee recommendation to exempt Sterling Silver from the Jewelry Tax.

So fast was the Senate working that leaders on both sides of the aisle finally asked for order to find out what was going on.

Over 200 interested and amused patrons were present and enjoyed the comedy to the utmost. Between acts Mr. W. Norris sang a solo while Alex. Dandie and orchestra entertained the audience with a piano solo. This was the final appearance of the play and the members of the cast have had the privilege of placing the production in six out-of-town theatres besides playing it twice to local audiences.

His car came into collision with a tree and slight damage was done to the right front fender.

"Cochrane District.—"Conditions in this district are fair and there have been scattered showers thru' the week. A number of fires have occurred but they are all out or under control at present.

"The situation in Temagami still gives the department a great deal of concern, but additional equipment and men are now being rushed into the two or three dangerous spots, and it is hoped to control the situation.

NO RAIN PROMISED

TORONTO, May 26.—Little hope is held at the Meteorological Observatory today for early rains in Northern Ontario, where moisture is urgently needed to check forest fires in check. Although a terrific rain storm swept Southern Ontario last night and early today, no rain fell in the north. Today's "probs" predict fresh winds, partly cloudy and cool today and Friday, for Northern Ontario.

TWEED, May 26.—(Special)—Tweed district fire station had today slacked up to the Ontario Intelligencer that there were a few fires in that district, but they were well under control. Dry undergrowth was given as the cause of a number of small fires which have been burning chiefly in the districts throughout both Townships in the unsettled land of that district. No fresh outbreaks had occurred today and it was believed that by the work of the fire rangers that these fires had been brought under control.

Painting Up? Yes Everything In Room, Even Light Bulbs

Green Everywhere and it Shuts Out Light of Lamp

Suggestion is truly a powerful force—its influence for good or evil is unquestioned; it has accomplished much of both, but in the instance told of here, the influence was too good with the exception of one small detail regarding which as the saying is 'there hangs a tale.'

Clean up—paint up—brighten up! —Here is indeed a clever attractive suggestion—an action stirring—get up and at it! suggestions any event it proved to be such with one young lady in Belleville.

Paint up! Of course she would paint up—she would love to do it; her room needed painting. It needed brightening up and she would do both at once and without any procrastinating and at it she went with grim determination—not visualizing as she worked the beautiful transformation which she was rapidly bringing into effect.

Paint — there was lots of it — a beautiful shade of green, and she painted the walls, the ceiling, the wood work, the bed, the dressing table, the bed side table, and several chairs—all the one beautiful shade of green and then she paused—there appeared to be no article left to paint—but wait—there were the electric light fixtures—they should harmonize with the room and so to them she deftly applied a thick covering of beautiful green paint. Not only did she paint the fixtures and shades, but she painted also the bulbs—they looked so pretty—but "black and black" and here is where the sad part of the story comes in—she had started out to paint up and brighten up—she had painted up' all right but as for 'brightening up', she found when going to her room at night and turning on the lights that she had succeeded to 'brighten up' the electric lights—there appeared hardly a glimmer of light and she realized then that her ambition, energy and artistic taste had carried her just a little too far.

However, it was easy to change the bulbs to nicely frosted ones and now she is able to view and admire her handiwork by night as well as by day.

Obituary

PAUL KINGSTON

Stirling (Special)—A grand old man departed this life on May 24, at 8.30 p.m. in the person of Mr. Paul Kingston, in his 82nd year. He died in his father's old home where he was born and grew up, and except for short intervals resided there all his life, his son, Albert, living on this same farm.

Mr. Kingston was wonderfully active for his age and retained all his faculties, taking a great interest in all that pertained to the welfare of the community and was what might be termed a "young" man at heart, and his younger days he served on the council for many years, having been reeve of Rawdon at one time, a faithful, energetic member of the Methodist Church, now the United Church; an Orangeman and a Conservative in politics.

Three weeks ago he suffered a slight stroke from which he rallied but another one on Sunday resulted fatally. His wife (formerly Miss Hagerman) predeceased a number of years.

There survive three sons, Albert, on the homestead; George A. of Belleville, and Wilmot, near Toronto; also two daughters, Mrs. Ed. Reid, of the Ridge Road, and Mrs. Peters of Regina.

The funeral took place today, (Thursday, May 26), leaving the house at 2 p.m. and services in West Huntingdon United Church.

LATE JAMES H. MOON

The funeral of the late James H. Moon was held yesterday afternoon, from his late residence, 223 Albert St. Many friends and neighbors were in attendance. The Rev. Dr. Bell of Bridge Street United Church conducted the service at the home and at the place of interment in the Belleville cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs I. L. Moore, James Lorimer, Merlyn Wright, Fred Palmer, J. W. Davison and Dr. O. O. Dupraw.

LATE JAMES THOMAS

Mr. George T. Thomas, Cannifton Road, has received a message announcing the death of his brother, James Thomas, last Friday at his home in Newark, Virginia.

The late Mr. Thomas was seventy four years old. Many years ago he resided in Belleville and will no doubt be remembered by some of the older residents of the city, who will regret to learn of his death.

Toronto, May 26—Newly purchased shaving brushes should be regarded as potentially dangerous" declared Dr. A. L. MacNabb, Toronto, in advocating the joint convention of the Canadian Public Health and Ontario Health Officers' association here today on recent cases of anthrex from tannery infections.

Workers handling raw hides should wear gloves, he declared, and prompt medical attention should be given to any abrasions of the skin.

New shaving brushes should be immersed in a 10 percent solution of formalin for 24 hours before being used, he concluded.

Will Focus Searchlight on Middlemen's Profits Statement Made by Weir

Packing Plants Likely to Be Included in Investigation

ANNOUNCEMENT

Matter of Setting-Up Marketing Board Left For Time

OTTAWA, May 26.—To study the whole problem of farm products marketing, both exports and domestic, and to probe the profits of the middlemen, the Bennett Government will appoint an agricultural commission, it was announced yesterday in the House of Commons by Hon. Robert Weir, Minister of Agriculture.

Because it was believed that the British delegates to the Imperial Conference must first be "fully out" before any system of bonusing farm exports was applied, the Government, said Mr. Weir, was of the opinion that the proposal to establish a national marketing board be left until after the Empire gathering here this Summer.

Mr. Weir climaxing a debate which ended in the Government voting down 47 to 17 a Progressive motion of non-confidence in the Government's agricultural policy, gave strong intimation that the packing plants would be included in the scope of the proposed commission's investigation. He affirms d his belief in the efficacy of co-operative marketing of farm products but held that the establishment of co-operatives need not preclude the continuance of independent private interests in the processing industry.

A total of $36,464,060 or an average of $60 per farmer had been put in the pockets of Canadian agriculturists during the past year by reason of the Government's farm policy, Mr. Weir claimed. He instanced the wheat bonus, the fruit and butter policies and the size loan ing plans for livestock, giving figures for each, from which he obtained his estimated total contribution to agriculture.

Against Farm Board Plan

The minister plainly hinted that he was a stronger believer in a national marketing board, such as has been advocated by many Conservative M.P.'s this session, than in a Federal farm board such as the United States has set up to buy surpluses in wheat, cotton and other agricultural products. After pointing out that the Government could not embark on a marketing board "or any system of levying or bonusing" until after the Imperial Conference, he continued.

"Because of the reasons I have stated it has been thought best to appoint a commission to study the whole problem of marketing and the Government intends to appoint such a commission to study these questions, especially in connection with export marketing. It will study the problems of supply and demand and perhaps more particularly the spread in the processing of the major farm products."

Because of scarcely a dozen Liberals were in the House at the time, the division totals on the vote on the non-confidence motion moved by Miss Agnes Macphail were among the smallest of the session. Though many members had gone to their homes last there was a strong suspicion in the galleries that several Conservatives were unwilling to vote with the Progressive and more unwilling to support the Government, sustained their voting in this division.

Miss Macphail's motion ran the gamut of all the Government policies put forward this session by the Progressive group, it called for credit control, for ouvrency inflation to as to bring the Canadian dollar down to the level of sterling, for an export marketing board, for Government aid for farmer-controlled processing plants, for international tariff agreements, for duty-free importations of goods by farmers cooperatives where other goods were exchanged therefor, and, finally, for a relief of the farmer—"of some of the indirect taxation and substituting heavier direct taxation based on the ability to pay."

Liberals Back Progressives

Such Liberals as there were in the House at the time—few Westerners and Quebecers, voted with the Progressives against the Government. Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King and all other Ministers in the former Liberal Cabinet were absent with the one exception of Hon. W. D. Mothervell, former Minister of Agriculture, Mr. Motherwell, who has frequently opposed his utmost cooperation to Mr. Weir in farm matters, nevertheless voted against the administration.

Mr. Weir insisted that the Government, through its tariff policy, had given the farmer the home market, the problem now was to extend markets abroad so as to remove surpluses here and give life to the bonne market. He thought the commission should investigate this.

"I believe," he continued, "that we should have co-operative marketing and co-operative industry, but at the same time I think we would be unwisely advised if we tried to destroy the efficiency of private interests set up by the capital of people who are just as much Canadians and as much interested in the welfare of Canada as we are.

"We should have both, and I believe it will be quite possible with a thorough survey and investigation to work out a spread which would ensure the farmer that no undue profits would be taken from them. That would be the standard for the co-operative enterprise. The latter, on the other hand, would act as a balance wheel against private interests and at the same time it would be a standard by which the private enterprise could measure its work."

KITCHENER YOUTH DROWNS IN GRAND

Almost Pulls Under Chum Who Tries Rescue

Kitchener, May 26.—Wilfred Schlegel, 17-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Schlegel, Kitchener, was drowned yesterday afternoon while swimming in the Grand River near Bogetts farm, off the Brantford highway, two miles from this city.

Schlegel, who was swimming with his chum, Malcolm Williams, was hailed by the latter as he went under. He went to the distressed boy's assistance. Schlegel, who was not a good swimmer, caught Williams by the legs and almost pulled his chum down as well. The drowning occurred in six feet of water.

Some time elapsed before the body was recovered and Drs. Turner and Kalbfleisch and members of the Kitchener fire department worked over it for some time.

No inquest will be held, according to Coroner Dr. Kalbfleisch. Schlegel is survived by his parents, four brothers and four sisters.

The striking workers agreed to resume work immediately pending the outcome of negotiations now being carried on between their representatives and representatives of the National Government.

Purpose to Set "Anglo-Irish Treaty in Proper Place

ASKS ACCEPTANCE

Upper House Adjourns Debate For Week—Opposition Shown

Dublin, Irish Free State, May 26.—President Eamonn De Valera yesterday told the Irish Free State Senate that the object of his Government's bill abolishing the Parliamentary oath of allegiance to the British Crown was not severance of this country from the British Commonwealth of Nations.

Mr De Valera, pleading that the Senate give the bill consideration on its merits, declared its purpose was to prevent the Anglo-Irish treaty of 1921 from being a fundamental document law, and to put it in its proper place as an international instrument.

From a vehement beginning, in which he told the Upper House that only a threat of war with Great Britain induced the Free State people to accept the terms of the treaty, Mr. De Valera settled down to an earnest and detailed exposition of what the bill was intended to bring about.

Attacked by Senators

Not a seat in the Senate was vacant as he began to defend the measure, which has already been subject to vehement attacks by Senators whose political attitudes are more conservative than those of the Republican Administration.

Mr De Valera in the beginning of the question of interference with the treaty did not exist, there would be the unanimous approval of the Bill, which did not affect the relations between the two countries.

The attack on the bill came almost immediately, when Senator Dean Milroy, who escaped with Mr. De Valera from the Irish Capital during the "trouble", referred to it as an act of political jugglery.

Senator James Douglas said all citizens of the Free State were opposed to the oath of allegiance, owing to the "farcical" manner in which it was taken by members of the Legislature.

Suggests Dignified Course

It would be a simple matter, he continued, for the Government to introduce in both Houses a resolution favoring abolition of the oath; and it would have been passed by both Houses. The President could then have requested Great Britain on the issue with full authority.

That, he asserted, would be wise and dignified procedure. But instead the President decided to follow "underhanded" methods and bring about misunderstanding and bad feeling between the Free State and Great Britain.

Mr. De Valera, he said, had failed to grasp the fundamental principles on which the British Commonwealth existed. Those who in Fail (Republican Party) had promised during the election campaign there would be no squabble with Great Britain, but its first action after it came into power had been to break up the essential bond of the British Commonwealth.

"Membership in that Commonwealth means a great deal to the Free State," the Senator declared. "It is the safeguard of our political freedom."

Following discussion, the Senate adjourned debate on the bill until next Wednesday.

COMPENSATION ACT IS HELD ULTRA VIRES

Workmen's Measure Regarded as Usurping Judicial Powers

ONTARIO'S SAME

Quebec Judge Gave Ruling in Case Before Him in Court

Montreal, May 26—The Quebec Workmen's Compensation Commission, as well as part of the Workmen's Compensation Act itself, was declared illegal and unconstitutional yesterday by Mr. Justice De Lorimier of the Superior Court, in a judgment in which he reviewed the whole composition of Canadian courts, asserting the Provincial Legislature for appointing persons who usurped the functions of Judges of the Superior Court," and declared that by so doing the Legislature had flouted the "constitution and independence of His Majesty's Puisne Judges."

Because some acts of the Provincial Legislature had been repudiated by the Federal government or courts, it was not to be assumed that this implied an admission of their validity, Justice De Lorimier wrote in his judgment.

Ultra Vires

Section 36 of the Workmen's Compensation Act declared that compensation for industrial accidents should be sought by application of the Workmen's Compensation Commission. Having declared the Commission itself illegal and the act creating it ultra vires of the Legislature, his Lordship naturally declared the section of the act also ultra vires.

Workmen's Compensation Commissioners, the decision ruled, usurped the functions of Judges of the Superior Court; the Province had no right to name them, and it had no right so doing it took away from the Governor General an exclusive power given to him under the British North America Act. The absence of provision in the Compensation Commission Act for the qualifications of the Commissioners was attacked in the Judgment.

It was pointed out that, under the act, any lawyer or not, could be named to the Commission, even persons who had no qualifications whatever. The Judge also stated that if the Province was left undisturbed in its exercise of "these illegal powers," it could appoint commissions to deal with all the different classes of accidents and take from the Judges of the Superior Court their exclusive right to decide all matters affecting civil rights.

Ex-Ontario Patient

Quebec's Workmen's Compensation Act is practically a copy, barring a few minor clauses, of the law which operates in the Province of Ontario. The Quebec legislation was fashioned after officials from that Province made a lengthy study of the working of the Ontario act.

Colonel W. A. Sinclair, chairman of the Ontario Commission, however, stated last night that his board had always been recognised as "properly qualified" by the courts.

PLANE SENDS OUT S.O.S CALL

May Have Been Forced to Alight Upon Ocean

BOSTON, May 25.—(AP)—An S.O.S. call from the Mail Aeroplane which hopped off today from the deck of the Steamer Europa, en route to Boston was picked up today by the Canadian Marconi station. The call was sent out when the plane was approximately 100 miles from the steamer and 600 miles east of Boston.

United States Coast guard officials, notified of the distress call, broadcast messages to coast guard or other vessels that might be in the vicinity of the plane from which the call for help was dispatched, calling upon such craft to render aid.

They expressed the opinion that the plane had experienced engine trouble and probably had been forced to alight at sea. The plane was equipped with pontoons and should be able to remain afloat, they said, until the Europa overtook it.

The plane was in charge of Lieut. Joachim Buchanberg, with Lieut. Karl Kirchoff as co-pilot and radio operator. They flew the plane on the previous trip and alighted at the Boston airport, having run short of fuel enroute to New York.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The distress signal sent out today by a mail plane slightly more than an hour after it had been catapulted from the decks of the S. S. Europe, recalled the tragedy which attended a similar flight last year when the occupants of the plane were killed in a crash.

MISS JOHNSON AND MRS. PUTNAM CHAT ON FLYING

This is First Meeting of Two Noted Fliers

London, May 26 (AP)— Amy Johnson, Great Britain's noted air woman and Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putnam, Trans-Atlantic flyer met today for the first time.

Miss Johnson, accompanied by her finance, J. A. Mollison, famous British long distance flyer, went to the United States Embassy at Prince's Gate to see Mrs. Putnam. They chatted for a long time and posed for photographers in the garden of the Embassy.

Miss Johnson, who has flown the record time from England to Australia alone, paid the visit at Mrs. Putnam's expressed wish. She had been visiting at the home of Mollison's parents in Scotland and flew down to London for the occasion.

ALMOST A GARRISON

Simcoe, May 26—Simcoe, a town of more than 3,000 population, probably takes its place as the best policed municipality in Ontario, if not in Canada. According to an unofficial estimate, there is one policeman for every 600 inhabitants. At present the officers are comprised of two Provincial constables, one Provincial officer, three highway traffic officers, an O.P.P. motor constable, recently appointed; three town constables, two county constables, and an Excise officer.

With the aid of the "electric eye" it is possible to apply printing coats to lumber automatically and rapidly.

LEARNING FROM BRITISH FILMS

Reports show that British films are making steady progress in Canada. Though the film actors from Britain are not as well known as those of Hollywood, the quality of British acting is slowly but surely telling.

This is very satisfactory to Canadian people who while they enjoy a Hollywood film yet realize that the theatre and the screen of Britain have much to give Canada for the ties which bind us to the Old Land should surely be broad and expansive. They should not only be the ties of business but also the bonds of spirit. In the creation of this spirit and the strengthening of the bonds British theatrical and screen art must play no small part.

Then the British film brings us the language pure and undefiled from the scene where it developed.

Such influences are beneficial to us and serve as protection against too much Americanization of thought to the north of the Forty-Ninth Parallel.

THE DOG AS BENEFACTOR

The dog has won an abiding place in his association with man and almost universally men and women have been found to be dog-lovers all through the course of history. This the dog has won by his fidelity to masters and mistresses.

But another debt is owing to the animal, he has supplied the living body on which experiments in medical science have been carried out. Sir Clifford Allbutt some three years ago that "much of our present day knowledge of medical science is due to experiments upon dogs," and so it places dogs among the greatest benefactors of the human race. The New York Times declares that modern man has greater reason to admit the "equal joy" such creatures faithful unto death than Pope's savage hd. There should be celestial kennels for dogs that have been sacrificed for lengthening human life on earth. One might parody Macaulay to ask how dogs might die better than facing fearful odds for the race that led their wild ancestors out of savagery," comments the Times.

If man has through countless ages of association learned to give the dog a high place in his home, the dog has repaid it as faithfully as he could.

Quoting again from Dr. Flexner, we learn that progress in diabetic control has come as a direct result of experiments upon dogs. The pernicious anemia of disease whose terrors have largely been reduced, thanks to dog subjects. The man who has escaped the perils of blood poisoning owes to the dog an obligation he cannot pay for the knowledge of this malady has been enormously gained from work on dog experimentation. Anthrax, rabies, tetanus, cholera, typhoid, malaria, yellow fever and many other diseases have been battled by the dog subject victims.

Dogs are said to be the most helpful of all animals in such experimenting, which fact leads a writer to remark, "It is inconceivable that any man of normal human instincts should be guilty of cruelty to the dumb animals that are drafted for this purpose."

IS WELCOMED BACK.

The reappearance of Col. W. N. Ponton after a very serious illness has been greeted by his countless friends who are pleased to see this public-spirited man on his way to complete recovery of health to continue to play the part in the role he has played in the life and activities of this city and county, besides resuming the part he has been privileged to fill in the province and Dominion as a citizen and a member of the bar.

Nothing is more typical of Colonel Ponton's keen zest in life and interest in municipal and national activities than his appearance at two recent functions, the inspection of cadet corps of the city and the unveiling and dedication of the soldiers' monument in Memorial Park. Such zeal and interest as Col. Ponton possesses and is responsive to his fellow-citizens, more especially to the boys and girls and young men and young women of the city who have in their life before them. Nothing daunted by the operations through which he has gone and undeterred by weariness, the result of the exhaustion which follows such a sickness, he graced both these ceremonies, surely a sign that his old time interest is not even hidden.

His words written at the request of the local press to convey his impressions of Victoria Day's ceremony show his soul and intellect as alert as ever. All the old time brilliance of thought, depth of emotion and command of his mother tongue are therein contained.

Belleviliians feel and know that it is good to have the veteran soldier and citizen back in the midst playing his noble part.

SKETCH OF A POET
By Don Marquis

Once the wild rapture and the beating wing
Of Song were mine, the Sun, the climbing flight,
The storm's rough fellowship upon the height—
Rider of winds that spin the worlds and fling
Space-wide the starry levities of Spring!
I falter now: these failures and blurs my sight
A drift of ashes down on dusty night,
Nor dull ears hark what magic bells may ring.

I should have striven for some faith whose heat
Of burning hearts might set a planet flaming;
Or, fallen like great Lucifer, proclaiming
Across the skies his magnificent defeat.
. . . But meanly I sink down; wasting large powers
On tavern satellites and sodden hours.

WHO IS YOUR FAVORITE MOVIE actor or actress? Marie Dressler won the prize as the most popular Hollywood star of 1931. Marie can have our vote this year also, but Beryl Mercer is also a great favorite with us. Among the men we would rather see than Lionel Barrymore at him anyone else in the movie world, and that includes Tony, Tom Mix's "Wonder Horse," or Tony's wife, a better actor than Tom, at that. Jackie Cooper heads the juvenile division, while Charlie Chaplin and Mary Pickford are at the head of the list of old-time favorites seen too seldom on the screen of late. Including Platinum Blondes, Coral Gables and sich like, flash across the screen, and before you can say "Here they come," it is necessary to begin saying "There they go."

"WHEN GRAYBEARDS TOLD NAPOLEON he couldn't cross the Alps in winter because "circumstances did not smile on the venture," it is reported he squared his shoulders and answered "Circumstances?" I make circumstances." So it was in the Napoleonic spirit that many big business men faced conditions during 1931, as told by John W. Parsons in The Rotarian. Here's what he says about a Belleville industry with United States affiliations:

"The business slump might have meant a severe loss of trade for J & J. Cash, Inc., both in Canada and the United States. But it didn't because of intelligent management. This company makes a cloth label with the name of the individual customer woven on it to be sewn on clothes for laundry identification purposes. Naturally, its customers include all sorts and sizes of girls who go to summer camps. But camp registrations, an inquiry early in 1930 revealed, were falling off sharply.

"The Cash company might have immediately embarked upon a careful policy of retrenchment—and there are those who would have considered such a course of action as "shrewd." But the Cash executives were not sure that it was necessary. "If," they asked themselves, "our customers aren't going to camp, where are they going?" Whereupon they sallied forth with Sherlock Holmes' methods to find out. Reading between the lines are sent to camp while parents are in Europe. A checkup was made on steamship offices. Bookings had fallen off considerably—which indicated a further loss in woven label business from tourists.

"But still the Cash customers were not located. Were they going to stay at home in 1931? Perhaps, opined Frank Goodchild, president of the company, they merely were seeking less expensive vacations. An investigation of cottages and camps showed such to be the case. Rentals were far ahead of normal. A part of the missing customers had been found, and an advertising and sales program was formulated to reach them.

"Another source of business was private schools. Long-faced prophets had said there would be a falling off of attendance also, just to make sure that money spent to get this business wasn't going to be wasted, the Cash company again investigated. This time, the market had not materially changed. There was but a slightly reduction in registration. The normal effort to get business at private schools was, therefore, continued.

"The result of this careful planning and keeping in close touch with potential customers has meant that without changing its products or its sales plan, the Cash company has maintained its sales in face of adverse circumstances. In fact, orders for 1931 were almost identical with the record year of 1929.

COLOR-BLIND YET UNAWARE OF CONDITION

Color-Blindness Usually Hereditary, Cause is Mystery

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

More persons are color-blind than one might suppose and they are practically all men. In some instances, a color-blind person accepts his condition as a normal one for duty on a ship, for instance, where signal lights and colors are so highly important for safety, the chances of danger worry about.

Since color-blindness exists in every one of every three to four men—that is, one person in every eight will be found color-blind—it is important that we should attempt to tests to discover the color-blind person does not know he is deficient in color perception. Such a person at night might not be able to distinguish between a red and green lights, or a red signal at a distance over a warning signal of danger.

Color-blindness is usually hereditary and the reason why it still exists in spite of this quality is the defect is not serious and should be pointed out. However, it has also been found to affect workers with sight, movements of eye eyelids, etc.

There are all sorts and degrees of color-blindness, and there are not a case where the individual is unable to appreciate any color at all. In these rare cases there is probably a defect in the optic nerve itself, which is at the back of the eye, opening into the brain. Certain nerve disorders present this symptom.

As a rule the color-blind subject finds it difficult to tell the difference between fundamental colors. Green and red, for instance, are puzzlers, but sometimes blue also is confusing.

Such a green would find it difficult to distinguish from a red, and a spole hanging from a tree, because of the green color of the leaves and harmonizing colors would also be difficult. Even the color blind person can distinguish the color and see after you have shown them the difference, but as soon, however, as shade of green and another color is used, he will not be able to see the difference.

Several theories have been advanced concerning the origin of color-blindness, but it is complicated and difficult to understand.

The Hering Theory states that color sense depends upon certain chemical changes in the different visual substances in the retina, white-black, red-green and blue-yellow—and that means of decomposition and building up combinations of those substances the sensations of color are produced. According to this view, color-blindness is caused by the absence of one or more of these visual substances.

Another theory, the Young theory, is the most generally held. It is based on the fact that all colors may be considered to be made up of only three colors, composed of specially sensitive nerve fibers. Color-blindness, then, the patient, it is held, is deficient in these fibers.

At any rate, color-blindness cannot be corrected nor even treated. It is some sort of organic defect which is present from birth—congenital. Nevertheless color-blindness is not a serious condition and does not even lessen the life expectancy. Persons color-blind should, however, be tested whether or to what extent they have color blind defects. Those themselves subjected to a "spot-watch-test" test. In this the examiner asks a skein of wool of any color and asks the patient to pick out another skein from the box that approximates the color. Then he repeats the test repeatedly, color-blindness finally becomes apparent. Color-blind individual believes he has matched the colors correctly, but in reality, while to a normal person it is quite evident that he has not.

Among the bad habits to which young children easily become addicted is thumb-sucking. After a time it produces malformations around the nails. This habit should be broken as soon as it appears and never should a "pacifier" be given as a substitute.

Poet's Corner

THE FLOWERS ON THE GRAVE

Don't take the flowers from the silent grave
That loving hands have laid
To mark love's affection the departed pays.
But look upon these flowers as of love
And think of the God that gave them
And that Heavenly home above.

But remember the Saviour sees you
And the day may not be far away
When you may be called
And other hands may lay
Flowers on your grave.
I trust you'll think of this kindly
And remember how sad you would feel
Should some one unkind the flowers steal.
May God touch your heart and fill it with love,
And lead you to do what's right
And be blessed with His Heavenly love.

At about seven o'clock last evening, while the gale from the west was blowing strong, the flag staff on the city building broke off at the base near the butt. The flag and that portion of the staff broken off fell over onto the eastern side of the tower and was held there by the railing.

Prestonian citizens are beginning to have faith in that cheerful old saying that if it rains on decoration day it will rain for forty days. It did rain on that day and it has rained every day since. But cheer up —it can't last forever.

Who is responsible for the "disgraceful state of the market grounds? Today the market is Molson's Bank, the whole street was slush and mud. Why does not some one of the many officials attend to this? It would be remedied at once or the one responsible. Such a state of affairs there, made to wade through in back and forth, until the sun dries it up.

Mr. H. Corby has sold his handsome residence on Bridge street to Mr. Clifford Sifton, Minister of the Interior. Hosts of people in this city will regret to learn that this handsome mark is to leave the city of Quinte. Most of us have pleasant recollections of the many sojourns aboard of her. She will soon be gone, but not forgotten.

An interesting game of baseball was played on the hospital lot yesterday morning between teams representing the High School and West Belleville, which resulted in a victory for the school boys. A large number of spectators witnessed the game. The players were as follows: High School—Sanders, p; Coon, c; Hyland, 1st b.; Pringle, 2nd b; Wallace, 3rd b; Tolton, s.s.; C. Harrison, c.f.; Alford, r.f.; Turley, l.f. West Belleville—Hanley, p; Bennett, c.; Hall, 1st b.; Gerow 2nd b.; Ballantyne 3rd b.; Page s.s.; Turner, c.f.; Crawford, l.f.; Butterfield, r.f. Mr. J. O. Robinson's fine black horse ran away Wednesday afternoon and collided with a telegraph pole on Bridge street, near Bridge and Clarke's grocery store, smashing the carriage badly. Mr. Robinson and Mr. Grand Junction had frightened the animal.

The vagrant cow is making nocturnal visits to yards where she is not wanted and is a nuisance on the street, but a solid fence would soon end her amused and fed. We will not be too severe on old Brindle the First then, but we must fight fire as well as pestilence. The fire limits must be made to keep her at home.

Dr. Eakins is having the street adjacent to his residence boulevarded. This will improve the appearance of his fine residence.

Chief of Police McKinnon will go to Hamilton shortly to attend a convention of Chiefs of Police.

Mr. Henry Goldsmith, an old and highly respected resident of the 3rd concession of Sidney is, we regret to learn, lying very seriously ill.

Those who patronized the assembly last night in the city hall adjourned at twelve o'clock to the festal board in the Commercial Hotel, where mine host Edward Jones served a recherche supper. The guests all speak in the highest terms of praise of Clark' as a caterer.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay, Dee.)

MORNING DELIVERY—

"Clop-a-clop, clop-a-clop.
The horse from the corner trots down just as I awoke, and I immediately begin to wonder if I have a horse; every clop beat on my heart, writes a reader. I could see the horse, small, sturdy, black, its lean sides, and I grew sadder every minute.

"I got up to look at him, hoping I was mistaken. He appeared humane, and laughed aloud in relief. The horse was drawing a light wagon; he was sleek and plump and his slow clop-a-clop was due to his being tired. He was a horse that was delivering milk from door to door.

NEWSPAPER VARIETY—

Into the editorial sanctorum now and then come vivid splashes of high relief from the harried brains of journalists and newspaper workers the world over. To hear the "dead line" editors at times must be interesting and drastic, outline of good copy which comes in last minute rushes. Even good stories which have been carefully pounded out by aspiring writers on the staff feel the editorial axe at times, limit and space on the pages rapidly dictate to a change. The practice of cutting copy often gives rise to many good stories remaining from the sanctum sanctorum of the editor. The following gives a good description of one story which was chopped down to fill the remainder of the space allotted to it.

The editor had commissioned one of his staff to write a story about a murder which had been committed in the territory. The writer left lights of the act had been covered rather fully and it became necessary to make a rewrite in the form of a story. When it was written and handed in it proved to be several hundred words long. After the sheers had gone through the story, the finish read: Mr. P—— took a small glass of whiskey, bid his departure, no notice of his purchase, a fine cigar out of his pocket, and finally his life!

ODE TO THE MERCHANT—

Another editor for some time had been troubled with a certain poet who from time to time sends in poems which were good in a way but lacked that "punch" needed. Finally the editor became very exasperated over his attempts at trying to fit the poems into the available space, and he finally handed the poet a mild remonstrance and suggested that he try his hand at it. It was sending in was too long. This settled the poet considerably. His next effort was only 4 inches—a little thing, it is short and to the point.

"The Ballad of the Merchant"
"Trust
"Bust."

I WANNA GO HOME.

Strong Position Shown By Bank of Montreal

Total Assets Stand At $748,612,481—Liquid Assets Are $385,483,225, Equal to 57.34 Per Cent. of All Liabilities to the Public—Large Holdings of Gilt-edged Securities.

Ready ability to meet rapidly changing conditions and at the same time maintain its strong liquid strong position is shown by the Bank of Montreal in the statement of the affairs of the bank as at April 30th. The statement, which is the semi-annual one, appears elsewhere in this issue, and is presented in an easily understandable form. It shows total assets of $748,612,481, compared with $784,-907,706 a year ago. Of this amount quickly available assets are $385,-483,222, equal to 57.34% of all liabilities to the public.

Included among these liquid assets is cash in vaults and in Central Gold Reserves amounting to $78,491,119, equal to 11.67% of public liabilities.

Every section of the statement reflects a policy of strength and strong liquid position through a period of unusual trade conditions and also indicates the readiness of the bank to take care of and meet any demands that may develop from its customers.

Liquid Position Strong

The most important change in the assets is represented by an increase in government and other bonds and debentures, the total of $226,901,146. These are recognized as gilt-edged securities, the greater portion of which mature at early dates. Included among them are Dominion of Canada, provincial, government securities of a value of $174,-720,246, up from $149,239,258 a year ago. Call loans outside of Canada are $30,362,324 and are secured by bonds, stocks and other negotiable securities of greater value than the loans and represent moneys quickly available without any disturbing effect on conditions in Canada.

Call loans in Canada secured by bonds and stocks of greater value at current quotations than the loans stand at $5,945,819, as compared with $11,347,647 at the same date last year.

The total of current loans made to manufacturers farmers, merchants and others, is reported at $356,572,288.

Deposits have held up remarkably well under prevailing conditions Total deposits are reported at $628,701,231.

Total assets of $748,612,481 are available to meet payment of liabilities to the public of $672,210,852, which leaves an excess of assets over these liabilities of $76,301,580.

Profits Lower

The profits for the six months amounted to $3,580,229.70 as compared with $3,771,753.71 for the corresponding period last year. The profits were distributed as follows: dividends, $2,160,000.00; provision for bank premises, $200,000; rebate, $288,316.28 and reservation for bank premises, $200,000, leaving a balance of $102,378.43. This when added to the balance carried forward from last year, $1,331,742, brought the total at the credit of profit and loss to $1,504,620.27.

Other Papers' Opinions

RURAL FIRE FIGHTING

The agricultural ratepayers of South Harwich Township in Kent County of Ontario, have set a good example by engaging a fire-by-law recently submitted to them to provide for their own fire protection against fire. The fire fighting equipment will be kept in Blenheim and will be available whenever a fire breaks out in the township. The Town of Blenheim will undertake to fight fires on adjoining farms. The objection to the by-law was that the farmers in the 3rd concession of Sidney is, we regret to learn, lying very seriously ill.

Those who patronized the assembly last night in the city hall adjourned at twelve o'clock to the festal board in the Commercial Hotel, where mine host Edward Jones served a recherche supper. The guests all speak in the highest terms of praise of Clark' as a caterer.

THIS IS NOT A DETOUR

One fine October afternoon, the writer motored to the north of the city angling road ahead appeared to be a detour. It was road, but the writer decided to take a chance into a valley of deep and dismaying mud.

Some suggested turning around and going back the road, but that was too narrow for the length of car wheel-base. We might have done it had we been driving the car.

It appears now that we have not been on a detour, as the route of the improved road, and are expected to result in a saving of 3 miles, besides getting into a safe and substantial highway, which will relieve the increasing traffic. Pollition' swamps must be drained. Economic waste must be distinguished in the interest of a farther viability. The road must be made safe and the traffic encouraged not only corporation trucks and de luxe passenger cars, but pedestrians carrying their own luggage.

This is not a detour. It is an improved road, and it will continue to be an unimproved road until we build a Trans-Canada Highway.

Burleigh Grimes admitted from the witness chair one three days ago that he was just about "washed up" as a big league pitcher. He would never have gotten some with it had the St. Louis Cardinals been sitting in judgment.

The Ole Diamond Dirt never ready to swear today that the 38-year old spitballer still has plenty of juice in his aged right arm. They had proof that Burleigh still can baffle a vindictive enemy when he feels in the mood.

Should memory fail, all they needed to refresh their minds was a glance at yesterday's box score, in which they encountered their former team-mate for the first time since he helped pitch them to a world's championship last October.

Toiling for the Boston Cubs, he set his old comrades down with seven scattered hits and shut them out, 3-0, which wasn't at all bad for a last-install. It was Grimes' fourth start for the Cubs and his third victory.

Good Help to Cubs

The triumph not only was a source of satisfaction to the veteran, but a great help to the Cubs in their neck and neck scrap with Rochester for the National League cellar, enabling them to stay within eight percentage points of the pace-setting Braves. Boston, on the other hand, nearly tumbled the Cardinals out of the first division, leaving them half a game ahead of the fifth place New Yorkers.

Bobby Brown, the 20 year old sensation from Binghamton, kept the Braves at the head of the class by defeating Brooklyn, 4-2, on four hits. The youngster began his big league career by licking Dazzy Vance in a two-hit contest a week ago was invincible in all but two innings. He received some valuable assistance from another of the Braves' rookies, Fritz Knothe, who pounded in two runs with a double and scored a third.

For the third straight day the Giants and Phils engaged in an old fashioned slugfest, and Giants made it two out of three for the series by winning 12-4. Bill Terry led the winner's attack, knocking in four runners with a double and a run of the year, a double and a single.

Fumbles by Heath and Haley helped Pittsburgh score five runs in the first inning and Cincinnati's trim Cincinnati, 9-4, for the second straight time.

Only two games were scheduled in the American League, but nothing ago was rained out completely and the other got under way a half hour away in the fourth inning with the St. Louis Browns ahead, 1-0; it was no contest.

NO MENACE TO HEALTH

Tuesday, May 24—Health officials have decided that the overarming of a blind of bees is not detrimental to health, and no action, so far as the department is concerned, will be taken against an apiculturist in the southeast section of the city. Recently a neighbor complained to members of the City Council that the bees affected the health of an invalid in his house. Inspector C. J. Walling reported yesterday that he found nothing that should affect health. The apiculturist keeps his bees in Yarmouth Township, but one hive had swarmed near his residence in the city, and he was engaged in retrieving it when the complaint was lodged.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Eyelashes of Blue of Green

It's a long beauty road that has no turning. The unfortunate parade doesn't care for the same old route. It likes to go dashing off into undiscovered territory. Hence, just so often, it not oftener than that, there must be created the new idea to be spoiled about joyously or to be heeled death.

Make-up experts, those artists of the beauty shops, start things, give the cash customers something to go home and experiment about. The latest cosmetic whoopee consists of an eye shadow debauch. Whatever goes, the eyelids keeps on going until it is nasily spread over each individual eye winker. As the colors vary from green to blue to orange, with grey and brown thrown in for the hold-backers who are afraid of what the one pain will say, you can see with only half an eye that the feminine face is going in for a decidedly new form of decoration.

The eye shadow got its inning when the model went forth telling the gals to pipe down on the rouge, to chuck the disturbing war paint and to concentrate on eyes and lips. There is little left for the feminine face can stand in the way of this nuisance. If you are the blushless wonder with heavenly looking eyes and lips almost natural, the fact that the wan cheeks signify loss of appetite or early decline. They don't. They're just that way so that the eyelids can get in a bit of heavy work, serving as nurse-lously dyed shutters for the soul windows.

This question of eye shadows is a problem that every woman must solve for herself. They are not for the quiet little mouse who sits demurely in the corner, they throw her completely out of beauty form. Simple effects in cream and complexion suit her style; it takes spirit, chic, snap or that easy sophisticated manner to get away with dimmed eyelids. Eye shadows belong to the exotic or highly individualized type. They demand smart garments.

What color suits a certain color of the eye and certain tones of the skin must be determined by experimenting. There are many types of brunettes, many variations of blonde and a great raft of betwixt-and-between. For each type there is the right eyelid smear, but one must find it through a system of cosmetic research.

Shadows of compact form are no proof at all for lushes. Lushes are reckless, on the move, and the powder puff shades itself down onto the cheeks, wrecking the facial premises.

Oily pastes perform satisfactorily, they provide a glittering effect, puffing up the eye lights, makes soul orbs very big and mysterious. The candidate for the beauty prize touches her finger into the shadow pot, smears its contents over the upper lids low down, applying a lighter film as the finger creeps up close to the eyebrow. The idea is to accentuate the heavy lidded effect.

The next step will probably have to do with eyebrow pencil of blue or green or mauve or purple to match the tinted lashes. Won't that be sumpy?

But why anticipate? Something is always happening to pep up the sisterhood, to keep the make-up kit a treasure of absorbing interest.

Beatrice Fairfax Letters

INVITE HIM BY ALL MEANS

Dear Miss Fairfax:—

I am a girl of nineteen. I like a boy of my own age very much indeed, and I believe he likes me. Once I asked him to go to a dance with me and he refused, though he had a really good excuse. I am going to have a party of my own soon and am in doubt about asking him. My sister thinks I should not, but I just can't make up my mind. What do you think about this problem?

H. E. G.

If he had a good excuse for not going to the dance with you, I agree with your friend that it would be foolish not to invite him to your party. There are times, my dear, when all of us have to turn down invitations we'd gladly accept.

A FAMILY AFFAIR

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am still in high school and this is my problem. Last November after the football game, in which our school was made champion, one of the boys came to see me and asked me that night to celebrate our victory. From that evening we've been going together regularly and I like him very much and he likes me. But he has two sisters who don't like me at all. The reason is that one of them would like to go with him and with girl whose brother she is just crazy about, and the other hates her along. He goes with this girl sometimes, but says he just does it to keep on the right side of his family.

M. L. C.

This must be a very docile boy, indeed, to be so strongly influenced by his sister and her love affair. He probably thinks if he's kept quiet at all, get tired of keeping on "the right side of his family" and leave him to you. Meantime, I hope you'll show the whole crowd how popular you can be with the boys you are easily influenced by their sisters. Just go ahead and have a good time. It's the independent girls who are most popular.

IN LOVE WITH BOTH

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am nineteen years of age and in love with two girls. One is eighteen and one is twenty-one. I can't make up my mind which one I love best. Miss Nineteen's parents object to me when she sees me, but that's not the fault of the parents as they very much opposed to her friendship with me. Miss Nineteen's parents like me, however, and I go to their house quite often. Still I find myself thinking of Miss Eighteen. What would you suggest?

Torn Between.

Don't worry, my dear Farm Boy. You're not seriously in love with either of these girls if you can't decide which one is right one. Just keep on being happy. Nothing in the world helps a boy and girl romance in love. Go to see the girl whose parents approve of you. Nothing suggests that you confine to chance meetings your attention to the girl whose parents disapprove. It's a pretty courageous young man who risks his future by going to the house where the parents frown him down.

A STRANGE WAY TO LIVE

I have been going with a boy for nearly a year. This spring he expects to go to Europe for five months. He would like me to engage! I give him for a steamer present a leather bag. It is very fine and I know him quite well also. Should I give the older gentleman anything, and if so, what would you suggest? I am going over to the boat to see him off. What would you suggest I wear?

B. P.

One of those leather cases in which to keep a passport, letter of credit and other valuables. I've seen all those tiny First-Aid kits for things not procurable on the other side. Good reading matter for a voyage never goes amiss. A small light reclining bag or brief case might answer very well, and a muffler would be the older man's choice for the man. I should suggest you wear a smart sports suit when you go to see them off.

Fashion Flashes

(By Alice Alden)

Go travelling especially if you have an eye out for the style of a smart costume just seen. It is in dark tones of beige, beige diagonal tweed with a long coat worn over the short coat and skirt. The long coat is trimmed with golden brown fur and there is a dark brown felt hat and crewel of dark brown crepe as accessories.

Tone-blue satin leads as an evening fabric and is used to good advantage in a frock cut on simple lines with shoulder straps and extend to the waist. These are made of crystal beads and the bodice is cut on the centre back of the waistline by an emerald buckle.

Everyone is interested in the necklines of the frock since it has become much the vogue and original. A frock of diagonal woollen in medium green has a deep V-shape and black Alaska seal finished at one side with a bow of the frock fabrics. Narrow seal borders the cuffs.

One must look for novelties in black and red form the color motif of any costume. A dress of red crepe de chine with a tiny figured print in red, black and white is worn with one of the new flowered hats. The hat is of black silk crocheted jersey and is turned up sharply at the back, the turn-up being covered with a mass of dark red carnations. A good colour scheme to be about when lots of blue is worn. A leading spring style is a coat done in blue cheviots with a broken self-color check design in the weave. The revers and tie-crewel are of summer ermine, blue and beige being a good combination.

Considerable one longs for moments of grandeur of opulence. Especially is this so when one sees a trained frock in red and gold lame worn with a cloak of ruby velvet lined with gold tissue.

(Copyright 1932, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Dressing up the print frock helps to make it popular. A lovely little slat jacket suit done in a French print in brown and white has the collar cuff sleeves trimmed with enormous bands of dying squirrel.

It ought to be known that this is to be a white Summer, since that color leads for all clothes, even in town. Black and white is good for town wear. With a black and white

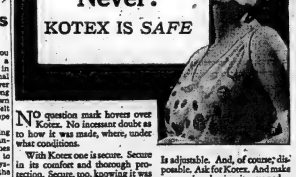
BUSY WOMAN
Finds New Secret!
Says Weekly Wash No More Worry!

"Well," said Mrs. Richards proudly, "if you don't believe me, look at the clothes I've just ironed. Did you ever see a finer looking wash look at the colour—white and clean like snow. And just smell them. Isn't that a fresh, clean smell. Now that's what I call washing! I'm proud of the look of these clothes. It gives you a heart for your work when it turns out like that.

"And here's my secret"

"First, I use a good soap. I'd advise you to use the brand I always buy — Pearl White Naptha Soap. You'll find it a good practical laundry soap and a lot more economical than most. Soap makes clothes and you them to soak overnight in cold water. You will find that, as the water temperature rises to the heat of the room, more dirt is loosened then would be if the water were cooking. In the morning, rinse your clothes thoroughly in warm water and you'll never have any more trouble with your wash."

And, if I do say it myself, now that they are ironed they look as fresh as the day they came from the store. I didn't rub the skin off my hands to get them that way either.



Thousands of women have learned Mrs. Richards' secret and follow her example. Get the Pearl habit yourself—Pearl means efficient work in less time and at less cost. That's something to remember these days.

Over 3000 cakes of Pearl Soap are used by Canadian housewives every hour

BEAR ACTIVITY BRINGS CENSURE

N. Y. Member Suspended For One-Year For Action

NEW YORK, May 26.—The New York Stock Exchange took its most drastic action today against a member for bear activity thus far in the 2-1-3 year decline.

Daniel Manning McKeon, a private trader, was suspended for one year, under provisions of the constitution forbidding the offering of stock in a manner designed to demoralize the market.

The announcement said that although McKeon's offers "were not accepted and did not cause a decline in prices." He was found guilty of the charges by the Governing Committee.

INTERLISTED STOCKS LOSE

General List Shows Some Recession and Irregularity

Toronto, May 26 — Interlisted stocks again lost ground under light but persistent selling on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange Market today. General list showed some recession but was merely irregular in appearance at noon.

Interlisted metals slumped to a new low for the bear market of 2.30, off 4c from the close on Canada was down 25 to 13.75 and Hudson Bay Exploration to 1.12. Sheritt Gordon was a cent higher at 23. Eldorado was off eight to 23.

Teck Hughes was subjected to pressure around noon but was off nine at 3.23 when taken. Hollinger slipped five to 4.84, but Lake Shore recovered 10 to 26.75 and Preston, off 5c1, was up 3c at 2.30. Among cheaper golds Ventures fell four to 31 and Kirkland Lake gold two and Howey was firmer.

Steep appeared to be trying to improve its position but was only fractionally higher at mid-day.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 26 — Cattle 10; weighty steers made up the bulk of the 240 cattle left over from yesterday's market. Trade was dull with prospects of a sale to clean up a few choice steers brought 5.45 per cwt. Price on steers were 25 to 50c per cwt. lower for the week but all other grades held steady.

No calves.

Hogs 120; hogs closed steady at 3.50 to 3.75 for bacon and 3.40 off truck and at 4.50 weighed off cars.

GRAND JURY HEARS CURTIS' HOAX STORY

Flemington, N.J., May 26.—The Hunterdon County Grand Jury today completed its long hours and five minutes in examination of witnesses and evidence in the gigantic Hoax perpetrated on the Curtis kidnap case by John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Va., boat builder.

While Curtis sat in his solitary cell in the jail adjoining the court house the Grand Jury heard three witnesses.

Until nearly the middle of the 19th century Poland was the second largest country in Europe.

BELL DROPS TO NEW LOW

Practically Entire List 'is Off From Yesterday's Close

TORONTO, May 26.—Bell Telephone dropped another point on Toronto Stock Exchange this morning and in so doing made a new bottom price of 96. Whereas its list of stocks generally was yesterday it was more steady this morning. Wicket on a reaction of 1-4 points made a new low but Smelters recovered point to 28.

C.P.R. was unchanged at its low of nine and there were small transactions in Brazilian and Montreal Power. The foods, on the whole, were steady as were the Beverage Stocks and the Steels. Pond of Canada was unchanged from last night's close of 7 1-4.

Oils went better on a little than was anticipated to move, either on the advance or decline. Imperial Oil and Gulf were small but seven were both off 1-2 point or more. Vacuum rallied at 12, showed a loss of a point.

SALE CARRIES PRICES DOWN

Leading Stocks Carried Down Steadily on Wall St.

New York, May 26—The stock market lost more ground today under a steady selling pressure from professional traders and from the public which sent a wide list of leading stocks down from fractions to three points or more.

Stocks or companies which have been especially well during the past two years were offered quite freely, traders apparently taking advantage of their better market ability to raise cash shortly before the week end.

Food stocks were also offered in fairly large volume at losses of one to over two points in Borden, National Biscuit, General Foods and Corn products. The Senate's approval of a ten per cent ditch was followed by a flurry of selling in Coca Cola and other issues figuring in that classification.

Railroad stocks also bowed to the downward trend of receipts unfavorable reports on earnings. Losses of one to three points were shown in Union Pacific, Santa Fe and Norfolk & Western, among others. Public Utilities were under pressure.

Trading on the stock exchange's section in suspending a private trader again called attention to a provision of that institution to keep short selling under control.

The United Gas Improvement displayed a steady undertone in the foreign exchange markets and there was reported that transactions were quiet.

Letters to the Editor

The Editor of the Ontario Intelligencer.—

Dear Sir,—

In your excellent report on the unveiling of the Soldiers' Monument there was one incident when you said the procession reaching from the upper part of Bridge street was one of the greatest in Belleville's history. I have been them all and it was in my mind far the greatest not only in number but in variation and in numbers also quality. Was it not needless to call to see our men of the upper air in the lead? This is a feature, of course, never seen before. Was not Colonel Ponton's "In Memoriam" most beautifully read by the band and soul and ribbed of an old soldier and padre? Was not the service and orderly way it was managed denoted the same spirit of patriotism and shows in the people of Canada the quality of our city's citizenship. The other relatives could not have been of finer quality and more skilfully managed in the largest city on the continent or anywhere else.

While I have my pen in hand please allow me a few words on Decoration day. It is very difficult for Mr. Thorn to locate all dogs without tags. He does what he can continually, but the difficulty is to find out the owner. Last year I saw three near the post office and succeeded in securing them down to the police station to Mr. Thorn, two he located but the other got away. Today I saw them on the corner of Bridge and Front Street. As a rule one cannot blame the dogs since as they seem "leary" of one's attentions. Now every property owner, if he, every taxpayer should be interested in rounding up these dogs because two and four dollars are badly needed by the city to keep our taxes down consequently it is our duty when one has registered his dog and has lost same he ought to go to the phone and tell Mr. Thorn that an unregistered dog is to be found at such a street and number. One can do this without his neighbor knowing of it as there is no necessity to give your name when phoning. If this was carried out all the untagged dogs would be rounded up in short order. It is very exasperating for one to pay good money for a dog and then see for his eyes daily his neighbour getting by without.

Yours, etc., etc.

TAXPAYER.

"SOME AFTER ME" EXCLAIMS WALKER

New York, May 26.—Mayor James J. Walker, on the stand today, said the day that his being called as a witness before the Hofstadter Legislative Committee was in fact merely "an examination before trial" and a prelude to requesting the governor to remove him from office.

"It begins to look as if someone were after my life," he asserted.

WOMAN BEATEN AND IS ROBBED

Police Search For Middle Aged Man in Toronto

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Toronto police are scouring the city today in search of a middle aged man who late last night attacked Nettie Johnstone, 14, beat her into unconsciousness and emptied her purse of $1.85.

Returning from a dancing studio where she had been taking lessons, Miss Johnstone reports she was just about to place her foot on the lower step leading to her rear verandah when confronted by a man who darted out of the driveway. Without saying a word the man struck the girl and her unconscious body dropped to the lawn. The empty purse was found near the girl's body when she was discovered on the lawn by a passerby.

Miss Johnstone recovered consciousness in a short time and was able to give the police a description of her assailant.

HERALD OF NEW ERA

ences lengthen every year. Next month, Lausanne will be added to the list. A long and weary road. But there is another road—the road that will lead from Ottawa."

"If a start is made there with a plan for the development of an area, Empire-wide, within which would be opportunities for extending exchange of goods and services, there may be hope of getting the machine of business going again," he said. "If we could only once reverse the trend of depression and get started again, we should not only help ourselves in Canada, but help the British Empire and the rest of the world to start again with a renewal of hope and confidence."

Studded With Landmarks.

"The history of the nation was studded with landmarks, the Governor General continued. "Few of us have the leisure to study closely the flat, monotonous levels that make up so much of the landscape of history; it is the high peaks, standing out against the background of time, that impress themselves on our minds." Canadian history was studded with such landmarks, and the conference promised to be just as important as any in history.

Foolish Optimism.

"Of course, we must not expect a new heaven and a new earth to spring into life on July 21, simply because that is the day the representatives of the Empire meet at Ottawa," he warned. "Things do not happen so easily as that. To give vent to an unrestrained and unreasoning optimism is as foolish and almost, if not quite, as dangerous as wallowing in pessimism.

"Governments could not make trade—they could only help or hinder it," His Excellency said. "Trade was made by the people themselves who were engaged in industry and commerce. If they were active and enterprising, government action could help them; if they were inactive or unenterprising no government intervention could save them, be maintained.

Friendly Contacts.

"It is no use our sitting with hands folded waiting for political leaders to announce policies—we must be up and doing. Our salvation to that extent lies in our hands. At best some time must elapse before the conference, whatever its decisions, before practical results can ensue.

"But the close and friendly contact of the political leaders of the Empire will in itself be a good thing, as will the contact of the industrialists and business men who will flock to Canada this summer from all parts on account of the conference," said His Excellency.

GOVERNOR GENERAL

achieved an unanimity of conditions, it is stated. Measures for distribution of Maritime province coal will better conditions in that part of Canada. The Radio Act provides the necessary assurance against foreign interfering with Canadian broadcasting and ensures equality of service to the Canadian people. The trade agreement with New Zealand is a further step toward closer empire economic association." The equality and report of the committee on civil service matters "prepares the way for a reorganization of the civil service commission and the better administration of matters pertaining to the civil service."

Important measures enacted are listed, without comment.

Guns Boom.

Ottawa, May 26 (CP)—At 11.30 o'clock Chief Justice Anglin, as deputy to the Governor General arrived at the parliament buildings to open the Speech from the throne. Cavalry vice-regal salute of nineteen guns boomed as he approached. He was accompanied by an escort of Dragoons and received by a guard of honor from the Governor General's foot guards.

In the House of Commons, C. H. Cahan had not yet completed a statement he was making on the reparations situation.

Mr. Cahan was in the midst of a sentence when the three loud knocks on the Commons door proclaimed the arrival of Black Rod.

Cahan finished his sentence and sat down.

Lapointe Has Joke.

"This is a form of closure," Ernest Lapointe called across the chamber to the Secretary of State, while the members smiled. "I had some questions to ask the minister."—Lapointe added.

Black Rod entered and delivered his customary message summoning members to the senate. Led by the speaker of the House the members then proceeded to the senate chamber where the throne speech was delivered.

Maniac Attacks 3 Girls With Knife

Cleveland, O., May 26.—A maniac brandishing a knife attacked three small girls as they were on their way to school today, killing one and probably fatally injuring the other two. He was captured by police.

The dead girl was Rose Marie Parker, eight years old. Injured were Lena De Sirad 12, and Mary Ann Evans, 11. Threats of all of them were cut.

The man, who according to police, was Jake Gordon, 40, was overpowered by a nearby patrolman after a terrific struggle.

SAILS FOR HOME.

Montreal, May 26.—Concluding a leisurely journey in quest of health, Lord and Lady Byng of Vimy, Governor General of Canada, sailed today on the S. S. Montclare for England. He was accompanied by Lady Byng.

Lord and Lady Byng crossed Canada in easy stages from the Pacific coast, visiting the principal cities of Canada.

Melbourne is said to have developed many peculiarities as he grew old. For instance, it is said that he never paid a telephone or electric light bill.

IS SPEAKER AT S. S. RE-UNION

Rev. A. E. McCutcheon Addresses Stirling Congregation

Stirling, May 26 By Mail— St. Paul's Sunday school reunion Sunday, May 22nd, was a gala day for St. Paul's Sunday School the service was held at 11 a.m. Rev. Earl McCutcheon of Tabernacle Church, Belleville, being the special speaker, Rev. E. W. Rowland exchanging with him.

The church was beautifully decorated with apple blossoms and other spring flowers which was generously done by the teachers.

The choir consisted of 22 voices, pupils of Mesdames E. Bruce, C. Lansing and N. Westcott's S. S., classes and well did they sing.-Mr. Cluie will not have any difficulty in getting recruits for his regular choir, they sang in good form as a special number "Listen to the Voice of Jesus." Then a orchestra played in fine style while the congregation was gathering.

Rev. McCutcheon spoke reminiscently of the early days of his boyhood when he attended this church and mentioned several outstanding members at that time, he took as his subject "Keys", said there were three principal keys which were very important to have, 1st Iron, which represented work 2nd. Silver, Love and Friendship. 3rd. Gold, Prayer, Faith, the Bible truth.

Jack Moise, Wellington Snowden, James Hall, Harry Gay, Collection.

In the evening the following boys were ushers, Fred Joblin, Bob Jones, John Monroe and Lloyd Rowland. The choir consisting of some of the regular choir and some of the older members of the S. S. having a special number "O Brother Man, Hold Out Your Hand, Your Brother" and Gerald Clute sang "Suffer the Children to Come Unto Me." The orchestra played a fine selection as an offertory.

Rev. McCutcheon spoke of Jacob's last words to Joseph and admonished him to "Be a man", said adversity suffering and sorrow developed character, said the easy way was not always the right way, we were to grow in grace, taking the Lord along the pathway of life, reading the Bible for a guide.

After a moment, she nodded. He would attend to the details that had gone on in her mind before she made the surrendering gesture.

"I'll call for you," he told her.

He was careful to keep his triumph from his voice. He was careful not to move nearer to her. He put his brown hands, he clenched and whistled, a little. Must keep them in his pockets, you understand she was so close—her hand just touching the brown throw.

After he had left her she went to her room and searched feverishly through her wardrobe.

That frock might do. It had been bought for Connie Leslie's dinner to the Belgian Relief Committee people, last spring. A straight clinging slip, with a girdle of tarnished metal, and one impossible, heavenly, lily, deep blue flower.

Louisa and Joyce came home long after she had had her solitary cup of tea at four. Elizabeth followed the maid to Joyce's room and spoke, not quite steadily.

"Fred Van Alstyne was here this—"

"Yes?"

He asked me to go to the Country club with him tonight and I accepted," explained Elizabeth, in a little rush.

Mrs. Sheldon raised her eyebrows and said nothing.

"You don't mind?" Elizabeth asked.

"Why should I?"

That was all—or nearly as that. Yet she went back to her room, depressed. She sensed disapproval. She wouldn't go. Yes, she would go. How old was she, now?—thirty-three? Old enough, surely, young enough.

She sat down on the foot of her bed and looked straight ahead of her.

She was young—young—She had, perhaps, forty more years of life. To live them all as the last ten years had been lived, No, that was not possible.

Earlier, she had sometimes thought—but all in one day, Joyce and then we'll be alone, Joyce and I. But then the thought had seemed fantasy, absurd. Die, that great old woman? Never! She, Elizabeth, would die first.

When she thought that, she was glad. She'd have Lennox for a little while before his mother came. She'd tell him, she'd make it clear, and the shadow of fear and the smothering sag she wished away.

But perhaps he knew, had known all along. If he had, why hadn't he said a word, hadn't he helped her?

Ten years, and Lennox was grown—a little elm in her memory, almost as if she had dreamed him. She could remember vividly only the dreadful things—the moment when her son and she had left his mother—the other moment outside his door, beating on the panels like a mad woman, the sounds like things had so closely followed it, submerged it.

And now?

She liked Fred Van Alstyne. She had always liked him. He knew how to be silent with her. He was a friend, yet lately it had seemed to her that he had looked at her, not as a friend looks, but with cool, measured affection. Oh, she'd seen that look before—in the eyes of the young Italian who'd had letters to Mrs. Sheldon, in the eyes of Merewether, Durham, three years ago.

But something had always happened, come between. She hadn't seen the Roman more than four or five times, and Meredith had married six years.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

So Elizabeth began to look over the golden frock. Was it pretty enough? Was it smart? She had been "going out" of course, for some years steadily, with Louisa. Dinners, concerts, theatre, bridge.

But this would be different—a dance.

Could she still dance, she wondered? She had never danced much at home, before. Lennox had taught her, really. She remembered the dance on shipboard, the colored lights.

She hummed under her breath, she turned her slim body and spun silently about the polished floor, the frock over her arm. Her eyes laughed her mouth curved. Thirty-one! Surely, not such a great age. Lennox—you wouldn't want me not to have a little good time?

She felt achingly tender toward Lennox, as if he were a dear, younger brother, ten years away—ten years away.

Joyce, coming down the corridor, stopped at her mother's half-open door and looked in.

She saw a stranger.

She leaned there, fascinated, her blue eyes fixed, her dark hair falling.

Elizabeth looked up, saw her.

Elizabeth stopped dancing. She asked, with an effort, her breath coming fast, "You wanted me, dear?"

"No—I—"

Joyce turned, in a sudden hot embarrassment; fled down the hall. It was as if she had seen her mother standing on her head!

There was a window seat at the end of the hall. Joyce clambered upon this, and looked through the wide glass panes. The sky was gray, lawn, a small, ornamental pool; she saw the wintering swans.

Her chin in her hands she pondered on the revelation she had had of her mother. For the first time she considered her mother, gravely, as a person. Hitherto, she had taken her for granted; background, mere shape, part of the way you do, important part. Now she saw her name in any language was a complete stranger to her. Silent, gentle, unassertive, obedient, she had existed in Joyce's neighborhood, contributing nothing. As in Joyce's child's-life. Now, secretly, she had blossomed into a creature of intense passion. With such a person, a little girl might run and scream, laugh and play. She had never before; revealed herself! Why had she hidden herself? Who had ever seen her? Had not the song died on her lips, the dancing feet ordered themselves to stillness?

The problem was not to be solved. Joyce, with a sigh, gave real feeling herself cheated. Her fairy tales came to her assistance, she found the explanation. Perhaps, thought Joyce, she's under an enchantment? Or was the other the spell?

Elizabeth moved about her room, smiling out golden, slender, shocking. She was deeply confused. What must the child be thinking?

But she was conscious that her emotion went deeper than the mere embarrassment of having been young in a ridiculous situation by her daughter. For a few minutes she had not been Elizabeth Sheldon, widow and mother. She had been herself, younger than youth, a clear flame of unblinking happiness, virgin and innocent. Upon this momentary mood the child had been an intruder.

Dinner was an austerely silent meal. Louisa asked one question only.

"What time will Fred call for you, Elizabeth?"

She murmured, her eyes on her untouched plate, "I think—at nine."

Louisa explained carefully, answering Joyce's gesture of astonishment.

"Your mother is going out—to the Country Club—with Uncle Fred."

Silence descended again.

As soon as she decently could, Elizabeth escaped upstairs. The joy had gone from the golden gown yet she knew when she had dressed and was looking in the mirror that she was lovely. She was like a daffodil.

She heard Joyce come up. She turned from the glass and went to the child's room to say good night to her. She lingered a moment by the window seat in the hall. The night sky had a luminous, dark palor, a green star trembled over the pool. In Joyce's room the child was setting things to rights, over-calm in her little petticoat. She watched her mother come in with amazement. She thought, she is under a spell—she is.

Elizabeth kissed her. Joyce asked, in a little voice, "What will you do at the Country Club, Mother?"

"Dance, I suppose."

After a minute, Joyce said, shyly, "I'd like to see you dance, and hear the music."

Elizabeth put a bare arm about her daughter. She thought—I love her—oh, I love her. This was Lennox's child and hers. Yet not hers. She had an impulse to laugh, to weep, to hold the child to her heart, to call out to her, to plead.....I cannot you love me, Joyce! Cannot we break through this barrier between us?

On the way downstairs she heard Van Alstyne's car drive up. The door was open into the small library, Louisa was sitting there, in the big chair with the attached reading stand. Elizabeth went in a cloak, clouding her goldness. "Good night, Cousin Louisa."

Louisa raised her eyes from the page.

"Good night, Elizabeth."

The dark eyes fell to the interrupted paragraph. Elizabeth stood, irresolute. She wanted to ask, oh, why are you so implacably my enemy? Why must you always resent—?

Fred's voice in the hall.

He was announced, came in, spoke to Louisa. "Ready, Elizabeth?" he asked.

The door closed behind them. Mrs. Sheldon lifted her eyes from the printed words which held no meaning for her, she sat very straight ahead. She was seeing Elizabeth in the golden gown, under the dark soft cloak of cloak. She was thinking. Why should she have all these things—youth and beauty and the capacity for happiness, when Lennox was dead?

She laid the book aside and went, as she always did to Joyce's room, to sit beside her for a little while.

"Mother," she said, beautifully? Joyce asked, dreamily.

Louisa stiffened in her chair. She was very still, alert to the new danger which threatened her security. "Yes," she said, briefly, and in a moment, her hand touching the child's she was talking of Lennox, of Joyce's father. "You must never forget him, Joyce. You must remember him always and love him.—

"What's wrong? Fred asked, in the car, as they drove off.

"Oh, nothing."

"Mrs. Sheldon annoyed?"

"I suppose so. She doesn't like me to be say, you know."

"And this is being gay? Oh, Elizabeth, wake up! You're a grown woman—a young woman—is there any reason on earth why you should shut yourself up the way you do, fetch and carry for that old person whom life has been fired?"

"She is Lennox's mother."

"Ah—Lennox." He was silent for a while. He had loved Lennox well. He added, grimly, "Lennox would be the last to wish you to do—"

"What?"

"Live as you do—"

They were silent, each with his own thoughts. She was angry, at herself. Why had she done it—but not deliberately—given him that impression of self-sacrifice, a chosen martyrdom? Lennox's mother. As if it were not. Why couldn't she be brave and say, I'm afraid of her. But then he'd ask why.

The car swung around the drive, came up to the lighted clubhouse. "I believe I'm nervous!" Elizabeth said.

He understood and answered. "No, you're not. You only think so."

As he helped her from the car he laughed—a low, grave note. "Cinderella! But you'll not escape me at midnight!"

When she came into the big room, when her feet touched the shining floor and the music was in her ears—when Fred's arm went about her, swung her out, easily, lightly, the nervousness left her. She held her head high, she was young, she was beautiful, she was guided, held closely to the sound of violins. She laughed a little, her cheeks flamed suddenly.

Fred was forced to relinquish her many times. There were partners and to spare for her. Older women out on the veranda or stopping to look in from the doorways, nodded, with satisfaction, whispered, without malice.

Hours later, Van Alstyne stood with her on the porch of her mother-in-law's house. One light burned in the hall and made a path for her reluctant feet along the painted boards. She was thanking him.

"Every Wednesday night," he said firmly, "and every Saturday, and you'll come to the tennis matches, and I'll teach you to play golf."

"Oh—no—"

"Elizabeth," he asked, with an exasperation, almost amused her, "will you never learn sense? What else there to stop you if you want to come?"

He took her hands, drew her a little nearer. She braced herself instinctively. Her lips formed the inevitable, terrified negative. Laughing, he let her go again.

She let herself in, went up the creaking stairs, In her bedroom she took off and carefully closeted the golden gown. She looked at herself in the mirror, tired, flushed, still lovely. He had seen her so, known this.

Fifty years ago Tombstone was the only flourishing town in Arizona.

TILLIE THE TOILER

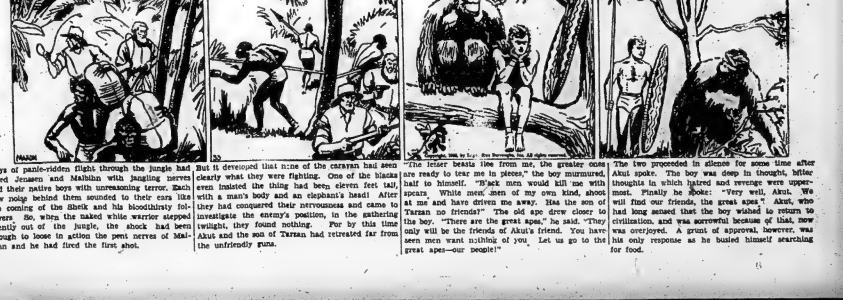
BRINGING UP FATHER

—By George McManus.



"MR. AND MRS. ..... CONSISTENCY AND FIRE ENGINES .....

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 33.

(Metropolitan Newspapper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

Days of panic-ridden flight through the jungle had filled Jensaen and Malbihn with jangling nerves and their native boys with unreasoning terror. Each new noise behind them sounded to their ears like the coming of the Sheik and his bloodthirsty followers. So, when the naked white warrior stepped silently out of the jungle, the shock had been enough to loose in action the pent nerves of Malbihn and he had fired the first shot.

But it developed that none of the caravan had seen clearly what they were fighting. One of the blacks even insisted the thing had been eleven feet tall, with a man's body and an elephant's head! After they had conquered their nervousness and came to investigate the enemy's position, in the gathering twilight, they found nothing. For by this time Akut and the son of Tarzan had retreated far from the unfriendly runs.

"The letter beasts flee from me, the greater ones are ready to tear me in pieces," the boy murmured, half to himself. "Back men would kill me with spears. White men, seen of my own kind, shoot at me and have driven me away. Has the son of Tarzan no friends?" The old ape drew closer to the boy. "There are the great apes," he said. "They only will be friends of Akut's friend. You have seen men want nothing of you. Let us go to the great apes—our people!"

The two proceeded in silence for some time after Akut spoke. The boy was deep in thought, bitter thoughts in which hatred and revenge were uppermost. Finally he spoke: "Very well, Akut. We will find our friends, the great apes." Akut, who had long sensed that the boy wished to return to civilization, and was sorrowful because of that, now was overjoyed. A grunt of approval, however, was his only response as he busied himself searching for food.

PRINCE EDWARD

Carrying Place

Carrying Place—Trenton travelers may give a welcome sight these days as they go and come. Government surveyors are at work at present laying the course for the proposed highway which many hope to see completed this year. Lack of money seems a very favourable sign; but there are still many arrangements to be made before the final plans will be put into operation. No definite information can be procured regarding progress to be made on the road during the coming summer; but there is little chance of the pavement being laid this year. It is not too much to expect, however, that the road-bed will be staked out and graded, and that we shall have a good road if not a perfect one for some time to come.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Hardy and Miss Wilma Hardy motored down from Toronto on Tuesday evening, returning the best day.

Mr. J. O. Dusenbury has added a splendid new veranda to the rear of his house, and has covered it and the back part of the house with metallic roofing.

The local A.Y.P.A. members presented their play "Whittitts" on Friday evening at Herchimer Avenue Hall in Belleville under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild, and received a very generous response to their efforts. The three numbers given here between acts, each entitled "Dumb as a Dora-Actor" with Misses Grace Hawkins and Kate Pitcher, the quartette number "Moonlight and Roses" with Misses Beckie Davis and Nora Kennaway, and Messrs Sandy Craig and A. Norrington, and the song "A Perfect Day" with Mrs. "Jim" Mc-Arnold Weese, were repeated, and several other numbers given by the Herchimer Avenue young people. Miss Beckie Wilkinson favoured with a vocal solo, Miss Bernice Arbuckle recited very effectively one of W. H. Drummond's poems of French-Canada, and Mr. John White sang "We'll Meet Again, Sometime Again."

The applause testified of the appreciation of the audience, and many who would there could hardly believe that those taking the various parts were inexperienced actors. Following the performance the "Captain tures" under the leadership of Mr. Al. Burris supplied music for dancing until midnight. Rev. A. E. Taylor attended the play, and expressed himself as being well satisfied with the response given and with the amount realized.

Mr. A. H. Norrington spent the week end with his mother, Mrs. A. H. Norrington in Picton.

The music was provided by Art Jones and his Capitalizers of Belleville who have played here a number of times before. Both round and square dancing were enjoyed, the dancing ceasing at two o'clock. This dance is the fourth and final one to be presented by the A.Y.P.A. here this season, marking the finish of a highly successful year.

Congratulations are due to Miss Lavina Weese who takes a dual role in the popular play "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," which she has presented by the St. Andrew's Dramatic club of Wellington, and the play has been most enthusiastically received in every place where it has been given. It has received the mark of popular favour, and as a result, has been awarded the prize given by the Greenbush W.I. for the best play of the year. It has been presented in Wellington, in Brighton, in Milford, and last week very successfully in Cherry Valley. Miss Weese has received high praise for the clever way in which he plays the parts of Mrs. Brown, and her daughter Dorothy.

DEANERY MEETING WELL ATTENDED

Rev. P. G. Reynolds, of Madoc, Special Preacher at Service

Madoc — The meeting of the Deanery of Hastings was held in Madoc on Friday 20th, with a full attendance. A celebration of the Holy Communion was held in St. Johns church, Madoc, at 10.30 a.m. the celebrant being the Right Reverend John Lyons, M.A., D.D., Lord Bishop of Ontario.

The sermon was preached by the Reverend P. Galley Reynolds, Rector of Madoc, who took for his text, St. John 6. verses 66 and 68. "Lord, to whom shall we go, Thou hast the words of eternal life. And we believe and are sure that Thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God."

"These" said the speaker, "are Peter's words and they are his by his own noble self. They sprang from the love of his heart and yet they were deeply rooted also in the conviction of his head. It was Peter who was first to say to Him that Christ the Son of the living God", and when many were leaving Jesus because He would not let them make Him an earthly King. It was Peter who made the noble answer. The circumstances were peculiarly affecting. The spiritual and searching character of the Saviour's words concerning the bread of life, had offended the multitude, and they who yesterday had crowded to be fed at his hands, were now deserting him in mingled anger and despair. Then turning to his little band of disciples he said, "Will ye also go away?" and Peter rising to the occasion, answered "Lord, to whom shall we go, Thou hast the words of eternal life.

"To whom shall we go?" The preacher went on to show that this is the first question asked by one who awakens to consciousness, and that the same choice is offered today as was given in the Jew of that day. There were four rival systems claiming our attention. For besides the followers of the Gospel of the Kingdom which Jesus preached, there were three different schools of thought. There were the Sadducees, the Pharisees and the Essenes.

Christ has put hope into individual hearts and benevolence into our social life. All that is noble and elevating and purifying in our modern civilization has come from Christ. So we say to every burdened soul "Come to Jesus and He will give you rest."

When asked to leave the company of the disciples of Jesus we make reply. Show us a better ideal than Jesus has given, bring us a better testimony of immortality. In a word give us something better than the Christ of the Gospels and then we may accept it. We know that such a demand can never be met, and for us there is none but Christ. He has spoken to us the words of eternal life, and we will not leave Him for we believe and are sure that Christ is the son of the living God."

Deeply inspirational hymns were chosen. The Processional "Father, before Thy throne of Light," and "Nunc Dimittis," for the Recessional. "Come, Gracious Spirit," and for the pre-Communion Hymn "Holy, Holy Lord, I see Thee face to face."

Beautiful spring flowers adorned the altar, tulips and narcisi, and the service will long be remembered.

After lunch at Blue's Hotel, the clergy assembled in the Guild room for the Chapter meeting. The opening prayers were said by the Bishop, after which routine business was opened under the Chairmanship of Rev. M. Levason, B.D. of Hastings.

A paper was given by Rev. C. H. Quarterman on "The problem of the East, and its relation to Christian Missions."

The paper was very interesting.

The Bishop then addressed the clergy with regard to the Church in this Deanery, and after his address discussed with the assembled clergy the problem of the Church in this area.

At four p.m. the meeting adjourned to proceed to St. John's church where evening Prayer was said by Rev. E. N. Grant, The Lesson was read by Rev. W. G. Hope Stevens, Rev. Mr. Levason presided at the Organ.

After Evensong, Mrs. Reynolds served afternoon tea at the Rectory, bringing a helpful and inspiring day to a pleasing close.

Power and liberty are like heat and moisture; where they are separated, everything prospers; where they are single, they are destructive.—Saville.

It is only natural that the man who gives himself away should get cheap.

GIFT PRESENTED TO CHOIR MEMBER

Mrs. Alfred Davis, Tweed Leaving For Visit to Wales

Tweed, May 26 By Mail—Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Davis attended the annual graduation exercises of Belleville General Hospital on Wednesday, when Miss Laura Post, Moira, niece of Mr. Davis and one of the graduating nurses was awarded the medal for best practical work in three years, and the prize for neatness.

The local C.G.I.T. with their leaders Mrs W. S. Gordon and Miss L. Richardson held a picnic and sing-song in place of their regular meeting on Thursday evening.

On Friday evening the choir of Tweed United Church held a supper in honour of one of its members, Mrs. Alfred Davis who is leaving on Friday, May 27th, for a visit to her home in Lansdowne, Wales. Mrs. Davis expects to be away at least six months as this is her first visit home since she came to Canada ten years ago. Twenty members of the choir were in attendance at the supper which was served in banquet style in the Ladies' Adult Bible Class room. At the conclusion on the supper some time was given to the singing of rounds and old favorite songs. Following the singing, the President of the choir, Mr. E. H. Donnelly spoke of the services which Mrs. Davis had rendered as a faithful member of the choir, and expressed on behalf of the choir the hope that she might enjoy a pleasant trip. The President then presented Mrs. Davis with Peter B. Kyne's latest novel "The Lord of Lonely Valley." Though deeply touched, Mrs. Davis expressed her thanks for the choir's kindness. Regular choir practice was held at the conclusion of the presentation.

At the United Church on Sunday morning the pastor, Rev. E. S. Cooke, delivered an address pertinent to sentiment suitable to the Sunday preceding Empire Day. He compared the British Empire with other empires of former days and noted the different missions of each. These other empires no longer exist. They did not build on firm foundations and have passed into obscurity. On the other hand, the British Empire takes God into account and acknowledges Him as the source of its greatness, and recognizes its dependence on Him. We have reason to be proud of the fact that we form a part of this great Empire which has stood for freedom and justice for given the humblest of its members and the least of its subjects".

Marmora—The county is making quite a change in Madoc Street at present. The road bed is being widened to a uniform width of 66 feet and along most of the street the road is being moved several feet to the south. Some of the knolls are being cut down, in some places a couple of feet and a great deal of the boulders have been taken out. The stones are used with the finer earth fill in the depression on the south side of the road and form the new road bed. Mr. W. McCoy is crushing rock west of the river with the intention of using it for surfacing of the street. The work is being done by a gang of men directly from the village, under the direction of Mr. Harry Vanalckle, county foreman. When the road is completed and the new sidewalk built, Madoc Street will present a fine appearance and be a credit to the village.

Roslin

Roslin—The new Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario, the Rt. Rev. John Lyons visited the Parish of Roslin on Sunday last.

The service in the morning was in the Church at Thomasburg which was splendidly decorated for the occasion. At this service the Rector, Rev. E. N. Crain presented a class of nine candidates to the Bishop for the Rite of Confirmation.

The Bishop chose as his text Hebrew 11th chapter and part of the 6th verse. "For that they without us should not be made perfect".

The Bishop gave as his reason for choosing this text, that on coming back again to the parish and church to which he came as a young man and now one of the hardest years of his life had been spent, and as he looked over the congregation and recognized so many faces he was compelled to look back and also think on Trinity Sunday, twenty-five years ago today he had been ordained Deacon in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston.

Speaking of the difficult times through which we are passing the Bishop said, "They are the most difficult which we have passed, but when we look back and remember the pioneers of this district who built their homes in a then unsettled country and then built their church, they had greater difficulties then than we today, but their duty to God and their church was clear.

"Too often today people start to preach with their church, as their obligations to it are voluntary and wrongful obligations must be met.

But we must not do this, we must put our church first, and keep faith with our forefathers who looked for a city whose builder and maker was God.

The Bishop in speaking to the candidates wished to impress upon them that this was one of the most solemn days of their lives, when they came forward to take upon themselves the promises that had been made for them by their Godparents in their Baptism, and that in the manner that these vows would depend the benefits which they would receive. God is always ready to give if we are willing to receive. If they came carelessly and indifferent no benefits would be received.

During the receiving of the offertory, Miss Gwenyth Grant sang "O Help us God, each hour of need."

In the afternoon the Bishop visited the church at Moneymore which has been newly decorated.

In the evening, service was held in the church at Roslin. The church was decorated with spring flowers and a congregation which filled the church to capacity was present.

The Bishop spoke from the text, "That thou mightest know the certainty of those things, wherein thou hast been instructed" taken from the first chapter of the Gospel of St. Luke and the fourth verse. Miss Gwenyth Grant sang, "I heard the Voice of Jesus say" as a solo.

HONOR MR. AND MRS. ANDREWS

Popular Members of Madoc Junction Community Are Entertained.

On Thursday evening, May 19th, the neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Andrews to spend a more evening with them before their departure to Parkes, where Mr. Andrews has been appointed Agent for the C.N.R. Mr. Russell Stanley acted as chairman in a very efficient way, and after calling the gathering to order, asked Mrs. Clarence Pitchett to read the following address while Mrs. Oliver Stapley presented Mr. and Mrs. Andrews with an electric table lamp and fernery.

Madoc Jct., May 19, 1932.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Andrews: Dear friends,

It is with deep regret we have assembled here tonight to spend the last evening with you before your departure to your new home.

We have met together in this home on numerous occasions and enjoyed your hospitality and we wish to convey to you our appreciation for what you have meant to us in your own home, your church and the community at large.

Mrs. Andrews, as president of our W.M.S., you have been exceedingly faithful, and our society will lose a member, whose place will be hard to fill.

As Choir Leader for many years, you have been kind and considerate. Your splendid gift of song, which you were always willing to contribute, when your health permitted, will be sadly missed by all. We feel our loss will be others gain in the new life at Yarker and we wish you both every happiness and prosperity.

Now, we cannot let this occasion pass without showing in some way our love and appreciation.

Therefore we ask you to accept these gifts in the spirit in which they are given, trusting it will keep green in your memory the loving friends at Eagleton.

Signed on behalf of the community, Mrs. Oliver Stapley, Mrs. Clarence Pitchett.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrews replied very feelingly, thanking all for the gifts. Mrs. Andrews is one of our own girls and has been a faithful worker at Madoc Jct. for nearly 5-½ years, but their going will leave a vacancy which will be very hard to fill.

Refreshments and entertainment were then called on to make a few remarks.

The remainder of the evening was spent in music and singing, after which lunch was served.

Before leaving all joined in singing "God be with you till we meet again."

Previews and Reviews of Current Offerings at Belleville Theatres

At The Capitol

"THE MOUTHPIECE" AND "TOP SPEED" NEXT AT THE CAPITOL

"The Mouthpiece" will open at the Capitol Theatre Friday for a two-day engagement.

The large cast is headed by Warren William, leading man of stage and screen, who in the past few months has appeared in such important vehicles as "Under Eighteen" and "Beauty And The Boss" and has been marked for stardom by the producers. "The Mouthpiece" will serve as an index of his future and marks his greatest screen role to date.

"The Mouthpiece," from a play based on the life of a famous New York legal character, by Frank Gollins, tells a stirring young prosecuting attorney whose zeal leads him to secure a verdict of guilty against an innocent young man, who is executed as a result of William's forceful and convincing prosecution. A few minutes before the exution the actual murderer confesses the crime. The knowledge that he has been instrumental in the death of an innocent man drives William to resignation from the State Attorney's office and a heedless life of profligacy which throws him into contact with shady characters. He becomes under "mouthpiece," a disreputable lawyer who defends criminals and operates through a "mouthpiece" of law. He is eventually reclaimed after a dramatic climax.

James Flood and Elliott Nugent, the directorial team responsible for "The Mouthpiece," are said to have given the picture fine and intense dramatic quality rarely seen on the screen. Flood concerned himself almost solely with developing the action of the picture via successive situations, while Nugent applied his experience and talent to the dialogue, stressing the necessity for dialogue to "mesh" properly with the action. As a result, dialogue does not impede action, and vice versa.

The large cast directed by Flood and Nugent, the latter of whom is the son of J. Nugent and wife whom he has written many outstanding stage successes, including Sidney Fox and Aline MacMahon.

Miss Fox is best known for her work as the little southern girl of "Strictly Dishonorable." She is one of the screen's most diminutive players. It is his love for Miss Fox in the role of Ina Paraday, which reguarates William and leads him to again seek light among her as slated for at the time of his unfortunate involvement in the innocent young man.

Miss MacMahon is well remembered for her work in the stage production of "Once In A Lifetime," and for her role of Edward G. Robinson's secretary in "Five Star Final." She also had an "important" role in "The Heart of New York."

"Top Speed"

Joe E. Brown in the fast and furious farce of fun "Top Speed" will be shown with "The Mouthpiece" at the Capitol on Friday and Saturday.

Tonight

Tonight each lady patron will be presented with a silverware dessert fork free. "Three Wise Girls" will also be featured for the last times

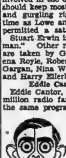
At The Belle

CLAUDETTE COLBERT AND EDMUND LOWE IN HIGH-POWERED FUN FESTIVAL

Edmund Lowe, whose boss we love and leave 'em methods with women have come famous in "What Price Glory" and "The Cock-Eyed World," matches his strong arm courtably against the quiet, ale-eyed but highly inflammable wiles of Claudette Colbert in "The Misleading Lady," at the Belle Today and Friday matinee daily.

This is Paramount's talking adaptation of the Paul Dickey and Charles Goddard play, "Misleading Lady," and is directed by Stuart Walker.



The story promises all the elements of sure-fire entertainment, comprising generous portions of romance, thrills, action, mystery and comedy. It relates how a girl dupes a man into a proposal to prove that her sex appeal is worthy of glorification in a certain play the which she cherishes.

She gets the role but scorns the proposer. She is kidnapped, chained up in a mountain cabin and tamed. Unknown to either captor or abductor, the place is hideaway of a dangerous lunatic who has been attracted by guns stored there. Two lecherists with a mystery on their tongue-tips, an irate lover bent on avenging the kidnapping, a determined reporter and two keeps from a mountain cabin are involved in the developments, which should keep most audiences gasping and gurgling right up to the last minute as Lowe and Miss Colbert are permitted a satisfactory embrace.

Stuart Erwin is "Bonzy, the Madman." Other roles of prominence are taken by George Meeker, Selena Royle, Robert Strange, Wilhelm Cargan, Nina Walker, Fred Stewart and Harry Ellerbe.

Eddie Cantor Comedy

Eddie Cantor, the favorite of ten million radio fans is appearing on the same program, in "Insurance," a clever offering filled with songs and clever stories, in the Cantor-inimitable style.

Andy Clyde and a host of famous Kennett funmakers will be seen in "He's Her Husband," the popular Belle Kennett reel with its gist of latest news items, and Cliff McCormick at the organ console rendering popular request offerings completes a splendid all-entertainment program of screen entertainment that is well worth seeing.

PREHISTORIC RACE FOUND IN CAVES

London, May 26 (UP).—The discovery of an entire family of a new race of prehistoric man in a series of caves in southern Palestine is announced by Sir Arthur Keith, eminent anthropologist.

Sir Arthur said he had received word of the discovery from Theodore McCown, leader of an expedition of the British School of Archeology and the American school of Prehistoric Research, now in Palestine. The expedition came upon the remains in caves near Mount Carmel.

McCown's report, Sir Arthur said indicated the family had lived in the caves from 10,000 to 100,000 years ago. Great importance was attached to the find.

"It is quite possible," Sir Arthur said, "that the remains found by McCown may lead to the discovery of the ancestor of modern civilized man and establish the line of the neanderthal man than as hitherto been supposed.

"The skeletons resemble modern man and some points more than neanderthal man, but have many unique characteristics," he said.

ALL CASES ARE DISPOSED OF Justice Logie Thanked Solicitors For Their Cooperation

One of the shortest sittings of the non-jury Supreme Court held in the city of Belleville was closed yesterday when his Lordship, Mr. Justice Logie disposed of the six cases presented before him in a little over one hour. His Lordship expressed his personal appreciation to the local solicitors for their cooperation in terminating the court procedure in such a manner.

The first case presented of Coulter vs. Coulter saw the final decree of a divorce action granted. The evidence in the case had been heard some months ago. Mr. R. C. Donnan appeared for the plaintiff in the case.

The second case of Fyfoit vs. Fyfoit and Wilson was an undefended action for divorce when C. H. Fyfoit, of Picton, entered an action of divorce against his wife, naming Edgar Wilson as co-respondent. W. J. Bowerman, official referee, stationed at Picton, testified that in the company of two Toronto detectives they had visited the apartment occupied by Wilson and Mrs. Fyfoit and found them living together. Detective J. P. Brown, Toronto, corroborated the statements of the previous witness. The action was undefended and a court order for the decree nisi was granted.

Mr. Donnan for plaintiff.

The case of The Bell Paper Co. Ltd. vs. Bonnell was another case of the issuing of a chattel mortgage was settled by consent of the court by the two solicitors engaged by the parties concerned in the case. Mr. Donnan and Arnold Bennett represented the plaintiffs in the case, while Mr. Frank O'Flynn and Mr. Bonnell appeared for the defendant.

The case of Johnson vs. Thomson was referred to the Local Master after the solicitors had presented their pre-view to his Lordship. The firm of Ponton, Ponton and Graham appeared for the plaintiffs, while the firm of Porter, Payne and Arnold appeared for the defendant.

The defendants in the case of Sprague vs. Sprague admitted that they owed $708.53 of the amount sued for. The defendants were ordered to pay the above amount to the sheriff of the county.

The further charge of the non-fulfilling of a shipping contract which was alleged to have been given between the two parties in the matter of shipping lumber. This action was referred to the Local Master with the costs of the day being added to the unsuccessful party. R. E. Nourse appeared for the plaintiff, while G. A. Payne appeared for the defendant.

Suit Undefended

The final case on the docket was an undefended divorce action brought on by Percy Bongard of Thurlow Township County against his wife Martha C. Bongard on a charge of desertion. Two co-respondents were named in the suit and after hearing the evidence of the plaintiff, Mr. Percy Bongard, he related that he had not lived with his wife since he returned from overseas the decree nisi was granted by his lordship in favor of Wannerlye, Lane and Co. appeared for the plaintiff. During the hearing it was brought out that Mrs. Bongard had been served with papers of intention of the suit in Belleville.

The court procedure was one of the shortest on record and his Lordship adjourned the court thanking those who had been instrumental in reducing the docket to a minimum.

CORNER-STONE FOUND

Cobourg, May 26.—There has been established beyond a doubt the exact position of the corner-stone of Upper Canada College, Toronto, laid by the Duke of Kent, father of the present King, in 1829, but it has now been found underneath the north-west pillar of the portico at the northeast corner of the building. The wall of the new building erected by the Ontario Government at Public Works Garage as a military hospital was established there, almost obscures the corner-stone. Toronto pilgrims and others will visit old Victoria on June 7

HALF MILL CLIPPED OFF CITY TAX RATE FOR 1932

Men Injured Jumping From Burning Roof To Save Their Lives

Council Pares Estimate Reducing Tax Rate by One Half Mill to 47 1-2

Grant to Hospital and Estimate For Uniforms Struck Out

LONG SESSION

Water Meters Will Be Placed in Schools of City

Elected on a policy of economy, the City Council has lived up to its obligation and last night at a special meeting of that body to fix the tax rate for the Corporation for this year on the assessment of last year, they struck a rate of 47 1-2 mills which is 1-3 mill lower than that of last year. The council considered all the estimates, that were placed before it by the various organizations of the city and after considerable discussion decided to lop off a sum of $776.07 from the Collegiate Institute and Vocational School for cadet uniforms, and a sum of $3,151.60 to the hospital board, they being willing to pay only a sum of $8,417.75, which is the indigent account of last year. A motion by Alderman Hamilton that the council of $700.00 requisitioned by the Public School for water meters be cut out on a vote and this sum went into the estimates as well as another sum of $9,565.20 has been taken care of insured from the last sale of 1930 and a sum of $ 4,645.13 on debentures sidewalks, sewers and commission. All these matters have been carefully considered and by paring here and there, the council were able to reduce the rate of one half mill.

Discussion on Grant

When the estimates on the hospital came up, Alderman White moved they be given three-quarters of a mill a grant instead of six tenths as last year and Alderman Armstrong moved an amendment, "that the hospital be paid only the indigent account of last year and that no accommodation be made for the grant". This provoked considerable discussion but at the conclusion, the vote was taken and Alderman Hamilton, Walter White, were the only ones to vote for the original motion. This carried and the clerk to take a new estimate and left the council with a surplus

EMPIRE TRADE WAYS LEADING ON TO OTTAWA

British Experts Grapple With Big Problems of Industry

OUTLOOK BRIGHTER

British Recovery Will Have Profound Influence on Decisions

By GEORGE HAMBLETON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 27.—The Roads of Empire Trade lead to Ottawa. In conference, committee and consultation, experts in British industries are grappling with the problem how best they can protect their respective markets without damage to the trade of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and India.

Precise proposals of delegations both from Great Britain and from the Dominions are unlikely to be revealed before the conference itself meets. But the present trend is to-ward establishment of Empire agreements which while giving a stimulus to empire trade will not endanger the secondary industries of the Dominions on the one hand nor prevent, on the other, the legitimate hope of British agriculture on a firmer basis.

South African Treaty.

South Africa which has practically concluded a new trade treaty with Canada, is going to the conference expected to make reciprocal trade-off agreements with the reservation that South African industries must continue to receive necessary protection. Neither of South Africa's trade treaty with Germany may well be a sequel to any such reciprocal agreements. Under the treaty any future tariff preferences granted by South Africa to apply automatically to Germany. But the tariff can be terminated on twelve months notice.

Appointment of a South African trade commissioner to Montreal is under discussion.

The declared policy of New Zealand in the words of Premier Forbes is not to go to Ottawa with any desire for trade bargaining. New Zealand will "avoid any bickering such as characterized some of the Ottawa meetings."

Meats and Dairy Products.

Australia will concentrate its efforts at Ottawa on tariff concessions in the British markets for meat and dairy products. So far as Australia is concerned, meat on the British market is likely to be key commodity. At present, meat is on the British free list.

The Irish Free State, which has lately increased its protective tariffs, is also anxious to improve its dairy products. But controversy between the British and Irish Free State governments over abolition of the oath of allegiance leaves the situation uncertain.

May Find Cause Cure For Diabetes

TORONTO, May 27.—Announcement in a paper to be presented today by Dr. C. H. Best before the joint conventions of the Canadian Medical Association and the Ontario Health Officers' Association of discovery of a toxin or toxoid which has greatly benefited diabetic sufferers is expected to lead, within a short time, to the definite finding of the cause and cure al the disease. Dr. Soleman, a Toronto graduate of Oxford University has specialized in diabetes research for some time.

QUICK METHOD TO ANALYZE PNEUMONIA TYPE DISCOVERED

Toronto, May 27.—Discovery in the Connaught Laboratories here of a quick method of analyzing types of pneumonia to allow the administration of the serum particularly adapted to prevent development was greeted by the Canadian Public Health Association meeting as one of the greatest advances yet made in the fight against the disease.

Announcement of the discovery was made before the annual convention of the health officials by Dr. M. M. Brown, of Toronto, who has been in charge of this branch of research at the local laboratory for the past three years.

Doctors slated Dr. Brown's announcement practically means the solution of the pneumonia problem. Although strides has been used during the past two years for the treatment of the disease its effectiveness has been hampered by the inability to quickly ascertain the type of pneumonia from which the patient suffered.

Dr. D. T. Fraser, also of the Connaught Laboratories, reported the discovery of a serum which is expected to help materially in the prevention and treatment of whooping-cough.

Although Dr. Fraser stressed the "serum may or may not prove" valuable," it has been found successful in several hospitals, especially those in Manitoba. It has been in use for the past six months.

PRINCE SHOWS DEVON HEIFER AT YEOVIL

Says Cutlets Replace Joints of Beef.

Yeovil, Somerset, Eng., May 27.—The Prince of Wales here to exhibit the Minister's prize heifer, Revelation, was received by the Mayoress, to an audience of farmers.

The Prince said: "I am pleased to have received the great joints of beef from Devon. They are not left behind in the family on the Sabbath," he said, "but are replaced by cutlets. I am told that cutlets are more suitable in England 30 years ago—by cheese and big joints of meat."

"WE FARMERS MUST STUDY OUR MARKET"

Prince Urges Modernization of Agriculture

Bath, Eng., May 27 (C. P. Cable). "The Prince of Wales told British farmers assembled at this famous Bath and West Show today that "We farmers must study our market." He said that only by that British farmers could reduce transportation costs and so get remunerative prices.

The Prince urged modernization of agriculture in the United Kingdom. "We are still production which in England 30 years ago. Then we had large farms made by big men. Today we have small farms made by small men," he said. "Science has changed all that. Nowadays the biggest man is not necessarily the best farmer. The smallest man may be more successful."

Although Dr. Fraser stressed the "serum may or may not prove" valuable," it has been found successful in several hospitals, especially those in Manitoba. It has been in use for the past six months.

First News of Disaster.

New York, May 27.—The Radio Marine Corporation received word today that the steamer City of Chattanooga of the Savannah Line, had collided with the steamer Grecian of the Merchant and Miners Line, off Block Island. The City of Chattanooga lowered boats and stood by in an attempt to save survivors.

The Grecian was a steel screw steamer 367.2 feet net tonnage. Her home port was Baltimore.

Sinks in Few Minutes

The Radio Marine Corporation received the following message from the City of Chattanooga:

"At about 3 a.m. we struck the steamer Grecian and she sank in a few minutes. We picked up the Crew and passengers all right."

The reference to the crew and passengers was understood to mean those of the City of Chattanooga if those of the sunken steamer.

Another message from the City of Chattanooga to the coast guard said:

Search for Survivors

"We are blowing three blasts at intervals and searching for members of the crew not yet rescued. Also have lights on."

The missing persons were believed to be from the Grecian.

The Grecian, a passenger steamer, the Radio Marine Corporation said, was under charter between Philadelphia and southern ports.

The coast guard "Algonquin" of the coast guard was speeding to the rescue and arrived on the scene at the scene in 45 minutes.

Millions of Dollars in Rain Fire-Fighters Resting Happy

Toronto, May 27—Visited by showers overnight, rain varied millions of dollars, Ontario today basked in sunshine and watched the produce grow. And weary fire-fighters, worn with work and worry, are smiling once more. Considerable damage was caused in the southern section of the province by a terrific electrical storm and then a torrential downpour last night and today, but the damage was later than balanced by its benefits to the crops.

"It will have no ill effect and will be decidedly beneficial," declared Col. T. J. Kennedy, Ontario Minister of Agriculture today. "It was needed and is a boon to the province. All except about 4 per cent of the crops were in, and the farmers will be delighted."

There was no question of northern Ontario's delight. More than 100 forest fires had blazed in various areas during the past week between snow and rain had completely extinguished them. Only a few remain under control. In this area principal damage was caused by a fire which swept Ashworth and Shelburne townships, Algoma district, on Wednesday and Thursday. Here 1,115 sq. 06 inches fell. Coupled with this, Matchewan and Rouyn both reported snow.

"The winds caused fairly heavy damage, while basements were flooded streets covered with water at Sarnia. Some truck gardens were washed out. One man was killed by lightning in South Colchester township. Barns were demolished, trees uprooted, sheds unroofed and other damage caused near Perth.

City and District News

EIGHT PICKEREL FOR DAY'S CATCH

Owing to the misunderstanding, which now exists among a number of local fishermen over the number of pickerel, which may be taken from the waters in any one day the following amendment to the Fisheries Regulations may be of considerable help.

By Order-in-Council of April 26, 1932, sub section 3 of section 3 of the Ontario Special Fishery Regulations for the Province of Ontario has been amended to read as follows:—

"No one shall fish for, catch or kill in any of the waters of the province a greater number than eight yellow pickerel, pike-perch or dore, and pike, regardless of their length."

THICK HEAVY FOG HARD ON DRIVERS

A thick heavy fog which swept over the district early Monday morning caused considerable annoyance and difficulty to many of the truck drivers, who use the roads throughout the night and earlier part of the day. East of this city the fog, which rolled in off the lake was much heavier than has been experienced in this district and a few minor accidents on the road were reported from different points.

A rumour that a large lorry had gone off the Trent highway past the Institute west of this city could not be substantiated on investigation.

GAS EXPLODES WITH IGNITION

While preparing a truck at the county machinery sheds on Lake Street, Picton, Wednesday morning, the gasoline caught fire, and Mr. Dorland Holt was badly burned about the hands and face. One leg was also burned. Mr. Holt was in the act of installing a battery and this is what caused the ignition. The flame struck him in the face. Prompt action in rolling in the sand extinguished the fire in his clothing. He was taken to the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital where his injuries were treated.

QUARRY IS RUNNING FULL BLAST NOW

Only routine work of various jobs about the city kept employees of the department of public works busy today. The greatest number of men are finding employment at the city quarry, while road building and repairing has also shecbred a considerable number.

FISHING LICENSES NOW IN CITY

New anglers' license permits are selling good, declare several local issuers of the application forms, which have recently been received from Ottawa. While a few dealers have not yet received them, those who have the blanks say that a number of early tourists have made their appearance in the district for the season's fishing and have been securing the permits. This year the fee for license which is required for non residents of the province to fish for any fish in season will be $5.50. To avoid misunderstanding it is pointed out, that no license of any sort is required by those, who make their home in this province.

FOOT CRUSHED BY HEAVY SCRAPER

James Fowler, an employee on the Cement Karrier, which plies in and out of Point Anne, suffered a crushed foot, when the scraper which he was operating late yesterday afternoon caught his right foot and badly mutilated the smaller bones in the instep of the foot.

Mr. Fowler was operating the scraper which scrapes the floor of the boat after it has been unloaded in some unknown manner his foot got caught in the machine and before he could be released his right foot was very badly crushed. Mr. Fowler was taken to the office of Dr. J. J. Robertson this morning and upon x-raying the foot it was ascertained, that a number of the smaller bones in the foot had been very badly crushed.

2000 TONS CEMENT SENT TO WINDSOR

After unloading her cargo of coal at the Canada Cement Company's dock yesterday the Cement Karrier was loaded with 2,000 tons of cement today and shipped down the river this afternoon. The Cement Karrier plies between the Canada Cement Company and either Toronto and Windsor, where the company has store houses. The cement is shipped in bulk from the plant and bagged at their depots in both Toronto and Windsor.

PLENTY OF FISH SWIM IN MOIRA

Those who like fishing, but are unable through circumstances to be off to the lakes in the northland to pursue their favorite sport, have one consolation—there is plenty of fish to be found right in the Moira River between the bridges and are satisfied with a little smaller size than can be secured from some of the lakes.

Each night dozens of ardent fishermen and fishermowen can be seen plying their rods from both banks of the river. The fish being caught are a rather small variety of perch but the quantity of the catch goes far to recompense the anglers for the smaller size.

4 HUGE TANKS BEING PLACED

Supertest Petroleum Co. Nearly Ready to Supply District

Four huge tanks, with a capacity of 18,000 gallons each, which were brought into the city a day or so ago on railway flat cars, were today in the final course of erection near the track, south of, and a short distance east of the lower station. A small number of men were engaged on the job under the supervision of Mr. W. J. Knox, superintendent of the Toronto Iron Works, who made and are erecting the tanks for the Supertest Petroleum Company of that city and making Belleville one of the divisional points for the distribution of their products. Preliminary work for the erection of the tanks included scraping the earth to the bare rock, and then filling the excavation to the level and top of the foundation of the tanks. It is probable that the tanks will be ready for use some time early next week. A delivery from the gasoline and oil to them will be made by tank cars on the railway.

Local men comprise the small force, who are working on their erection.

Congressman Zihlam, Head of Moose Order, Visits in City

HIS CAREER

FREDERICK N. ZIHLMAN

Frederick N. Zihlman, Supreme Dictator of the Loyal Order of Moose, arrived in Belleville today (Friday) and was met by several of the members of the order for Belleville from the district from Port Hope to Smith's Falls and Peterboro tonight (Friday).

On the morning of August 28, 1931, before an enthusiastic gathering of Supreme Lodge Officers, delegates and past dictators in Convention assembled, Director General James J. Davis performed the impressive ceremony of inducting into office the Supreme Lodge Officers who had been nominated and elected two days before. Upon this occasion Frederick N. Zihlman was installed into the high office of Supreme Dictator—the highest elective office in the gift of the Loyal Order of Moose.

Congressman Zihlman was born October 2, 1879, at Carnegie, Pennsylvania, and is the son of Nicholas Zihlman, a native of Switzerland, and Julia Zihlman.

Learned a Trade.

At the age of seven he entered the glass factory at Cumberland with his two brothers. The work fascinated him. Quickly he learned the trade of glass blowing, and he earned for himself many soldiers from the foreman because he delighted in adding fantastic curlicues and other ornamentation to work that did not call for them.

He followed this vocation for 22 years, quitting it finally to take up the real estate business in Cumberland town. But in the years of his factory work he had learned to study and he could not seclude himself. He brought notice to himself in the forces of organized labor. He became prominent as the spokesman and representative of labor organizations of his home county and for five years was president of the Central Labor Union of Cumberland.

Public Service.

He was the first member of the Maryland General Assembly to declare for a direct vote for presidential candidates in the primary, which is now a state law. The bill providing for the creation of a Public Utilities Commission for Maryland found in him a ready champion.

Mr. Zihlman was re-elected State Senator, serving in the sessions of 1910, 1912, 1914 and 1916, becoming minority leader of the Senate in 1914-16.

At that time there came a demand that Mr. Zihlman extend his activities in behalf of the people he represented and go to Washington. Then occurred a struggle happening that upset those plans. In 1914 he was nominated as the Republican candidate for Congress. The election arrived with its interest and suspense. An immense vote was cast. But the returns showed Mr. Zihlman had lost by 742 votes. He could not understand it, for the voters had promised him any amount of support. An investigation was begun. Then it was discovered there had been wide misunderstandings of how to mark the ballots. In one county alone 245 votes were lost to him through this mistake.

Despite his disappointment Mr. Zihlman was not downhearted. The following term found him safely installed as Congressman, by a plurality of 3,000 above his nearest competitor in a field of five.

He has served in the 65th, 66th, 67th, 68th, 69th, 70th, and 71st sessions of Congress and was chairman of the Committee on Labor in 1929-24, chairman of the Committee of the District of Columbia in 1925-31, and ranking member of the Committee on Labor, Insular affairs, and Enrolled Bills.

It was such a man, with such a splendid record, that Director General Davis and the other officers of the Supreme Lodge decided ought to be manager of the order in the large affairs of the Moose. As Dictator of Columbia Lodge No. 126, in Washington, Congressman Zihlman had done amazing things. He had placed the lodge on a plane equaled by few and second to none. But had it not been for the kind and character of the service to humanity offered by the Moose it is doubtful if this busy man ever could have been secured. Yet the bigger the man, the bigger the visualization of the opportunity for service the Order extends. Almost with prophecy of his time he accepted and has answered the demands of the Supreme Council, at the Moose Supreme Prelate in 1928, and Supreme Vice Dictator in 1930. The latter position he has held for two years. Today he is Supreme Dictator, Loyal Order of Moose.

Letters from England

No 2.

My first letter closed as we were nearing Plymouth, England. A little after midnight of Saturday, the ninth day, the engines of our liner stopped and a small steamer, called a tender, came alongside and took off some passengers, baggage, and the mail which included my first letter. Nearly all the passengers went on deck to bid farewell to those who were disembarking. Happy to meet, very sorry to part but delighted sometime to meet again. Soon we were on our way again and the passengers went to bed.

Dipper Upside Down.

On clear evenings I noticed that the Dipper (seven fixed stars in the shape of a dipper) was directly above our steamer and that it was upside down. A few nights before leaving Belleville I saw it in the same upside down condition right over the corner of Charlotte and Pine streets. It was now an old friend over distant waters.

On the next day, Sunday, our tenth from Montreal, the sun rose in great glory and splendour from a glassy sea into a clear, pale blue sky. The air was balmy and calm. Such a sunrise experience cannot be described because it is so grand and awe-inspiring.

The Ancient Mariner.

I was on deck early and alone except for the seamen who were scrubbing and doing swabbing as usual. I drew near to one old fellow and the following conversation ensued:

"Good morning, fine day."

"Too good to last long, sir."

"How long have you sailed the seas?"

"Over thirty years, sir."

"Are you married?"

"Wife and ten children, sir."

"Are you homesick sometimes?"

"Only when I'm away from the sea, sir."

This caused me to laugh but my sailor saw no joke and remained as serious as death.

"What land lies there just before us?"

"The Channel Islands, sir, very distant and lonely they are, too."

I held a shining shilling between thumb and forefinger. His eyes sparkled. I gave the coin a flip into the air and the sailor with hands still occupied caught it in his mouth.

"Good-bye, sailor, and good luck."

"Good-bye, sir, and God bless you."

After breakfast that morning I made the discovery that all ranks of our crew had suffered a severe cut in their pay and that tips were now more necessary to them than ever before.

Soon Cherbourg, a port of call on the coast of France, came in sight but we did not stop there. In every direction now we saw numerous small steamers, less than half the size of the average liner, which were engaged in the coasting trade between the British Isles and the continent. There were a few liners and large freighters too. We were now in the path of much commerce.

At two o'clock in the afternoon we entered the harbor of Havre by the aid of two tugs and came to a dock where we disembarked and another set of passengers came on board bound for England. It was my first close up view of France and for an hour all behold me gazing from the upper deck with intense interest. This fine old harbor extends along the waterfront for several miles. For half a mile or more the shore extends inland perfectly level and then ascends a steep hill for about a mile. Old buildings of four and five stories are near the water, then comes the business section but the homes (fairly large) are built on the long slope of the hill. The first impressions of this harbour are manifold. The houses seem to be built of white brick but this is probably merely the material is stucco. The extensive harbor protected by long breakwater walls is crowded with large French ocean liners. Clumps of trees here and there are quite green with fresh spring foliage and the patches of grass are quite green. Small trolley cars, each with a trailer, could be seen rushing along clean, paved streets. Motor cars and bicycles were numerous. As it was Sunday afternoon the streets were well thronged with people watching the cars, crowds and movements. Many flags were at half mast due to the recent assassination of the President of France. We realized that we were in the midst of one of the most ancient seaports in mourning. Vive la belle France toujours.

After breakfast half an hour after leaving Havre, we were sailing straight north in the English Channel past the famous red cliffs of Normandy which are quite visible from the steamer. A number of small, one-sail, Norman fishing boats were plying their trade in these waters. The day was warm and bright, the water was calm and there was only a slight breeze, ideal fishing conditions even on the Bay of Quinte.

On Monday, the last day of our voyage, I awoke early to find that we were slowly steaming up the River Thames and that it was raining. The level shores of the Thames were a vivid green dotted plentifully with tall elms and other trees. Many liners and other craft were moving to and fro on the wide river. About eight in the morning we docked at Tilbury, a quaint old English harbor town, and met immigration and Custom officials. They were very much more particular than we had ever found them on entering the United States or on returning to Canada but we finally passed through. At about eleven we all took a train for St. Pancreas station, London, and arrived there in an hour. Each coach is divided into compartments holding about half a dozen persons. The trains run faster than ours and with amazing smoothness and comfort. All vacant land along the railway is divided into little plots, one for a family, in which vegetables are grown. Some were already vacant. I am of the opinion that trees, grass, flowers, and vegetables are about two weeks ahead of Belleville. When we arrived in London about noon we were met by appointment and taken to the apartment where we will stay while here. We like the living conditions and feel that we will be very comfortable and soon much at home.

In the afternoon we made our first tour of London streets and stores. The streets are narrow and traffic is heavy. There are no street railways, as large two-deck, red busses take their place in very large numbers. (The tubes or underground railways will be explained later). The bus fare is a penny, two-penny and so on according to the distance. They have regular stopping places and wait for a sign. We have already ridden on them several times and find them both convenient and comfortable, better than street cars. The London taxis are all black and resemble our old Ford cars with the adjustable top. We laugh at the taxis because they and their drivers seem to be the caricatures of London. They charge about fifty cents for a short trip of five or ten minutes and a tip of six pence or twelve cents for the driver. Then there are the ordinary motor trucks and a few horse drawn vehicles. We have seen so far very few fine motor cars such as we know in Belleville.

Policemen are dressed very much like ours only they have a white cotton cuff pulled over their coat sleeves from the wrists to the elbows. Their duties in directing traffic are the most arduous I ever saw, even greater than on Broadway, New York. There is much fog and mist here and as they raise their hands the white cuffs are necessary for better visibility for drivers. Imagine Front street with two long rows of busses and taxis going each way and not very slowly either. Most of London's business streets are no wider and hence can have no parking at the curbs. The rules of the road are just the opposite to ours. Traffic follows the left, not the right, and hence there is no right turn. Several times we asked citizens to direct us to say Buckingham Palace. Every time they had us get on wrong busses or follow wrong streets. Now we always ask a policeman and get there every time.

On the evening we went to a movie at about Toronto and Montreal prices and realized that we might be at home as everything was so similar.

Next morning (Tuesday, May 10) after a lovely breakfast THE KING'S fast of English bacon, eggs and toast, Mrs. James and I took HORSES IN one of the big red busses for High Park. This is a large, THE PARK beautiful park of many acres with large trees and fine shrubbery. Every man and woman in England seems to have one or two dogs. Here the grass seems to be a more pronounced, fresh green than with us. Hawthorn and lime trees are those most frequently seen. The English sparrow, as well known as it is plentiful here, thrift, lowers. Then we were about to High Park, we heard the clatter of horses' feet and saw a company of Horseguards passing through on their way to some ceremonial. All the horses were black and very fiery and beautiful. The handsome young guardsmen were dressed in white, silver-like, metal helmets and breasts with long red tassels. It was the most beautiful picture of the kind I ever saw and it was in a beautiful setting as well. From High Park we walked to Buckingham Palace near by. Reckoned as guards with big black fur helmets marched to and fro in front of the high iron fence which is about fifty yards in front of the palace. Interesting Programme Presented at Tweed Consolidated School

Tweed, May 27 By Mail—On Monday evening, May 23rd the pupils and friends of the pupils of Tweed Consolidated School were entertained in a concert at the school. During the year, the children under the able direction of Miss Lois Richardson, teacher of Grade 1 in the school, receive instruction in vocal music. The benefit of this instruction is seen in the efficient manner in which they sing their choruses. The entire programme, which was carried out by the pupil songs throughout the entire was in evidence, the numbers were given entirely from memory.

The concert was called to order at 8.30 by Mr. S. B. McGee, Chairman of the school board, who introduced the audience for the interest which they showed in the work carried on by their attendance at the annual school exercises. The programme was then given.

Mr. Crosbie followed his address with three reels of motion pictures. The first reel dealt with work among the men when the fire hazard is low; the second, with the methods employed in fighting the fire. The third reel "The Canadian Beaver" showed this emblem of Canada in its native haunts.

Two other numbers on the programme deserving of special reference were a reading by Anna Kirkpatrick, "The Empire's Flag" and a song by the Senior Third Class, "Empire Day."

Mr. Crosbie, in a few words, thanked the audience for the interest which they showed in the work carried on by their attendance at the annual school exercises.

TAX RATE TURNS CORNER

For the first time in years the city's total tax rate is headed downward at 47.5 mills for public school supporters. Last year 1931 saw the highest rate in the city's history with 48 mills. On the other hand owing to the increase in the separate school rate this year to 10.2 mills from 8.9 in 1931, the total rate for separate school supporters is slightly higher, two tenths of a mill at 46.8 mills for the present year. The rate for separate school supporters reached its peak in 1930 when their total was 47.2.

To reach this condition in which it looks as if the corner has been turned in the expenditures which the city is carrying, much paring has been necessary to offset certain obligations which fell heavily upon the present council, as for instance by law must be made a good a loss as result of a tax sale of $9,568.22 and a loss on sale of debentures for sidewalks, sewers and extension of S.S. No. 6. The general rate this year 22.8 mills, is three tenths of a mill higher than in 1931.

Departments and institutions in which saving is estimated include public works, (the largest), the hospital board, the fire department and the police. There are cuts to several organizations, which are usually given grants.

The council felt this year had a mandate from the people to reduce the rate and that was strengthened in this opinion by the general trend of trade and finance during the early months of the year. This has been accomplished in spite of unexpected burdens due to unemployment. But though the rate is cut (and this will help ratepayers at a time when money is tight) it will find it more difficult to pay taxes than in past years) the assurance is given that what is essential will be done to provide that relief which is found necessary in the stress of the enforced idleness of so many men.

NATIONAL LIBRARY

Creation of a national library and museum, as been urged by Sir Robert Falconer as a means of developing national consciousness and pride, is also endorsed by the Royal Society of Canada.

Important as libraries are to the communities, their influence cannot be so great as of a national library to the whole Dominion of Canada which expresses national ideals and standards. The small libraries are doing a great work of education but they are by no means restricted in their educational influence to national literature but a national museum and library would serve just that purpose. There are many factors that will lead to the development of national ideals and aspirations and one of these is through such a national institution.

ARE OPTIMISTIC

The Speech from the Throne and the words of the Governor General at London indicate clearly that within the bounds of the Empire there is the possibility of trade which will be of benefit not only to the component parts of the Empire but also to the world at large on which the Empire exerts a powerful influence. Lord Bessborough was clear when he showed that irresponsible optimism would be an error and that hard work and a new era is in the making with new thoughts along new avenues of trade.

GOOD GAME NEWS

North Hastings folk would not mind if more moose could be found in the opening season at least their habitations as the animal found on the highway three miles from Murpyh's Corners this week. However it is good game news.

PUBLIC IS INTERESTING

Meetings of medical men engaged in research bring out more real live news than many other conventions. The probable reason is that mankind is more than ever interested in keeping the body healthy and because the health associations have been conducting an educational campaign with regard to disease which is having good results. Then there is the appeal of scientific discovery.

Medical workers believe that men and women can learn of human maladies without forever holding their pulse or becoming depressed and obsessed with fear.

SONG OF RETURN
By Aline Michaelis

Let me go back to the byways,
To the little lanes I love;
Let me forsake the highways
Where the great crowds move.

Give me the fields of clover
And the thrush's happy call;
I, who was once a rover,
Have wearied of far things' thrall.

I would renounce the fever,
All the hurry and fret of the game;
I, once a true believer
In the god that men call fame.

I would go back to the treasure
Of a life that is pure and sweet,
Back to the simple pleasure,
Back to the village street.

I would go back to the glory
Of faith that no doubt can stain,
Back to the old, old story
Of love that will never wane.

FOURTEEN HUNDRED WOMEN were found homeless and hungry in New York City where enough money is wasted nightly in Broadway to feed a regiment a week. Many women applied to the Travellers Aid Society, a few in their teens, thirty-nine more than sixty years of age, others in their twenties, thirties and forties. Looks like the city of New York has more lights and shades than ancient and wicked Babylon—and that means the homeless women, does not include the unfortunates whose existence depends upon commercialized vice, the thousands of street walkers in search of a night out of misery on the Bowery and Chatham Square, in the hours between midnight and dawn. The women who like homeless men were first attracted by the great white lights of Broadway, then singed and started down town, bumped from Broadway into Fourteenth street, that cross-section of vice and viciousness; then shoved over into Second or Third Avenue and backed into the Bowery on the downward trail which usually ends under the dirty water of the East River. There's plenty of religion in New York City, too, great cathedrals which cost many millions, which cater to the rich all winter and close up in the summer when the pastor goes to the mountains or the seashore — religion but not enough christianity as preached and practised by the Man of Galilee, the carpenter's son, who came not to save the righteous but to minister unto sinners.

BROOK WATER MAY BE CLEAR BUT NOT PURE

Seven Points Stressed Where Water For Drinking is Concerned

BY LOUIS E. HISCH, M.D., Ph.D.
Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

Although your presence in a city supply may be entirely unobjectionable, laminated. You must keep in mind when you breed any of those localities that is the water that you find there may be dangerous. Remember that the disease above all others we must guard against.

The following seven points should be stressed where water for human consumption is concerned:

1. The question of living animals in the water. Do not drink it. It may render the water dangerous. In this way I know Dr. Salisbury's source of drinking water with fish. Unfortunately, I have seen many crustaceans which may contaminate water and, in many instances, help purify the water. Crustaceans are not to be condemned. Their presence always a source of pure water. Any little water very little organic matter. Such water is usually filled with vegetable organisms.

2. The water should be entirely free from ammonia and chlorides. Chlorides, nitrates and sulphates only a trace should be present.

3. Of mineral constituents, such as, iron and manganese, only small portions should not be greater than five parts per million. Remember the water in excess of this, the water becomes too hard.

Good and reliable water may be had from city reservoirs, for these are inspected regularly. As a rule also, water from natural springs, deep wells and upland surface areas is usually satisfactory, as these are does not drain into them.

Water that is not properly filtered and is always to be suspected. The same thing is true of water from railwater mines, as in Bermuda, which depends largely upon this source of supply. It is gathered in cisterns, underground tanks, which are roofed and covered, ventilated and screened. Its purity depends on health often can be traced from rivers into which refuse of various kinds is thrown.

Some people believe that if water tastes all right, it is safe. Nothing could be more dangerous to the truth. Water pleasing to the taste is not always safe.

Should there be the slightest question of whether you wish to drink, it is better to avoid it. If doubtful about a well or municipal supply, have a sample of the water sent to the chemical laboratory of the local Board of Health or your Provincial Board of Health at once for the purpose.

Another erroneous notion is that water must be pure if it comes from an old well. The fact is that often constitute the greatest menace to health.

Always watch house drainage. In the country, see that privies and other up-to-date cesspool or sewer. In the latter case, be sure that your soil pipes and the traps and horizontal pipes in the house are properly ventilated.

Water must be used, if suspected water must be used, it is best to filter it. Filtration is desirable in other cases. Other chances with your water supply.

"SOAKING" CAPITOL

There is a general conviction that all classes of society are interdepend ent, that the welfare of one class cannot be thoroughly secured without other classes suffering in proportion. Since it is true, we see the remedy in the abolition of class and the substitution of that spirit of society in which all social distinctions would vanish. In pursuit of this idea—which can be proven itself impracticable—they would bring on chaos and so would confusion worse confounded. Not many people understand the destructive theories; but there is a rather loud-mouthed element which is ready to act on what it thinks it understands and is everlastingly attacking capital and capitalists. Under the superior ability and innuity, have succeeded in accumulating wealth. Discontent brings on a spirit of dangerous fanaticism, which is always ready to act. It starts on all forms of material prosperity. It is well that this dangerous manifestation of envy and ill-will should be openly condemned by leaders of the wage-earners— so many of whom are themselves capitalists, in a small way.—Hamilton Spectator.

Letters to The Editor

TIME'S CHANGE.

Hutchinson, Kansas,
May 23, 1932.

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—Enclosed is your paper of May 12th. I read it through, including the ads, and did not find a familiar name except Massey-Harris Machinery Company. They have a large distributing plant here.

It has been over fifty years since I was in Prince Edward County, Ontario. I sorted over pie, passed on land Mills, and delivered the evening paper across the river in Belleville. Also I remember at that time one spring when the ice broke up in the river, it blocked up against the bridge and flooded down the street to the bay and left large quantities of fish in the street.

I remember distinctly one hot day I watched the men at the corner-store when they were building the Wesleyan Methodist Church. I went to church there for many years after the Methodist Church, a few blocks east of the Grand Trunk Station. One night about eleven o'clock, the church burned down. Then built it again and I attended a meeting one evening held at the Methodist Church, when there were hundreds of places since, but none lasted quite as long as the one I attended that little church in Belleville, about a mile east.

About that time, a temperance lecturer came to the church. Somehow I know Dr. Sanford kept it to this day. I am satisfied that if I had been present that night and sign-ed and kept it, I would not be alive today.

Yours very truly,

JOHN SPROULE.

PLOUGHING LAND.

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer.

Dear Sir:—I notice in the columns of your paper you can render a further service to the farmers by calling attention to the need of assisting conservation authorities enlarge upon their offer of furnishing garden plots to those who are applying facilities to plough the land. Many people who have small gardens are scarcely able to pay for ploughing at the cost of $2 per plot. A few ago Ex-Mayor Mikel made a timely suggestion about the free ploughing of land within our city bounds and a local dealer offered to supply the seeds gratis. The inevitable result such was not acted upon then. Even more pressing is the necessity now that more than ever. Our Provincial and Dominion governments have plans to assist folk back to the farm as a result of good relief work. Municipal aid in this regard would be a fine local mess policy and likely forestall the spending money on large plans for supplies next winter besides eliminating considerable of the feeling of humiliation and lowered morale of unfortunate citizens. Several plots, towns and cities have adopted elsewhere are pursuing this laudable and practical scheme and have secured idleness gives time for grounding. Surely this is worth call for service. Our period of depression may yet result in a scarcity of supplies and a consequent scramble for followed by famine and disease.

Remember, I have your public spiritedness and for the opportunity of making my foregoing before it is too late, I remain,

THE WAR MEMORIAL

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:
City.

Dear Sir:

I desire to convey through you, to the proprietor of your paper my appreciation of the fine publicity, and without charge in connection with the unveiling of the War Memorial, to thank all those who contributed to make it a success. To the Belleville Hill, who had charge of the religious part of the service and Colonel Cockburn, D.S.O., in charge of the military part of it and those who so ably assisted, Lieut. Barragar in particular who took charge of the ceremonies. Major Anderson, who looked after the location of each unit, the chairman of the Memorial Committee, Alderman of the city, the School Boards, especially the Collegiate school, the School for the Deaf, the Girls' Home, the Boy Scouts and their ladies who did the unveiling, the ministers of the various churches who assisted in the service, the Salvation Army and their band, the Citizens' Band, the Air Cadet Battalion and their Band, the Cadets, the 21st Battery, and the Band of the 34th Battery; to those who kindly loaned cars for transportation and especially to the school children for their assistance in such large numbers and to all those who took part in the parade. I also wish to thank the Women's Patriotic Association for the generous contribution towards the cost of the monument and to all others who contributed towards it. These should be publicly acknowledged in detail together with the cost of the monument, the foundation and inscribing of the names.

There is space on this monument for twelve more names which can be put on by arranging with Mr. A. C. Campbell, West Bridge Street, who had charge of that part of the work and the erection of the monument. This will be done in a very satisfactory manner.

I would like to have completed the monument with the bronze statue which I had arranged to purchase from March Bros. in England at a cost of £500 (pounds) but the response to financial assistance has not been sufficient to enable me to do so and I have decided to let the matter stand until such time as our citizens have means available for this purpose. Present economic conditions are extremely difficult.

Again expressing my appreciation to all those who were present or assisted to make the affair a success, I am

A TIME TO BOOST SPORTS

With conditions subnormal and many citizens, young and old, rather depressed because of lack of funds due to hard times, it would seem a good time to boost amateur sports. By doing clean wholesome pastimes those in a morbid state of mind can be lifted to forget their troubles and look upon the brighter side of life. That will mean much towards preserving the mental equilibrium of normal times return.

Recently the amateur baseball season will be ushered in at Pinnacle Park on the evening of every Wednesday and Saturday during the summer. The promoters of the league have supplied a fine provide amusement at the lowest possible admission fee, and deserve much commendation. The many local enthusiasts who attend the games and at the same time provide sport lovers with invigorating entertainment.

Not only does the staging of games give the amateurs something to feel happy about but it provides employment for a few more unfortunate young men who are out of employment. There is nothing better for a city than amateur sports and it is sincerely hoped that St. Thomas will retain its reputation for a year of being the best baseball town in the province.—St. Thomas' Times-Journal.

MIXED PREFERENCES BY COLLEGE STUDENTS

The seniors in the Sheffield Scientific school at Yale University have voted for Gandhi as their favorite world figure, with Ramsay MacDonald second, and Mussolini third. The verdict cannot be attributed to anti-British prejudice, for Winston Churchill, Prime Minister is the runner-up. Probably many of the voters admire the his genius for publicity, which has stamped his image on the mind of the American people more than in any one in this choice by a class of graduate students is a striking illustration of western scientific development.

MacDonald naturally appeals to Americans because of the romantic aspects of his early career and his winnings, which has prompted his American admirers to call him the Scottish Lincoln. They are thinking of the blacksmith shop in which the United States three years ago and made so deep an impression by his eloquence. Gandhi's popularity it may be a some what changed person already recognized as a saint by his followers.

Mussolini, the third choice, is at the opposite pole from Gandhi. The vote for him probably springs from the sensational way he has handled the first choice of the students as their favorite statesman. Perhaps it may merely express the admiration of youth for the supreme man of action.

Whitelaw Reid, Jones and Turner receiving an equal number of votes as favorite characters in fiction. Jones is the hero of a book so dear-ly poke at their seniors by voting for fictitious ones. Jones, by endearing rakes, but at least both characters have a serious literary value. On this score Thackeray should be mentioned in the same breath, but Pendennis and Esmond are the choice of the "Forsyte Saga as the favorite work of fiction, and Galsworthy as their favorite prose writer. This suggests a maturity and sobriety of taste attributed to elders. The only novels which re-ceived more than one "Forsyte Saga", Meredith's "The Ordeal of Richard Feverel," Hardy's "Woodlanders Maniacs," Fielding's "Tom Jones", and Thackeray's "Vanity Fair" chosen by British authors. The only prose authors besides Galsworthy who appeared in the list were Carlyle, Hudson, Stevenson. Willa Cather and Somerset Maugham. Of poets Willa Cather is the only American. The favorite poets are Kipling Browning and Tennyson, in the order named.—London Advertiser.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF 'BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 27, 1912.

Dr. John Ferguson of China in company with his father, the Rev. John Ferguson, the superannuated Methodist minister of this city, visited Albert College and addressed the faculty and students. In the course of his remarks he announced that he would be joined by his two brothers, Dr. Percy Ferguson and Dr. Wilmot Ferguson of New York would provide a scholarship of $1,000. In honor of their father. Those distinguished men are all graduates of Albert College. The interest on this amount is to provide for tuition each year to some worthy but needy student. Preference is to be given to candidates for the ministry of the Methodist Church.

A man up a tree was the strange discovery which was made last night by a resident of Alexander street. A man had been noticed acting strangely and walking back and forth in front of a house on that street. Finally he climbed a tree and peered into the house through a window. The neighbors became alarmed and sent for the police. When the officer arrived the man had come down from the tree and disappeared. The police have suspicions as to the identity of the nervy person and it is likely that a charge will be apprehended and called upon to answer for his actions.

There used to be a county councillor attending the regular sessions of that body here who was so economical about at night were such a mystery that the other members were bent on to declare that he slept in the tunnel.

DOBBIN IN ZEBRA ROLE

Barrie, May 27.—Two Pinkston youths had a novel effort to make a zebra of Old Dobbin a theatrical costly experiment. Yesterday John Madden and John Hayes appeared before Magistrate Copeland in Penetang, and were fined $10 and costs each, and a third faced costs amounting to $785 when he appeared for trial. The accused, Samuel Smith was assisted by the two youths in painting the animal's sides. Until the horse sheds its coat, however, the leader next fall, he will remain a zebra.

ATTRACTIONS VARIED AND MANY AT FAIR

Drawing Contest For Heavy and Light Draught Horses

RACE MEET

Clifford Amusement Co. to Supply Grand Stand Performance

Many feature performances were added to the list of attractions to be presented by the Belleville Fair next fall at their monthly meeting held last night. In the absence of President Mitchell, Harry Stock occupied the chair for the evening and the various changes reported as to their progress to date.

Drawing Contest

One of the few features to be presented at this year's fair is a drawing contest for light and heavy draught horses. The idea is to place a stone boat, loaded with heavy stones, etc., in front of the grand stand and the team of horses will be hitched to the boat and the winner declared when drawn the heaviest load. This feature has been a decided success at various other fairs and will be open to heavy draught teams and light draught teams not exceeding 2,800 lbs. Lafferty was named chairman of this attraction.

Race Meet

Another feature will be the farmer's running race which was such a decided success last year, when nine horses faced the barrier. It was decided to hold a farmer's running race on Wednesday and Friday with the latter day the date for the farmer's running race, when riders would be mounted and no harness would be allowed to ride his own horse. The same conditions as that staged last in this race but the Wednesday race will go to the horse making the day's fastest time. The day's race will see a farmer riding his opponent's horse and quite naturally he will try and bring his opponent's horse in ahead of his own with the result that the horse finishing last will be declared the winner.

All final arrangements were completed for the Fair Board's next meet to be held on June 1st this year. Secretary R. H. Ketchenson assured the meeting that the entries were coming in quite rapidly and he was of the opinion with the advance entries on hand that all three races would be well filled. Especially the feature race of the day the 2.13 pace or less. There are three races scheduled for the meet, namely, the 2.22 trot or pace, the 2.18 trot or pace and the 2.13 trot or pace.

Clifford's Re-Engaged

Getting back to the Belleville Fair the Clifford Amusement Company were re-engaged to supply free acts in front of the grandstand again this year. They will also provide a musical revue each afternoon and evening. An amateur performance of local talent, yet to be named, will also be added to the grandstand performance. It was also decided advisable to again have a large display of livestock each evening as the members were of the opinion that this was one of the finest features of the Belleville Fair.

A special school boys' or girls' running race will be staged on the first day of the fair thus assuring the juvenile part of the race every day except Thursday of the fair. All committees reported as to the special prize list is being prepared by Secretary Ketchenson who assured the meeting that the prize list of the Belleville Fair for 1932 would by far surpass the list of any previous fair in this district.

Kaye Don Only Makes 91.37 M.P.H. and May Abandon Trial

Gardone, Italy, May 27—Bitterly disappointed with the performance of his new boat, the Miss England III, Kaye Don was considering the advisability today of abandoning further attempts at the world's speedboat record.

Don's first attempt at the record on Lake Garda yesterday failed by a wide margin. The Miss England, whose two 12-cylinder engines generate 4,000 horsepower, averaged only 91.37 miles per hour, compared to Gar Wood's universal standard of 111.719 M. P. H.

NEWARK BEARS DROP FAST IN LEAGUE RACE

One Defeat Carries Them From First to Fourth Place

BISONS ROMP

Within Hailing Distance of Top Through Win Over Rochester

(By the Associated Press)

Their fourth successive defeat, had dropped Al Mamaux's Newark Bears from first to fourth place in the International League today, adding proof of the closest early season race the circuit has enjoyed in many years.

The Baltimore Orioles, responsible for all four Newark defeats in the last few days, had taken over the pace-setting duties, a half game in front of the Buffalo Bisons and Montreal Royals, who are in a virtual tie for second place. Newark, a half game behind these two latter clubs, was only a game out of the lead.

Home Runs Did It

Home runs by Heine Sand and Don Hurst and a run scoring double by Frank Packard caused Newark's defeat yesterday, 4-3. Baltimore bunched most of its nine hits off Roy Nekola in the fourth and fifth frames, while Ken Holloway was keeping Newark's 11 pesky well scattered. George Selkirk's homer in the ninth served to make the game close.

Buffalo continued its mopping up process at the expense of the Rochester Red Wings, 5-1. Ollie Carnegie's home run and double accounting for three tallies. Bill Werber and Fred Fitzsimmons cared for the others with home run drives. Russell Rhodes limited the Wings to following five scattered hits and one unearned run. He has given the Rochesterites but two in 27 innings. Bud Teachout fanned nine batters in the circuit for the seventh safeties in between strikeouts.

Jersey City continued its winning streak and made it three out of four from the Reading Keys, 7-4, on a three, obtained from the Brooklyn Dodgers, went the route although his mates gave him a big edge against the Skeeter attack with a home run and triple.

Montreal and Toronto were not scheduled.

WALKER EKES OUT DECISION

Late Punch Turns Crowd Who Cheered For Him Against

New York, May 27.—The title hopes of Mickey Walker, as tough a little man as ever scaled a ring scale, all but smashed up last night on that cold rock of the Fordham Square, Paulino Uzcudun. Little Mickey barely eked out a decision in ten tough, bitter rounds as out the whole of the ring after the decision with a crowd of 8,000 howling for the grueling Spaniard and booing him.

Off to a slow, even start, Walker fired after the third round, let Paulino pull even in the series through the seventh and then went out to start a scathing upburst with a punch that turned the crowd against him.

After winning the eighth round with a swirling two-fisted attack, Walker kicked away the early little lead. The Spaniard started it, hurling Mickey Walker with a smash to the body just after the bell, opened and dropped his hands and stepped back. As he did, while referee Willie Lewis started in to separate them, Walker swung a right from his heels and split the Basque's left eyebrow in a semi-circle.

The first punch of the ninth was a right chop to the head broke the wound wide open and splashed another over the red blinded Paulino could only paw and flail at Walker for the next two rounds, as his wound bled freely, and he was a sad, if game, and choppy left flooks to the head.

BATTER'S ALLEY BALL CAN RUIN ANY BALL GAME

Statement Borne Out When Gehrig Spanked One to Liking

BRAVES OUSTED

Chicago Cubs Idle and Go Ahead of Boston Who Lose

By GAYLE TALBOT

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

One bad pitch a game, one ball, that gets away from the pitcher and goes down the batter's alley, can very easily cost a good team a pennant, said Walter Johnson recently in explaining his preference for mound men with tight control.

"It doesn't matter how much speed and curves you have if you cannot put that ball where he wants it for nine innings is likely to be licked any game he starts. One 'alley' ball is a good batter and there goes the game."

As if to bear out his boss' contention, General Alvin Crowder of the Senators tossed one up just that sort and Gehrig of the Yankees in the sixth inning of yesterday's tilt between the American League pace-setters. Three Yanks were on base at the time and Crowder, up to that point, had been locked in a scoreless duel with Charles (Red) Ruffing.

Bears Out Theory.

So Gehrig, further bearing out Johnson's theory, spanked the ball over the right field fence. The Yanks gathered another run in the ninth for a final score of 5-0, but it was Gehrig's blow that knocked the wind out of the Senators. Crowder didn't give them a hit the last six innings.

The victory perched the Yankees on top by four full games and left the Senators with only a two-game lead over the third place Detroit Tigers who were beating Cleveland 11 to 2 in the first half of a scheduled doubleheader. The second game was rained out in the fifth with the count tied 1-1.

Foxx Hits Fifteenth.

Jimmy Foxx hit his fifteenth home run of the year, going four ahead of Babe Ruth, as the Athletics pounded out a 7-3 win over Boston. Up to the sixth, when rain halted proceedings, Lefty Grove had limited the Red Sox to four hits. Cleveland and St. Louis also rained out.

The Boston Braves dropped off the National League pennant race, yielding to the idle Chicago Cubs, when they got the short end of a double-header with the Phillies, 17-13. It was a peculiar contest as the Phillies led 12-2 at the end of the third; the Braves were leading 13-12 going into the eighth. Five runs in the last of the eighth settled the argument.

Brooklyn and its batting order mixed up and lost a run that would have won the ball game. Hurst went on to beat the Giants anyway, 3-2, in ninth innings. Rookie Lon George Kelly and Frank O'Doul were costly by their wild throws allowing the Dodgers only nine hits and ranned 15.

Pittsburgh made it three straight from Cincinnati, 3-2, and went into fifth place, scoring its victory off Red Lucas in the second inning. Bill Hallahan was the pitcher for the Pirates who beat Reds scored twice. But Swift pulled the Pirates through.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

After careful consideration for some time it was finally announced yesterday that a meeting of all those interested in the formation of a box lacrosse league in Belleville were to be held at present at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night of this week. Jack Allin of this city has gathered together considerable information along the lines of organizing the proposed loop so both old and new players are as well as interested fans are asked to be at the "Y" at 7.30 p.m. so that the ideas and suggestions of all may be heard and informally talked over. The meeting will be quite an open affair and is in line with of all concerned that as many as possible will be on hand to give their personal opinions and give to the meeting any suggestions which they deem advisable.

We have been informed by those who are in a position to know, that only one Belleville boxer is going to be seen in the fight in the Eastern Ontario championships to be staged here on May 30th. The promoters of the championships are in town this week and only wanted a certain number of boxers in each division or class. The local mit artists were not enthused over the proposition due to the fact that it looked as though the Belleville City promoters were picking their fighters instead of throwing it open as advertised. If the bouts are for the championships of Eastern Ontario why did the Kingston promoters restrict the number of entries in some of the classes?

The local promoters were of the opinion that the Kingston boys were going to have a field day away from. Jack Hatfield is taking Jack Dunn to the bouts and entering him in the 147 pound class. If facts be in condition, and Hatfield claims he is, then he should have no trouble and give some pointers on a lesson which he will remember for some little time. Jack Dunn is like any part of Jack Parks in Belleville as he is another Belleville welter kicking in his ring appearance in the Lily Lock City.

The local men's city softball executive are conclaving today right for the time of drawing up a schedule and finishing off all their league business before they open the season next Monday night. Indications are they will start operations about Monday or Tuesday of next week. The Bankers have dropped out of the loop leaving seven teams to face the barrier.

Every sport has had its opening fling except golf which will enjoy a horse race, but their time is coming and it will not be long. The horse committee of the Agricultural Society has arranged a most interesting card of three events and some of the best horses in this district will be on the ground before the end of the week. A 2.13 class for $200.00, a 2.18 class for $250.00 and a 2.22 class for $200.00 has been billed with a small entrance fee. Belleville has engaged in years past the best race meet in Eastern Ontario and Wednesday next will be no exception.

We understand that all the "horsemen" of the Province will be on hand after the big end of the money in the 2.13 class with such names as Walter Gallant, Rod Graham, McKinley the Great and others are sure to start. Les Bennett, who has his string here has all his charges well keyed up and is now leading them down for the final prep and some smart miles are being turned in. The 2.18 class will be the first on after noon as many can get into this circle and there will be races aplenty. Of course one cannot overlook the slow class pacers for they sometimes step to town faster than the faster class horses.

Dick Ketchenson, who is acting secretary of the meet, already has received nine entries for the meet not counting the local horses, so it can be assumed there will be no dearth of racing material. Many will be on hand from Smith's Falls, Kingston, Napanee and other points and, while a few will skip in from the west. The track is in excellent condition and there is a possibility that one heat of the 2.13 class may break the track record of 2.09 held by Willie Gratian. Ride a day out and enjoy an afternoon with the best sport at present in this Province.

The entire roster of the Nationals will be out to practise at the Fair Grounds tonight. Tommy Pointer returned from a short visit, which he enjoyed after Monday's game, out in the "sticks." In all probability Tommy will be in right back against the Kingston Ponies on June 3rd when the Nats' play their first game on the road. Carl Casey, Ernie Foster and Hutton will all be ready to take the mound duties for the Nationalists in pulling a barter as he has three pitchers-catchers on the bench at all times.

Manager Grove is contemplating a few changes or shake-ups, especially in the infield and hopes to strike the right combination before the locals journey to Kingston. The Nats will be out to practise again Monday evening.

COUNTY BOWLING LEAGUE FORMED

J. S. Morton, Stirling, Chosen President By Delegates

J. S. Morton of Stirling was unanimously elected as president of the Hastings County Bowling League at their annual meeting and banquet, which was held at the Victoria Cafe on Thursday evening.

Delegates were present from Deseronto, Tweed, Stirling, Deloro, Madoc, Belleville as well as from Picton and Brighton the latter two applying for affiliation in the league for 1932 after some little discussion they were admitted.

The election of officers found the following in office for 1932—President, J. S. Morton, Stirling; Vice President, J. A. Watson, Napanee; Secretary-Treasurer, R. S. Liberty of Belleville; Executive Committee, Alex Gordon, Madoc; Mr. Allum, Deseronio; P. Hindle, Tweed; T. Holmes, Stirling; M. Murray, Picton; and H. Rutherford of Madoc. The annual county lawn bowling tournament will be held in Belleville on July 13th, when all the clubs in the county will be represented in play here and the winners will be entered in the new bowling greens at the Fair grounds. It was also decided to stage monthly inter-club games if it is possible to keep the players of the various clubs in touch with each other and try to create a spirit of sportsmanship among the various bowling clubs of the county. All delegates were in favor of each of this idea. The annual fee was reduced to $5.00 per club this year instead of the usual $6.00 as heretofore due to the fact, that there were more clubs entering the loop each year. The annual reports of the secretary-treasurer were presented and accepted. Mr. G. Campbell, president of 1931 occupied the chair for the evening.

During the evening's programme Mr. Harold Barrett and Mr. Fred Sprague entertained the delegates with a few vocal numbers and were accompanied on the piano by Alex Gordon of this city. The meeting was voted the most successful in the history of the league and all are looking keenly forward to the annual county lawn bowling tournament to be held in Belleville on July 13th.

Skin Eruptions Require Gentle Treatment

Unhappiness walks beside the girl or boy whose complexion is unsightly with pimples. Youth is sensitive to defects of appearance, made fearfully unhappy. Mirrors or reveals would be a heavenly diversion compared to pimples, or which youth is conscious every waking moment and finds every time mirrors must take a hand in the matter.

Facial eruptions may develop into chronic acne because of harsh treatment of the skin. Chronic acne is no ordinary affliction. It can prove stubborn and treatment must be long continued. The afflicted young person, hearing from all sides that soap and water scrubbing is part of the cure, overdoes the complexion to a state of soreness. Or she smothers it with ointments and cosmetic and frictions the skin violently. Sometimes has its own instructions well for certain conditions, but when the pores of the skin are laden with pus, massage spreads the infection.

There is also present that nervous impulse to pass the fingers over pustules. Finger the sore just after. They pick up germs wherever germs lurk. The result, more pimples, a worse complexion.

Careless squeezing of pimples can so ruin the skin tissue of the face that permanent scars result. Tissues are weak when pimples are present and the skin surface is easily broken, conditions are favorable for the coming of pittings and scars.

Skin specialists have discovered various means of combatting pimples. It is easier to clear them away if treatment starts at the inception of the small boils, before meddling fingers have spread infection, and scrubbings have made matters worse.

The ultra violet ray is employed with fairly good results. Serums are used with success. Certain chemicals are applied to check the excessive secretion of sebaceous which, often enough, is at the root of the trouble. Medicated soaps dry up the pustules.

Diet is an important part of the treatment. There is a restriction of fatty foods, pastries, highly seasoned meats, the liberal allowance of green salads, vegetables, fruits and fruit juices. It is highly necessary that constipation be avoided. By drinking six or eight glasses of water a day, the skin and kidneys will carry off more of the body's waste materials, relieving the tissue glands of their burdens.

A new idea is neck massage, which stimulates the jugular veins and the lymph channels. It is a real aid. With the flattened palms the neck is stroked firmly from chin to collar bone and back again. The nape of the neck is clutched between fingers and thumbs, lifted, frictioned. Fingers are placed back of the ears and the flesh stroked downward to the shoulders.

When pimples are opened, the flesh should be warm. Then the soapy bath and a sterilized needle used for lancing. After the pus has been expelled by gentle pressure with finger tips covered with gauze, leave the wound with a saturate solution of boric acid.

Enjoyable Tea

A very successful tea was held at the home of Mrs. Wm. Mattis, 13 Grove street on Thursday, May 26th, when she opened her home for a tea in aid of Group 2, of the Women's Association of Tabernacle Church. The home was tastefully decorated with soft lights and flowers. The guests were received by Mrs. Mattis and Mrs. W. S. Gerow, convener of the Group, while Mrs. M. Burgess acted as treasurer. The ladies' table looked beautiful with silver basket of tulips, rose candles and silver. Mrs. J. McEwan presided at the tea table while Mrs. W. Harrison invited the guests to the tea room. Mrs. R. Blakely and Mrs. W. Michaud served assisted by Mrs. Palmer, Mrs. Evans, Mrs. Huffman, Mrs. Mifflin, and Mrs. Fox. Mrs. Laughlin for, and Mrs. D. Laughlin took charge of home cooking, fancy work and candy. Ice cream and cake was served to the children on the verandah, Anna Gerow being in charge.

An unique feature of the afternoon was a hot supper served by Mrs. Mattis to the men, the decoration of the table being carried out in Japanese effect. A beautiful Japanese doll adorned the cake. Mrs. R. Ketcheson poured tea.

The prizes given for the ones who was in the oldest working clothes were won by G. Cook first, J. Mattis, second. The happy and prosperous afternoon came to a close by Mrs. Gerow tendering a vote of thanks seconded by Mrs. Evans to Mrs. Mattis for her hospitality. Also a vote of thanks to Mrs. Ketcheson for her splendid assistance, and the group ladies singing "For She's a Jolly Goodfellow."

The Beauty Box

(By Helen Pulsifi)

So much make-up and no more can the feminine pals get away with. If it doesn't contain a touch of calcimine, the raspberry cheek glow, the cherry lips, the blue or grey eyeshadows should be included. Delete the heavy make-up and the person can be laid on deftly; they produce that mysterious, heavy-lidded look that makes the envy of femmes think is simply gorgeous. These shadows come in two forms, creamy and compact. Oily ones provide a glisten that has a brightening effect upon soul lamps. That's what the sisterhood is after.

Simple tincture of benzoin serves as an astringent for the complexion that exudes too much oil. Get a half ounce bottle. Pour a few drops in a washbowl of cold water and use as a final rinsing after the face has been bathed with soap and warm water. Too much butter on the bread, too much rich gravy, too much fat meat excite the sebaceous glands and throw over the complexion the oily film that is so maddening.

Plastic surgery is used to correct outstanding ears and to decrease the size of the nose. Many a girl as girls can curtain their ears with curly locks, there will be no great rush to the offices of cosmetic surgeons. Touching the ear lobe with rouge leaves it into shadow, makes it less conspicuous. Only pretty ears should be cut in the open.

The riddle string neck needs anointing with lanolin or cocoa butter and vigorous massage. Place finger tips of both hands in an up and down line in the middle of the throat, stroke upward firmly to the ears. Follow with a brisk pinching with the hands. Bind on a cold cloth compress, cover with a dry one, say prayers and go to bed.

Press the lip line inward by wearing rouge above, and the paint will gradually increase in size. Such a condition favors the arrival of a bunion, that which there are few foot defects more painful or disfiguring to the contour of the human pedal.

Correct Manners

(By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman)

BREAD AND BUTTER PLATE

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper to place relish on your bread and butter plate? This seems an odd question, but recently, while lunching with a friend, I noticed she placed a piece of stuffed celery and two olives on the plate that already contained a roll and butter. I was not it looked overcrowded. I used the plate for bread and butter only.

Was I right?

X. Y. Z.

This isn't an "odd" question, really for it is constantly arising in our lives. There isn't any nice definite rule about it—but I wish that there were.... and we do as we wish or as we think best under the circumstances.

For myself, I have evolved a suggestion that seems to work very well. I usually place on my bread and butter plate, for dinner, what is to be eaten before any other course is served, or they may be eaten during the soup course or just after the soup course, before the entree is served (if there is an entree), or perhaps during the entree or main course. They may be passed once or twice in this time, and we might eat them at our wish and convenience. In the meantime plates would be changed, and so we would refer to have these accessories on some plate that remained during this time—the bread and butter plate.

The same thing would apply at breakfast, if we as served marmalade or some other jelly appropriate for breakfast. We have to eat this with our bread or rolls, and therefore it would be conveniently placed on our bread and butter plate. But if, on the other hand, we are served mint jelly, obviously to go with the lamb of the main course, then this we would place on our dinner plate. The same thing to those of any other food-accessories to accompany the main course.... any kind of pickles, appliance, relishes such as chutney or pickles of any kind.

Remember that this is only a self made rule of mine, but try it and see if it really isn't convenient.

INVITATIONS

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to give an afternoon luncheon and bridge to introduce my daughter-in-law to my family. Although they have been married for four months, circumstances have been such that she, coming from another city, has not met any of her newly acquired relatives.

I suggest that you write our invitations in the form of a note—something like this:

Dear Dorothy,

I am planning a luncheon and bridge in honor of my new daughter, Julia, on Friday, the first of June, at one o'clock, and one o'clock, and it would make me very happy if you could come. You will—won't you?—for I want very much to have you two dear people know each other.

Dearest love to you, and the hope to see you on the first.

Affectionately,

(Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

Government to Hire Planes For Patrols

Toronto, May 27.—Faced with the possible loss of valuable timber limits worth millions of dollars through raging forest fires in Northern Ontario, the Department of Lands and Forests have entered into an agreement with air private flying companies for the use of airplanes when needed.

They will be used in addition to the provincial forestry air force at present engaged in fighting the fires. The private planes will be paid for on the tonnage mile and not on the flying-hour basis.

Fast happiness is not proof if its source is still fragrant.

It has been a long cruel winter, with spring stubbornly refusing to bring the first tulip or crocus or yellow daffodil. But inevitably, Mother Nature will assert herself, and then the homes up and down your street will be individual scenes of personal pride.

Lawns will be green, flowers will glow in window boxes, hedges will be neatly trimmed. It is this season of the year that you will require garden implements in adequate number to do each job well—you will want to patch up fences and trellises and repaint them, that your home may be "the prettiest of all."

FINANCIAL NEWS

SETTLED BACK IN OLD GROVE

Trading Heavier and Stocks Went Above New Lows

Toronto, May 27.— Disruptions, which shook the stock market on Thursday resulting in many new lows for the bear market did not return this morning and Toronto Stock Exchange's settled back into the groove again.

Trading was still somewhat heavier than norms to Thursday and liquidation continued in small measure the first hour. Stock did better thereafter with the result that by midday the most active issues were shows their morning lows and a good many of them fractions above last night.

There still were scattered losses, but these were not important. C.P.R. which had shot up rapidly towards the close last night, eased about ½ point this morning and Brazilian pirited below mine again. The food and chain store group also settled, with Canners "A" and Loblaw "A" and "B" off ½ point. Imperial Tobacco lost approximately ½ point, selling down to 14¾.

On the other hand, Bell Telephone, Consumers' Gas, Ford of Canada, Shawinigan, were firmer. Nickel was steady unchanged to slightly higher at 4¾ to 4¾. Oils were more irregular, B. A. Oil holding well, imperial dropping back to eight.

EASY ACTION ON MINE BOARD

Midday Changes Show Predominance of Minor Recessions

Toronto, May 27—Quiet, easy action marked forenoon trade on the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market today, with midday changes showing a predominance of minor recessions.

Dome Mines, first in the past few days, dropped but Wright-Hargreaves, Lake Shore, McIntyre were unchanged and Yuk Hughes added up a few cents to $2.38. Sylvanite and Central Pat. off a cent each to 44 and 3½ respectively, showed the only change among cheaper golds.

Eldorado sold off on the opening but recovered in the second hour to stand unchanged at noon. Peninsular Fete dropped a fraction to show the only change in the oil section.

WALL STREET IS ON GUARD

Watchful Waiting By Market After Rally

New York, May 27.—The stock market settled into a watchful waiting attitude today, after yesterday's late upturn.

The conservatism statement of senatorial leaders expressing determination to balance the budget together with reports of a swing toward the manufacturers sales tax, was widely described as banking and brokerage quarters as encouraging. The passage of the bonus bill weekend, however, tended to discourage extension of stock market commitments, and the persistent trickle of liquidation imparted a somewhat heavy tone to extremely quiet trading.

The liquidation was still concentrated in Utilities, Tobacco, Rails and Food shares. Losses of a point or more appeared in American Telephone, North American Electric Light common, Public Service of N.J., United Gas Improvement, Consolidated Gas, American Tobacco "B", Reynolds "B", Liggett and Myers "B", General Foods, Borden, Coca Cola, Loew, Allied Chemical Eastman, Sante Fe, Union Pacific and New York Central. Losses of 2 to 2 appeared in General Mills American Stores, and International Harvester and Mashines, and preferred issues continued as U.S. Steel, American Can and Standard of N.J. continued to resist the downward trend.

A further drop of $21,000,000 shown in the Weekly Brokerage loan statement, reducing the total to a new low for the tabulation at only $283,000,000, was taken as evidence of the extreme degree of liquidation reached in the 2 1-2 year deflation of marginal accounts.

MINOR—MOTOR JAMS OCCURRED

Wet and Slippery Streets Given as Cause of Mishaps

Wet streets last night caused by a continued downpour of rain contributed to two minor motor car accidents, neither of which caused any damage to machines or injuries to occupants.

Shortly after nine o'clock in the evening a large sedan, approaching Pinnacle Street from Campbell, was in collision with a car which was parked on the former street. Left front fender and one headlight were damaged on the heavier car, while only a front bumper was broken on the lighter one. Skidding wheels caused by sudden application of brakes on both machines was given as the cause. The matter was adjusted amicably between the drivers.

While making a left turn around the silent policeman at the Upper Bridge just before ten o'clock a small coupe driven by Mr. J. Masters, skidded and swerved into the concrete walk north of the bridge at the location. A buckled running board was the only damage sustained.

Late last evening a large Toronto transport truck driven by itself in difficulties in the centre of Murney's Hill. Wheels on the load was too heavy or not, or the streets too slippery for the truck, it was unable to make the grade and was forced to back down and wait slowly side the road until a tow-truck had been summoned to help up the hill.

ANOTHER DIFFICULTY ENCOUNTERED ON MAIN

Necessary to Have Cast Iron Bend at Hydrant

Work has not yet started on the programme of the beautification of the Pinnacle Street park, according to Mr. E. T. Austin, manager of the waterworks department.

For some time past the road leading into the plant has been in the course of repair by the engineer of public works and it will be necessary for this to be finished before the needed material for the extensive improvements on the park can be brought in. All materials have been ordered by the department and work will be ready to start as soon as the road is finished.

Some difficulty is being experienced by the waterworks department in their final finishing up of the work at the Lower Bridge. On the installation of the last hydrant at that location another cast iron bend, which is being especially cast, will be needed to complete the work. This bend becomes necessary so run the hydrant lead over an existing gas main paralleling the water main at that spot.

Modern industry is essentially international.

ADVENTURE, ROMANCE, COMEDY, THRILLS, IN NEW TWIN FEATURE BILL

Bill Boyd, always popular athletic star of action romances has one of his best roles in "Carnival Boat" which will be exhibited on the two feature program at the Belle Saturday and Monday, matinee daily.

This RKO Pathe picture is the first romance of the logging camps since sound was combined with "motion" pictures.

Some of the most beautiful mountain and timberland scenery ever caught by the camera is the background of the absorbing action of this adventure-romance of the big trees. It was filmed in the High Sierras of California. Colorful scenes aboard a carnival boat offer entertaining contrast to the outdoors.

Boyd plays a young lumberman who has risen up to be the owner of his father, a veteran of the timberlands. He is in love with a boat girl, played by Ginger Rogers, takes his mind off his duties in the logging camp of His father, in attempts to make his "chip off the old block" get down to serious business causes a rift between them. When the father sees new-zealously to cover-up his son's weakness and deliver their quota of timber, he nearly loses his life piloting a timber train down the mountain. But Bill sees the runaway train, risks his life to reach it and saves his father. The girl proves her worth and her love for Bill in a novel way for a happy ending.

The picture concludes with a crashing climax when the dynamiting of a log jam gives the star an opportunity to prove himself a hero.

Five Popular Screen Names

Five popular screen names head the cast of "Trader Horn," a story of a girl's unselfish love and a wayward youth's regeneration, which is the second feature offering on the same program.

Succeeds Where Others Fail

Famous Remedy Must be Unusually Good.

When time after time a remedy overcomes chronic conditions of ill-health after other treatments have failed it must have exceptional qualities. Hundreds of letters on file tell how people who had almost despaired of being well again were restored to health by Fruit-a-tives.

The secret of its unusual success is that is stimulates Five Vital Organs, the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin, to act naturally and merely use two of them. Fruit-a-tives strengthens as well as cleanses the whole digestive and eliminative system. 25c and 50c. Try them.

At The Capitol

"THE MOUTHPIECE" AND "TOP SPEED" NOW AT THE CAPITOL

"The Mouthpiece," a picture adapted from a play by Frank J. Collins, based on incidents in the life of a notorious New York lawyer, opens at the Capitol Theatre today with Warren William heading a specially selected cast of prominent screen players.

"The Mouthpiece" derives its title from the main character, portrayed by William. In certain circles a lawyer whose practice consists in freeing and assisting doubtful characters enmeshed in the toils of the law is known as a "mouthpiece." William acquires this appellation when he gives up his usual ice cream parlor job when politician has sent an innocent man to the electric chair. He has the down grade and changes completely, his association with shady characters leading to the development of a "legal-hophols" practice.

Sidney East includes Sidney Fox, tiny star of "Strictly Dishonorable," in the leading feminine role, that of Celia Faraday, the young stenographer with whom William falls in love and, as a result, is regenerated. Almost of equal importance is Aline Mackahan, an expert in cynical roles, who plays William's secretary, a portrayal similar to that of Edward G. Robinson's secretary in "Five Star Final." Guy Kibbee, stage veteran with several important films already to his credit, appears as a vital factor in William's character transformation. Other leading players are William Janney, John Wray, Noel Francis, Ralph Ince, Max Waldron, J. Carroll Naish, Stanley Fields, Emerson Tracey and Murray Kinnell.

"The Mouthpiece" represents the joint directorial efforts of James Flood and Elliott Nugent, their collaboration being devoted to getting complete co-ordination between dramatic situations and dialogue, with a view to speeding the picture's pace.

TOP SPEED

On the same programme, Joe E. Brown, whose mouth stretches from ear to ear and half-way down his back appears with Bernice Claire, Laura Lee and Jack Whiting in "Top Speed."

The last complete show today and Saturday commenced at 2.30.

team of "Are These Our Children?" Roscoe Ates and Cliff Edwards are the quintette of favorites in this RKO-Pathe picture.

"The highly entertaining story concerns a beautiful and cultured girl who hungers for romance denied her in her prosaic situation of librarian's assistant. Meeting the handsome sheik of a cheap dance hall, she is blinded by the glamour of his vivid talk of far-away places and big business deals. Stripping the shell for reality, she surrenders to her longings for romance, only to meet disillusionment and face a desperate struggle for happiness.

of $1,760.56 instead of $960.56. In speaking to the amendment, Alderman Armstrong apparently had gone carefully into the finances of the hospital and he presented clearly and concisely his stand in the matter. "According to the financial statement of the hospital board," said Mr. Armstrong, "they had an operating profit in 1930 of $34,557.36 and in 1931 an operating profit of $21,361.63. In 1930 they wrote off $20,558.09 and showed a net profit of $3,998.36. In 1931 they wrote off $17,534.10 and if they had not written off any considerable amounts, they would have had a profit of $3,787.47 but to make a deficit, they wrote off $12,243.85 of uncollectable accounts. In 1930 they showed a bank balance of $28,107.30 and in 1931 a bank balance of $36,-487.72. This has been a hard year and there are many, who will be unable to pay their taxes and we are duty bound to give the small taxpayer a break. Belleville has always paid her indigent account in full and I think the hospital should take care of their own without calling on help from the city."

Alderman Sprackett was of the same opinion.

Alderman Imlah: "I am between two fires, being a member of the City Council and also the hospital board but this I can say, the hospital need every cent it can get."

Alderman Woodley: "I have tried to be fair with every chairman and every organization in striking the estimates and the tax rate has gone as high as it should go. His Worship was elected on a platform of economy and I have tried to live in that range. The law says, we must take care of the tax sale of last year and that has been figured in, which was a large sum, nearly $10,-000.00. For the past two years we have had a progressive council and the workingman was given every chance, but now we have to call a halt to expenditures. The collection of taxes will not be as good this year as it was last year and the city does not owe the hospital anything. We have always paid our indigent account. From 1921 to 1931 the council has paid in grants and indigent accounts to the hospital a sum of $107,564.00 and every other organization has taken a cut and I think the hospital should do likewise."

Mayor Tice: "I was elected not for any particular organization but for the people and with His council, as good a one as ever sat in this chamber, have tried to satisfy all. I stand for economy in all things this year at least, which has been the keynote of the Hospital Board and I don't understand how they can write off $12,000.00 of uncollectable accounts made up principally by indigent accounts, but we have to pay ours each and every year. There must be something wrong somewhere and I think the hospital should make every effort to collect these accounts that are legally due." This closed the discussion on the motion and amendment, it was carried by a vote of eleven to three and the original motion was lost by the same count. No Money For Sewers

While proceeding with the estimates, Alderman Imlah asked for the estimates of the Board of Education and when that item was dealt with he moved in two separate motions, "that the amount of $700.00 for water meters in the schools be struck out" and also the "amount of $775.07 for cadet uniforms." "I don't believe", said Alderman Imlah "in cutting salaries. For when you cut, the buying power is reduced and it is also lowered. I think it was false economy of the Board of Education to cut the teacher's salaries and come right back and buy uniforms for the cadets. The military authorities have cut in all departments and I think the board should forego this expenditure."

Speaking of the amount for water meters, Alderman Imlah said "I was robbing Peter to pay Paul as the citizens paid in the low tax rate. We are trying to get through with as little expenditure as possible this year and yet $700.00 is asked for to cut down the revenue of the waterworks department by the placing of meters in the schools."

Alderman Bennett, chairman of Waterworks, explained to the council he was for economy, yet the council was preaching it and going away from the objective by not placing the meters in the schools. "It will be a saving for the citizens and for the schools", said Ald. Bennett. "The separate schools placed in their building and they are now saving money. It costs money to tread water and it is poor economy to raise the rates to treat water and have it going down the sewer." He explained the automatic controls now in use at the schools, stating they ran practically the year round. It is true they could be cut off but it is now done and the waterworks department has to bear the brunt of treating that extra water."

Alderman Imlah: "That way of figuring the Waterworks Department is like the hospital, you are not making money but I understand in the last three years the profit has been nearly $60,000.00."

Alderman Bennett: "That is true but the money was used to pay our debentures as they fell due."

Alderman Armstrong: "The water consumers are the ones who pay the shot. The city has spent a quarter of a million for the up-to-date plant and it has been good financially on the part of the department. Those present were Mayor Tice, Aldermen Woodley, White, Donaldson, Bennett, Sprackett, Brickman, Imlah, Morgan, Foster, Walker, Marshall and Armstrong.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Joyce was easier than Elizabeth anticipated. She said nothing, beyond as the time went on, meticulously inquiring after Lonnie's day. It was as if Louisa didn't care to see him. Elizabeth would urge at night go to all the dances she pleased, might ask a girl friend of Fred, might watch him win the tennis singles.

A sense of security rose within. She wondered why she had time to wonder why she had been so afraid, why she had not looked for happiness earlier?

Her summer spun itself into a rope of shining hours which was, presently, to hang her.

Joyce, watching the metamorphosis, was convinced of the spell. Her own life, her grandmother's, went on as they had always had. Only Elizabeth was different. In this alteration, which the child saw as beautiful, worthy of wonder, mother and grandmother had no part. In the dove-grey shrinking of the mother Joyce had known something winged and compelling was born. Something which could have been a comrade for a little girl, which had awakened, could spread golden wings and flown beyond the reach of childish hands. It was not fair. Joyce began to feel, in her resentment, that she had lifted the other mother better.

But grandmother remained, solid and satisfying, forever without change.

Joyce devoted herself more passionately than ever to her stray cats and nine dogs, to her grandmother and her unrelastic companionship.

She was at a worshipping age. Her substantial rooted but he love something else, something light and warm, young and beautiful. The new mother might have served but did not. She turned therefore in an impassioned dream-ing of the father she had not known.

She was a little sculpte at his altar, the altar her grandmother, high priestess of sorrow, served so unremittingly.

She questioned her mother.

"Mother, you remember my father, don't you?"

Ah! was she beginning to forget? Elizabeth went red, went white.

"Why, Joyce!"

"You never speak about him. You never tell me anything. Grandmother tells me," replied Joyce, reprovingly.

Elizabeth was silent. What could she say when memories of her lover were crumbling?

For two months she had been in constant contact with Fred Van Alstyne. Lennox had been beautiful. Lennox had been adored. Lennox had been mourned—but Lennox was dead.

Van Alstyne loved her. He had not spoken, but she knew. At first it was a knowledge she thrust from her, hiding her eyes. Yet though she repudiated it, it came to make a warmth and a singing in her heart —so good, so precious, to be loved again.

Her senses, which tragedy had frozen, stirred again as the new fire ran toward them. Her love time had been devastatingly brief; was bound up with bitterness, but it had served. She was infinitely glad she had known, she was aware, could remember. After weeks of aimless bliss she had had ten years of bleak widowhood. Now she was a woman, now she was ready for the maturer love. Now she trembled, moved, fluttered along the dark path, knowing whence.

He had not spoken. But, if he should speak?

September and the round fruit reddening on the yet summer-green—a low, articulate moon, warmer than silver—wild birds flying—and Elizabeth walking home with Fred Van Alstyne from a friend's house.

Late it was, and very still. The breath of wood smoke in the clear, unstirring air, a fragrance as of sun-dried grass, like roses, he drew her into the shadows of a tall hedge and took her, closely, into his arms.

"I've waited a long time, Elizabeth," he said her, "I love you."

Ah, the healing words.

She hid her face against him, trembled.

"I've loved you," he said, "for many years. Surely, I have been patient enough," he urged. "and surely, for my patience there is reward."

He lifted her face, kissed her mouth. She stammered, when he had set her free, "I love you too."

Childish and dear. He held her, laughed a little, for joy.

"How much?"

"With all my heart."

As she said it, it was so. With all her heart, her adult heart, with all her gratitude. Not like the first, although she did not pause to know it, never like the first again—but maturely and happily, ardently, with always that sense of humility, of thankfulness.

"When will you marry me?"

That roused her from her dreamy dream. She drew away, a little. She tried to speak, but could not.

"I—I must—"

He thought he understood, he told her, tenderly.

"Soon—"

They went on together, presently. There was the single light in the hall. He kissed her, he said, "Tomorrow—" and left her.

She opened the door and took her key. It was a different woman. She hesitated—she shuddered. If he were here now, all my own—she'll love me.

She knew, suddenly, how lovable she was, with this surrender to this sense of being loved about her, she might win her child to her for the first time.

She went up the stairs. She felt as if her feet did not touch the steps. She reached the landing and the slim, flowing figure of her daughter. She touched her mouth as if his kiss had left a seal there.

Passing toward her room she saw Louisa's door standing open. A light shone. "I will tell her now," she thought.

Now, she had courage, somehow she might lack it. She knocked.

"Come in."

Louisa lay propped with pillows in the big bed reading. A crystal dish of ruddy fruit stood near her, a tall glass of milk. She had "the book in the other hand, a paper knife.

On the crest of that wave of courage Elizabeth entered. She sat down on a chair beside the bed. Her eyes, soft, brilliant, rested on the old woman's face. She said, on a low note of irrepressible joy, "Mother, I have something to tell you, Louisa—tonight."

Louisa did not alter. She laid the Bible aside, putting the white ribbon that marked the place. She turned on her elbow.

"Indeed? And you answered, Joyce?" she asked evenly.

"I—said—yes—"

A moment of silence. Louisa thought——; Lennox, you hear her? She has forgotten you, Lennox!

She was stabbed with pain that almost should be hurt, in the peace of his Paradise; she was stabbed with triumph also.

After a moment she commented, "Fred Van Alstyne is a very fine young man. Honorable, of a blameless reputation. Have you thought what he will say when you tell him?"

"Tell him?"

Elizabeth's eyes widened, her voice faltered. What did she mean —? Could she mean—? Oh, no, no —not that!

"Don't crack," said Louisa sternly as if she had spoken. "You must tell him."

Elizabeth was silent. Then she said, very low, even wonderingly, "But—so long ago——"

"The years are as hours in such cases," Louisa reminded her. "Do you believe that your sin can be so easily expiated?"

Elizabeth raised her head.

Louisa's face, the lingering of that courage which had swept her over the floor sill,

"It was not sin!"

"What was it then?"

She could not answer. Perhaps, ten years ago, she might have cried "beauty! Beauty for love, love," she could not. For the face of that rapture had faded. Now, trembling from Fred's arms, awakened by Fred's hope, she had the strangest sense of having betrayed him, of having committed an infidelity to ward the future.

"If you do not tell him, I shall," Mrs. Sheldon said.

"You!"

The old woman's eyes answered her. Even as the expense of Lennox's memory, she would tell his friend. Elizabeth rose then. Her wrap dropped from her bare shoulders, lay about her feet. An almost volition she slid to her knees by the great bed, spread her arms over the counterpane.

"No—no—not that—no so cruel."

"Get up at once!"

She came to her feet, a little wretchedly, Mrs. Sheldon held her eyes in the vise of that invincible gaze. She spoke unemotionally.

"I shall tell him. I permitted you to marry my son because his child needed a name. But I shall not permit you to remarry, leaving the man in ignorance."

After a very long minute, a minute that shrieked out, tense as fine wire, Elizabeth spoke, dully.

"You'll not have to tell him."

She dismissed her daughter-in-law with a slight inclination of her head.

Elizabeth stooped for her wrap. She went to her own room, closing, feeling her way along the corridor.

Of this, too, Louisa would rob her of her hatred, in her jealousy.

—In her hatred she was not.

Never to be happy, never to be loved, because of Louisa.

She reached her room, lay down upon the bed without undressing. The darkness was cool and deep all about her, in the midst of the darkness she burned with a bitter flame.

It never occurred to her to tell Fred Van Alstyne. It never occurred to her that he might kiss her confession from her lips.....

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

At five that morning, when light lay across the dew on the grass and birds were waking, Elizabeth rose, crumpled her face sodden with tears.

"Fred," she wrote, sitting there at her little desk. "Fred, I can't marry you. I can't. Forgive me—and please forget. Don't try and see me. I could not see you if I were—not ever."

The warmth at her heart was gone, the light had stilled. She felt a chill there, as of death-itself.

Waiting for Fred's inevitable question was not hard.

Nothing was hard now while night had been endured, the letter written. When the question did come, several days later, it was pronounced with an utter casualness.

"Have you reached a decision?"

"We—will not be married——"

"Very well," Fred had answered pursued Mrs. Sheldon with deliberate malice, a terrible, unwitting mercy. She knew even as she wrenched the knife in the young woman's breast she was killing him. She had told him so, had timed him. How she would see him again. Not ever.

"New York's a small place," he informed himself, savagely. "Well, I'll not trouble her," He flung himself angrily on a boat, and went abroad. He'd money and an aching leisure—the Van Alstyne inheritance worked for generations, they had cut coupons. Idleness.

Europe was not exactly a playground, he discovered. But it helped a trifle. Better Lethe. All right, let's get killed then! He equipped an ambulance and went along with it. It was the spring 1917. And for the next year or so Van Alstyne was too occupied to wonder why—and again—why? Mad and loose, with the fatalism and skein—the wondering part of his mind slept heavily.

His was terse wounded. Elizabeth Sheldon read the reports, her eyes veiled in the white, unwrung face that was hers of late, the face that the pressure of years was not hardening, but was sometimes pitifully into a little, plastic mask of futility and fear. Yet she had formed of it a sort, strength to endure the terrible nights and the recurrent mercy. Lennox, that boy lover who had died twice to her, once agonizingly, and again, tenderly, had come back to a curious life. It was not he whom she now loved, it was Van Alstyne, but she remembered.

After the armistice Van Alstyne remained in Europe. He bought a house in England, he wintered in the south of France. He told himself, with an ironic humor, that the spiritual atmosphere of old countries was light and dry, it mummified a man's heart. There were pretty women for playmates, wherever he went; there was sunshine, and a sort of amused laughter with a deep shudder behind it. There was plenty to do, and could even help, a very little. He'd seen too much sudden death. When you have become used to that, nothing stirs your sense of scarcity much.

He looked at Elizabeth across the years. "She couldn't have loved me after all," he said, and let it go at that. Now and again he thought, oddly enough of Joyce. She was a dear youngster, leggy, as he remembered her, eager, and in some ways very like her father. What would happen to Lennox's daughter in that gloomy, smothering house?

What was happened to her was that she was growing up. She was reaching out. Alert, unmeasured, receptive, she was holding out her hands to life, closing her eyes, waiting for a present, a sweetmeat. "Open your mouth and shut your eyes and I'll give you something to eat," Nurse used to say.

Joyce was attending a sedate, excellent day school in town. She made friends there, she brought them home with her, she was confident of their welcome.

AFTER SIX YEARS

Kenlville, M.S., May 27.—A coed and mute was recently presented by counsel as having declined to apply for a pension for six years after he was stricken, "because of patriotic motives," yesterday appeared before the pension tribunal presided over by Colonel L. H. McKenzie. Hearing of his application was begun, but he broke down, and was assisted out of the building as the adjournment was granted. For eight years after the war he worked as a marine engineer, despite the effects of lee and lead wounds. Then he lost his hearing and speech, and has not worked since.

Slept Poorly, Weak

Toronto, Ont.—"About four months ago I felt miserable, was so weak I thought I would have to quit my work, but I had to carry on," said Mrs. Pearl Brant of 519 King St. E. "My nerves were so bad the least little thing would upset me—I would go all to pieces. I slept poorly at night and felt all tired out during the day. But, after taking three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription all this miserable condition left me. I feel so well now I really enjoy living and working."

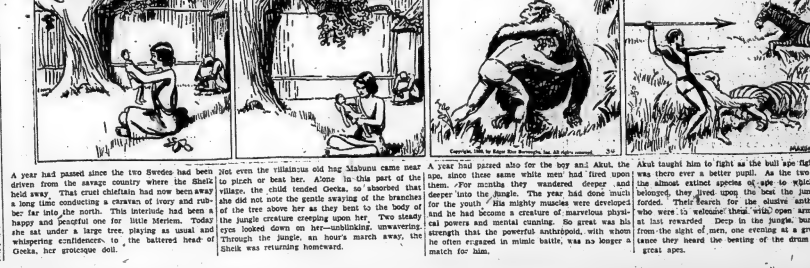
BRINGING UP FATHER



MR. AND MRS.— FRIEND HUSBAND TAKES FRIEND WIFE TO THE BALL GAME

THE SON OF TARZAN, No. 34. (Metropolitan Newspaper Service)

By Edgar Rice Burroughs.

A year had passed since the two Swedes had been driven from the savage country where the Sheik held sway. That cruel chieftain had now been away a long time collecting a caravan of ivory and rubber far into the north. This interlude had been a happy and peaceful one for she sat under a large tree, whispering confidences to Geeka, her grotesque doll.

Not even the villainous old hag Mabunu came near to pinch or bear her. Alone in this part of the village, the child tended Geeka, so absorbed that she did not note the gentle swaying of the branches of the tree above her as they bent to the body of the jungle creature creeping upon her. Two steady eyes looked down on her unblinkingly and unwaveringly. Through the jungle, an hour's march away, the Sheik was returning homeward.

A year had passed also for the boy and Akut, the ape, since these same white men had first come upon them. For months they wandered deeper and deeper into the jungle. The year had done much for the youth. His mighty muscles were developed and he had become a creature of marvelous physical powers and mental cunning. So great was his strength that the powerful anthropoid, with whom he often engaged in mimic battle, was no longer a match for him.

Akut taught him to fight as the bull ape fights, nor was there ever a better pupil. As the two sought the almost extinct species of ape to which Akut belonged, they lived upon the best the jungle afforded. Their search for the elusive anthropoids was rewarded when they were to welcome them with open arms at last rewarded. Deep in the jungle, buried far from the sight of men, one evening as a great elephant heard the beating of the drum of the great apes.

Tom Hudson's business keeps him out of town several days a week. He was becoming a stranger to his little boy until he found how convenient and inexpensive it is to telephone.

Now Tom has a visit at home by Long Distance nearly every evening. The whole family is happier and Tom's mind is freer for business.

By making his calls "station-to-station" after 8.30 p.m., Tom finds they cost him less than his cigarettes.

Low evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7.00 p.m. and still lower night rates at 8.30 p.m.—load time. Just give Long Distance the number you want. It speeds up the service.

CEREAL RELIEVED HIS CONSTIPATION

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought New Health

Every one who has suffered from constipation should read Mr. F. M. Fisher's letter:

"For many years I suffered from constipation and used, for relief, all kinds of laxatives. After a few days' treatment, I would only find my condition the same as before and at times worse.

"Some time ago I started to use Kellogg's ALL-BRAN, regularly, one a day as directed. Since doing this, I have found that I do not need any other medicine to procure the desired result, and it keeps me in a very healthful condition."—Mr. F. M. Fisher. (Address on request.)

Constipation is caused by lack of two things in the diet: "Bulk" to exercise the intestines! Vitamin B to tone the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN supplies both—and also iron for the blood.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is such like that in leafy vegetables. Inside the body it forms a soft mass, which gently clears out the wastes.

How much better this is than risking pills and drugs—so often harmful. Just eat two tablespoonfuls daily—in serious cases, with every meal. If your intestinal trouble is not relieved in this way, see your doctor.

Equally tasty as a cereal, or used in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario.

Ottawa, May 26.—The government of Canada has no intention of appointing any commission to study the advisability of six-hour day legislation, Premier R. B. Bennett made this clear in the House of Commons last night when the Labor Department estimates were under consideration. Humphrey Mitchell (Labor, Hamilton East) had urged that the question of a commission be considered by the government during the recess. Canada could not compete in export business if a six hour day were made law the Prime Minister explained.

CHAS. FOWLER KIWANIS GUEST

Delivers Real Message to Picton, Kingston, and Belleville Members

Kiwanians from Kingston, Picton and Belleville were hosts to the Governor of the Quebec-Maritime district, Charles A. Fowler, last night as a luncheon held at the Queen's Hotel, after which an executive meeting was held and business transacted. The address given by the District Governor was of interest i. Kiwanians only, Mr. Fowler explaining the three year plan recently adopted at a convention at Chicago and adding all members possible to attend the International Convention to be held in Detroit in June.

Rev. Earl McCutcheon presided in the early part of the meeting due to the absence of the President, Bernard Collins from the city, while James Bankier led in the community singing. Mayor George O. Fice welcomed the distinguished visitor from the Maritimes and also the visiting Kiwanians. James Bankier gave a delightful solo and the gavel was then turned over to Bert Tully, president of the Picton Club. After being introduced, the speaker told the members that there was little hope of compensation in the work they were doing or striving to do, but the heritage would be great and glorious. He said that men were turning towards Canada and that the Economic conference would have a far reaching effect in moulding together the British Empire in a stronger bond than formerly. He also stated, that the Clubs could not hope to accomplish a project in the one year of office but preparations should be made to carry on the work from year to year.

Mr. Fowler believed the first Kiwanis Club was formed in Annapolis Royal in 1906, when Cabot formed the Order of Good Cheer, which met each week and plans discussed for the betterment of the community. Bernard Mitchell claims the honor with the founding in 1913. Kiwanis he said served all and not the individual member and the members took out of the club simply what they put in it.

BELIEVES HE WOUNDED MAN

Hamiltonian Tells Police Story They Cannot Verify

Hamilton, Ont., May 26— That he believed he had shot one of a group of men whom he found gathered about two o'clock this morning was the story told police today by Ward Smith, hired man in the employ of Mrs. M. Carey, step 58, Fruitland.

Smith informed Chief Clark that a number of men had been living in a house near the Carey residence. He believed them to be Reds, and stated that they were foreigners.

Fire Gathered

Last night five of them gathered in the unoccupied house, and Smith kept watch. About two a.m., he saw the group moving towards the Carey house. Securing a shot gun, he ordered them to stop, but they did not do so. He shouted a warning and then fired. One of the men fell to the earth, and the others hastily picked him up and fled, carrying the wounded man.

Investigations today showed no sign of the men, and a search of the district did not reveal remains of the person who had been shot. Police are investigating.

PREMIER HENRY HITS AT REDS

No Man Deported as Long as He Behaves Himself

Toronto, May 27.—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal leader, may choose any constituency in Ontario and provided he is unopposed by another Liberal candidate, he will not face Premier Henry's opposition.

This statement was made here last night by Premier George S. Henry in a speech to the electors of West York who, next Saturday, go to the polls to choose a successor to Dr. Forbes Godfrey, former Ontario Minister of Health.

The Premier, referring to the next Provincial general elections, challenged the Liberal leader to "accept the duties of a parliamentarian." He repeated his "guarantee" of freedom from Conservative opposition, should Mr. Hepburn at any time choose to contest a seat and provided he has unopposed by another Liberal candidate, he will not face Conservative opposition.

This statement was made here last night by Premier George S. Henry in a speech to the electors of West York who, next Saturday, go to the polls to choose a successor to Dr. Forbes Godfrey, former Ontario Minister of Health.

The Premier, referring to the next Provincial general elections, challenged the Liberal leader to "accept the duties of a parliamentarian." He repeated his "guarantee" of freedom from Conservative opposition, should Mr. Hepburn at any time choose to contest a seat and provided he has unopposed by the Liberal leader's "swing to left."

In a brief speech Mr. Hepburn accused Premier Henry of "lack of constructive leadership" in a period of economical stress. "All he does is ask me riddles," the Liberal leader said. Referring to charges by Hon. Leopold Macaulay, Minister of Highways, that he was a backer of his country, Mr. Hepburn said: "I am quite as good a Canadian as he is." The difference between us he has is that I have the interests of the masses at heart and he has the interests of the interests."

No man would be deported from Ontario "as long as he could behave himself," the Premier declared, and the sooner some of those who can't behave themselves are put out of the country the better for us all."

BRITISH RAIL POOL OF RECEIPTS ANNOUNCED

Guides Plant Tree in Commemoration of 21st Birthday of Order

Two British Railways Pool Receipts to End Competition and Contact

London, Midland and Scottish Enters Pact With London and North-Eastern, Rival Company, Put Stop to Ruinous Competition

BOTH FINANCIAL LOSERS IN 1931

Move is Regarded as Greatest Since Railway Merger in Britain in Year 1923 — Competition With Trucks

New York, May 28—The New York Times today publishes the following special cable from London:

"The two biggest railroad companies in Great Britain have announced they had agreed to pool receipts, "wherever there is competition or contact between them."

The companies are the London, Midland and Scottish, with 6,777 miles of trackage and a capitalization of £413,778,857, and the London and North Easter, with 6,294 miles of trackage and a capitalization of £376,764,704. Ever since the earliest days of railroading the two companies have fought for the London-to-Scotland traffic."

"Last year, because of declining traffic and the competition from buses and trucks, both companies suffered heavy net losses. Now, to economize and eliminate waste, they have decided to make their passenger tickets inter-changeable on all their competing services and to abolish certain local services where there is outright duplication.

Men Will Be Jobless.

The latest move is regarded as the most important since the amalgamation of British Railway into four great systems in 1923. It probably will result in a loss of jobs by several thousand persons.

"The Minister of Transport must approve the new plans before it goes into operation July 1."

The steadily increasing inroads made by motor vehicles and buses on the revenues of the British Railway led the latter to address to the government last March an urgent appeal for help. The railroads asserted the balancing of the burden between themselves and the truck owners was essential.

Thornton's View

Montreal, May 28—Announcement from London that the London Midland and Scottish and London and Northeastern Railway Companies in Britain had reached an arrangement for the pooling of receipts "wherever there is competitive contact between them "has been received with considerable interest. Asked if he would comment on this development, Sir Henry Thornton, chairman and president of the Canadian National Railways, said: "The proposed arrangement is highly intelligent and should result in material economy. With but negligible sacrifice in service, if any, it is a constructive step which may well be imitated where conditions permit."

No Conclusion Here

Sir Henry said some general discussions along such lines in Canada and considerable study with regard to the subject, but no conclusion has yet been reached. So far as the Canadian National railways are concerned, the principle is one I have long advocated and upon which the Canadian National Railways have given every effort to extend immediately. However, it should be remembered that this and kindred proposals are no doubt receiving the earnest attention of the Royal Commission on Transport. In view of this I prefer to limit by opinion merely to a general statement.

Mr. Robb will use the plane for supervising operations on his large sheep ranch, according to the De-Hartland Aircraft officials, makers of the plane.

If the heavy flight is successful, O'Brien will be the first man to eat breakfast in Toronto and dine in Edmonton the day following.

LESS MONEY IN ELECTION OF PRESIDENT

Republicans Have Only One Million to Spend

ALSO DEMOCRATS

1928 Battle Cost Four and Three Millions Respectively

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28—(By Ken Clark, Canadian Press Staff Writer)—The Americans expect to get their next President comparatively cheap.

Herein: a president every four years runs into big money. President Hoover cost the Republicans over $4,000,000 and the unsuccessful attempt of the Democrats to elect "Al" Smith sunk that party for more than $3,000,000.

Too High Cost

J. R. Nutt, the Treasurer of the Grand Old Party, thinks he will have to get along this year with only a cool $1,000,000 and the Democrats who already have $90—J. Raskob, financial angel of New York $250,000, won't have much if any more than Mr. Nutt.

Presidents have been costing very very high for years. In 1896 it cost Mark Hanna $15,000,000 to elect McKinley. Harding cost more than $8,000,000 whereas Coolidge was elected for $250,000—the good or bad old days.

"How Can Mayor Live on $25,000 a Year?" New York Boy Asks Examiners

Publisher Block Tells Who Conceived Mayor's Account

REFUTE STATEMENTS

James J. Walker Says He Had No Interest in Bus Lines

New York, May 28—A newspaper publisher's explanation of a brokerage account, from which Mayor James J. Walker, drew $246,000 profit without a cent's investment, was given to the Hofstadter Legislative Committee yesterday, after a city employee had contradicted some of the Mayor's own testimony.

The aftermath of Walker's own two-day appearance before the Inquiry Board ended with Samuel Seabury attempting to bring the personal finances of the Mayor and those of Russell T. Sherwood, missing accountant.

Sherwood, testimony had shown, put nearly $1,000,000 into his bank and brokerage accounts between the day Walker became Mayor and the day the Walker-Sherwood account disappeared.

Seabury, chief hatchet-faced counsel, opened the day's session by attacking the Mayor's testimony and contending that the committee had proof in spite of Walker's denial, that Sherwood's profits were from personal business agent.

Documents Produced

The session ended with Seabury introducing documentary evidence by which he sought to show that the finances of Walker and Sherwood were intermixed and that the accountant drew cheques for the Mayor from time to time that Walker had said he knew nothing.

The Mayor's own brokerage account from which the Mayor profited so handsomely was given by Paul Block.

The publisher said he established the account after he had received a tip from Walker, willing to go for an automobile ride with the Mayor. Walker could not indulge on the $25,000 salary he received.

Block said he began to give the explanation because he feared it would sound silly, and added with a grin:

"It was a great personal relationship, in which Walker figured as a friend, and not as Mayor of the world's largest city."

The city employee who was called to the witness stand by Seabury's Executive was Park Commissioner Arthur J. Klein.

Walker had denied he ever owned or had an interest in Equitable Interstate Trust Company stock.

Bought Stock for Walker

Herrick testified that he bought stock for Walker with Walker's money, 300 shares in all. The stock was placed in the Park Commissioner's name, and Herrick said he took it as collateral for a loan to the Equitable Bus Corporation.

Under questioning, Walker was questioned at length about the Equitable Bus Corporation by the city to the Equitable, and denied emphatically that any personal financial transactions had influenced his action in the matter.

Block testified that he never discussed with Walker the matter of the Mayor's being responsible for a portion of any possible loss on the joint account. He said it was his intention to allow the Mayor to lose any money.

PECULIAR WAY TO CATCH BEAR

Tied in Pack Sack With Head Sticking Out

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., May 28.—George Albert of Blind River, who has spent the last seven months in the woods trapping, has returned to the town with a live bear, which he captured in a rough-and -tumble fight in a tent on the shores of Pine Lake, about fifty miles north of Blind River. Albert was sound asleep, and the first knowledge he had of the bear's presence was the large paw on his face. He clutched a hunting knife and the bear retaliated by seizing his arm with its teeth. Albert threw the blanket over the bear, and the battle was on in earnest. The bear became entangled in the blanket, and was muzzled with a long shoe lace, his feet being tied with pieces of the blanket, which in the course of the fight had become torn. The animal was made additionally secure by being tied into a pack sack, and placed in a pack sack with only the head exposed. Then the pack sack was also tied tightly.

INDICTMENT HANDED IN AGAINST CURTIS?

Trial of Confessed Hoaxmaker in June

Flemington, N.J., May 28—An indictment, presumed to be against John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk hoaxer in the Lindbergh case, was handed today to Justice Thomas Trenchard who ordered it delivered to quarterly sessions court for further proceedings.

Prosecutor Anthony Hauck would not say definitely today that the indictment was returned against Curtis but he did say: "The Curtis case will be tried not later than the week of June 27.

As an indictment is a necessary preliminary to trial. This statement was taken as positive corroboration of the general belief that one of today's indictments was against Curtis.

Front Street Traffic Gets Break While Bridge St. Puts on Brake

All because Toronto signal repair men who undertook to repair Belleville's traffic lack of the time it has went out of kilter, set the timing in the main line of the signal light with that of the timing of north and south and crosstown traffic in this city. Belleville motorists who wish to cross the main street in this city, on Bridge, are cheated out of fifteen more seconds that they would be if they attempted to pass the light going north or south on Front Street. There is a green for the red on Bridge Street for a period of just 35 seconds. For Front Street traffic up and down the red lasts on 23 second.

Originally, before the signal light became inoperative through some fault some time ago, the lights were timed to allow a regular percentage of 35 second each. When the Bridge traffic is light the lights down and sent to Toronto for repair men who repaired it so that city probably set the light to flash on and off as they do in that city. Heavier traffic on Yonge St. in Toronto for the longer period of green, but in Belleville more traffic passes across Front over Bridge, during meal time rushes, than in the north and south traffic. Result: Phillips and Bridge and North and drivers of east and west bound machines.

The fish were of good size and provided a great deal of sport for the fishermen. The largest fish of the evening however, slipped the line just before it could be gaffed from the side of the boat. From the appearance and the description given by Mr. Orry to others later, it was thought that the catch must have been a small sturgeon. Local anglers claim, that sturgeon are common in the bay and surrounding waters.

EGGS BROKEN WHEN CAR STRIKES BASKET

A few dozen eggs in a basket were broken this morning, when a local lady loaded down with the basket and a pair of fowl, stepped into the path of an approaching car near the city hall on Front Street this morning.

No damage was done the lady but the fender of the car which struck the basket made a sorry mess of the contents. No blame could be attached to the driver of the car as the stop was made as quickly as possible. The lady amicably absolved the driver of all blame and continued on her way back to market to purchase some more to take the place of the ones which were broken.

DUMPING WASTE GAS IN RIVER, MENACE

Dumping of waste gasoline and crankcase oil into drains in numerous garages and repair stations throughout the city, is blamed by waterfront men and shipowners in the harbor for the condition of the water which now prevails. This waste material, which finds its way to the Moira river by sewers underground, has formed a thick, oily scum on the water while has caused considerable annoyance to boat owners in the harbor. The spread of the scum to crust on the newly painted hulls of the boats moored there and in the river and bay with extinction by sufferers and has stagnated the water already to a point where the smell is fast becoming intolerable. It is apparently impossible on the top of the river between the Lower Bridge and the C.N.R. car bridge. Eddying into the harbor with the slow current it has formed a thick coat on the water and defied efforts to combat it. According to those who profess to be acquainted with the menace, considerable fire hazard exists from the practice of dumping the oil and gas into the drains.

NO OCCUPANTS BUT SAILS SET

A small skiff or punt with a sail attached, which floated aimlessly down the bay this morning caused some concern among local fishermen and others, who observed the craft apparently empty. No one was aboard her although the sails were hoisted and the gusts of wind whipped her along at a good clip. Later Enquiry revealed the fact that she was an unknown craft and had probably drifted from the north shore of Prince Edward county.

WOOLER LEAFS HARD TO DOWN

Trenton, May 28.—(Special)—The Wooler Leafs were humbled by the Trenton Shelling the Whites by the score of 17 to 2. The game was a comedy of errors from the start to the local nine. They would probably make better soccer players than baseball, as soon as the ball came anywhere near them they seemed to forget they had any hands and immediately started to show how handy they were with their feet. They must realize that they are up against baseball teams who are fast and are practising ball at every chance and they thought they had to do likewise. The Wooler nine show the benefit of continued practice as they have improved since their last game here. Soup Free, the pitcher with the K. of C. league delivery, can certainly put them over, and his support in the field was up to the least. They have an all around strong team, good in the field and at the bat as well. The other teams in the league who have discounted Wooler will be sorry they will have to reckon with them before the end of the season.

Whites—Lewis, p.; Johnson, 2b; Nelson, 3b; Burtt, c.; Ketcheson, c.f.; Purdy, Claude, ss.; Purdy, Gord, lst; White, l.f.; Aziz, r.f.

Umpires—Plate, Culverson, base, Jordon.

The Wooler team always bring a good crowd of fans with them when they come down to play ball and the remarks between the local and the visiting fans becoming many and often.

Stacey, the 3rd baseman, is said to wear his baseball cap to bed with him and as he is called Cattle King Stacey, the cows are probably used to the green of it and will no doubt be able to distinguish it from the grass so he will be in no danger of having it eaten. While there is only one or two restaurants in the city of Wooler all the ball players must be waiters in them as they certainly know how to wait.

Tenders will be received for a crew to man the boat which has been obtained to recover balls which go into the bay. Nice bright uniforms will probably be furnished so all you young sailors step right up and see who can be captain.

Mr. Augey, the young man who takes up the collection at the park on receiving a nickel from one of the fans who was in for a bit of contributing was so surprised that he dropped it and on reaching for the almighty dollar tore his trousers and now has a big hole. He will make the repairs. Ladies, don't crowd.

He would also like to know the party or parties who broke into the cupboard under the grand stand and the balls and collection box is kept and stole the coffee. Parties concerned get in touch with Leo and he promises to spare you a piece of his mind.

Milk Thief Caught.

The expropriation of a can of drink was probably meant in connection with stone throwing but the craving for milk brought John Fraser into serious trouble yesterday morning on a charge of stealing it from neighbors' doorsteps. A good deal of this has been going on for some time, and the police have been on the lookout and succeeded in capturing the culprit near the home of Mr. H. La Flure on Dorset street. He was remanded until May 30th for sentence.

Mr. C. H. Gordon who has been manied by the Port Hope police for fraud was picked up in Trenton yesterday and taken to stand his trial by officer Chester from Port Hope.

Another man appeared in police court on a charge of having illegal liquor illegally and paid a fine of $100 and costs.

Another paid a fine of $25 and costs for leaving the scene of an accident.

Mrs. M. B. O'Connor entertained six tables of bridge on Wednesday evening at her home on Lorne Ave. After bridge a dainty lunch was served. Mrs. W. Pitapatrick won first prize, Mrs. Max Waldorf, second, and Mrs. Mundell, consolation.

Mrs. T. McConnville entertained at bridge on Thursday night. Mrs. Jim Hennessy won first, Mrs. G. Asia, second. A beautiful lunch was served after the bridge.

Can a Workingman Afford to Patronize The Larger Funeral Home?

The answer to that is, can he afford to go anywhere else?

For the leading funeral director, with his larger establishment, his more complete equipment, and his much larger volume to share the overhead of each individual funeral, can give the workingman the best type of service and merchandise at a lower cost.

A recent investigation of funeral costs, made by one of the largest insurance companies on the continent, revealed the fact that funeral charges in all classes were less in the larger and generally able funeral establishments, which were operated on the proper charging basis.

JOHN ENRIGHT KNOWN HERE

80th Battalion C. E. F. Bugle Band Leader, is Missing

Perth, May 28.—Mr. John V. Enright, well known and popular electrician and machinist, Basin Street, Perth, has been missing from his home since last Friday night when he suddenly and mysteriously disappeared, and hasn't since been seen nor has there been any clue as to his whereabouts. When last seen he was dressed in his working clothes, and wore a light-colored cap, says the Perth Courier.

Acting Chief of police James J. Kane has used every means possible to locate the missing man, locally and by long distance telephone throughout practically the entire Ottawa Valley. As his home is across the road from the Tay Canal Basin, it was feared he might have accidentally fallen from the basin wharf down to the water, so several parties were organized by Chief Kane and Acting Chief Gray, and the basin and canal below the Drummond Street bridge all Tuesday afternoon, but without result. Motor boat owners down the Tay the same afternoon kept a close lookout for a possible discovery. Wednesday afternoon Mr. Fred Ferguson, in his launch, accompanied by Mr. Kane and others, made a trip down the canal in another effort to locate the body, but also without result.

On all sides there have been many expressions of sympathy for the aged mother and brother Eddie with whom Mr. Enright lived, while the whole community, are left in suspense and uncertainly awaiting his return home or the recovery of his body.

Those in Belleville and district, who were members of the 80th Bn., C.E.F., will remember John Enright as leader of the Police Band of the Battalion. Lt. Col. W. S. Ketcheson, told by telephone, spoke most highly of Jack Enright, and said he was deeply sorry to learn the news concerning him. He said Enright had enlisted with his battalion in Belleville in 1915 and proceeded overseas with the unit. He was a popular member of the battalion and the fine bugle band was credited much to his leadership.

WILL CONSIDER MOTION FURTHER

Ald. White Introduces New Scheme to Aid Building

Alderman R. P. White some time ago gave notice that he would bring a scheme proposed by himself before the council, at its next meeting to those contemplating building a new home in the city. Ald. White has now put the motion, if adopted, would increase building activity in the city. On Monday night Ald. White had the city solicitor draw a resolution and motion and after the suspension of the rules put the following motion was introduced: "That in view of the scarcity of labor, and for the purpose of encouraging the erection of dwelling houses on vacant lands in the city, that the rate of assessment on all such dwelling houses shall be computed upon the value of same from the year of commencement of the erection of such dwelling and notwithstanding the erection of said dwelling house, the land assessment remain as it was at the time of the commencement of the erection of such dwelling house, save and except as altered or affected by local improvement and that a copy of this motion be sent to the solicitor brought to the attention of and lodged with the City Assessor and with the Court of Revision for the City of Belleville.

Alderman Donahue thought the matter should be one to arrive at by map judgment and moved that the whole matter be referred back to the committee for further discussion and deliberation. A letter on the motion was also received by the council from the City Solicitor and this also will be sent back to the committee.

HAT STYLES ARE SCANTIER

Wire Holder Under Theatre Seat Not Small Enough

Busted pocket books, divorces, households torn asunder, bankruptcies, have all resulted in the wake of feminine styles since Eve changed from a fig leaf to the more substantial leopard skin, but who ever heard of styles for men creating any revolution in the ranks of any industry or occupation?

However, men's styles have done so. Men's hat styles, to be exact. The changing styles of the brims of men's hats have left a trail of furrowed brows, and weeping and wailing and gnashing of teeth among the several theatre owners and managers who have been holding daily conference all over the country to see what is going to be done about it. They're stumped.

It all happened Friday evening when a local man walked into a local theatre. He is a very methodical local man. He has been going to theatres for a long time, and always he goes through the same routine when he enters. He takes off his top coat, places it on the seat, takes off his hat and places it on the wire holder under the seat. That evening he did the same thing. Only there's a new hat. It was one of those narrow brim hats. And when he placed it in the holder it fell to the floor. Once more he tried, and once more it fell to the floor. He investigated and found that the hat was too small for the holder. The holder was too small for the hat.

"All complaints must be registered at the Box Office", reads the sign. Henceforth they must be registered and written down in official manner.

Today's weighty conference will decide what to do—if anything.

NOT FORCED TO USE METRES

Will Also Limit Number of Cab Licenses to 1000

Toronto, May 28.—Toronto taxicabs will not be forced to use metres, the Board of Police Commissioners decided at a meeting yesterday.

Considering the report of an advisory committee on taxi-cabs the police commissioners in a written statement proclaimed no blanket application either of metres or rates as a whole. Rather than make the regulations compulsory, they decided three classes of license for the three types of car service. Meter cabs, horse and livery cabs.

Standard zones to be observed by all motor companies are under consideration the statement says, with rates based on mileage. Protection from the minds of the public resulting from the contemplated law having its own peculiar zones.

The commissioners also decided to limit cab licenses to 1,000 in the city.

NEW POLICY AT THE QUARRY

Public Works Department Will Cut Cost of Crushed Stone

Complete tabulation of the cost of getting the material out, from figures just recently compiled by the city engineer, Chas. A. Mott, shows that during the season of 1931 the cost per cubic yard of the crushed stone manufactured at the city quarry had mounted for a comparatively low figure of 90c per yard in 1930 to 81.24 per cubic yard in 1931. The reason for this is given by the department as being caused solely by the change over in shifts twice a week among the workers. One hundred men employed there. A great deal of time was thus taken up in the morning each new man in successive shifts to the new jobs, which he had to do during the three days he was employed. During 1931, 8,926 cubic yards of crushed stone was produced. This was dug and crushed.

This year a different policy is in effect and the city quarry is now producing end of the work only men who are familiar with the knack of filling the stone out are employed, a set rate in force of over eleven thousand dollars extra, which the quarry does not represent the whole of Great Britain's war-debt obligations to the United States, but such portion of it as has been booked for one year when the agreement between the two countries came into effect last summer.

—Montreal Gazette.

ANGLO-AMERICAN DEBTS FACT

Sir John Simon, the British Foreign Secretary of State, has announced that the Government has made a formal agreement with the United States to repay in ten equal annuities the British war debts which were suspended by the Hoover moratorium. The total involved is stated to be about $160,000,000. This is not, however, not represent the whole of Great Britain's war-debt obligations to the United States, but such portion of it as has been booked for one year when the agreement between the two countries came into effect last summer.

Letters from England

From Mr. G. M. James for His Former Students Everywhere

No 3.

There is plenty of street music here of various kinds. Hand organs and bands of three or more. We are often awakened by such music.

There are beggars here, too, but they are known chiefly as patronizing artists. They make very good drawings on the sidewalk and then sit there all day with cup in hand. Close to their drawings are printed the following words:

"May you never miss the coin you give."

Only one young man within our limit week in London has stepped up to me and asked for money. These are much more numerous in Canadian and American cities.

Roses, violets and other flowers are sold on street corners everywhere and are well patronized. Fruit carts are just as numerous. Good apples and oranges are about four or five cents each and the apples are only about half the size of ours.

Most women bob their hair becomingly but so many have a very large nose which spoils the picture. The average man and woman here is much underrate as compared with Canadians. In fact they are often not much more than midgets.

The stores in Belleville would be delighted to sell all kinds of envelopes and letter paper at prices prevailing in London. Such material is fifty per cent. dearer.

No person is ever in a hurry here. If you are having your hair cut or if you are shopping and hint that you are in a hurry, you receive a look which is not reassuring and your remark goes unheeded. As a result stores and business places remain open from 8:30 or 9:00 A.M. to 7:00 P.M.

In many stores windows there is a sign stating that gold coins, jewelry and trinkets in exchange for money would be bought and cash paid immediately. We were informed that this gold is melted down and sold to the Bank of England which is which is eager for it.

At least one departmental store in London broadcasts loudly for its own dining and tea room. While dining we have had a good musical program interspersed with announcements of bargains in handbags or other commodities. This local broadcasting is a new idea to us.

One bright afternoon we made a trip to Hyde Park to enjoy the air and sunshine for May so far has been very disappointing in the matter of sunshine and we have no complaint. We found in this immense park of over three hundred acres several groups of people listening to speakers. In each group to which we found that some were preaching repentance and salvation humbly and properly but these speakers were only a half-dozen listeners each. The other speakers had from a hundred or more and they were discussing Ireland, De Valera, millionaires and similar topics. Some of these speakers were very good and some were not. We were surprised to see, much more so than their hearers who often interrupted with remarks in favor of socialism and communism, that every speaker was attacked by some one and made the crowd repeatedly roar with laughter. "The millionaire is not in my way," he said, "I have all I need and I'm not a firm I'd do not dictate. I have my job, I get my pay and I'm satisfied." I have never met such untutored common sense before. "Experience is the best teacher," is often said.

The British Museum is almost across the street from where we have our apartments in London just two blocks away. It is a magnificent building. This museum was opened as such in 1777 and is known throughout the world over as the "Home of Knowledge". One rainy afternoon I paid it my first visit and got through only two rooms, a very small part of the building. I came home and told my wife about the most perfect and regular of all. The shadows of the above letters concerned interesting state affairs. Nelson's instructions for his captains before the Battle of Trafalgar are interesting and easy to read. A letter by John Wesley, dated March 25, 1777, told that when the Methodists left the Church of England, God would leave them. A letter by Byron dated November, 1810, showed that he was miserably poor. A letter from Charles Dickens to George Eliot, dated January 18, 1858 contains the following: "I am bound to adopt the name that it pleases so excellent a writer to assume but left to my own devices I would address the writer of 'Scenes from Clerical Life' as a woman." The letter is easy to read and was the first guess that George Eliot was a woman (in reality Marian Evans). I was amazed to see manuscript in Greek handwriting of Plato, Homer (his Odyssey), Aristotle and Demosthenes. Space will not permit further details along this line but I spent several hours deeply absorbed.

Then I came to the originals of many famous charters. An excellent copy of the Magna Charta, 1215, in Latin was among them.

A fine collection of the postage stamps of the world was presented to the museum a few years ago by an English collector. I looked over the Canadian section carefully and was delighted to realize that I had a much more complete collection of Canadian postage stamps than the British Museum.

There are no high buildings. For sentimental and practical reasons the limit is set at about five storeys. The great historic buildings like the Museum, St. Paul's, Westminster Abbey and many others were originally a beautiful white stone but now are blackened by soot. One feels that this defect is a great detriment.

The post offices all over London have their walls covered by framed settlements of all kinds. Surely this is a source of Federal revenue Canada sadly overlooked.

Social Home, one with a reputation of social distinction, are causing much dismay in London just now. They go to a hotel or give a party at a restaurant and run up a bill of say five hundred dollars. They give a cheque for the amount which proves to be worthless. Then they refuse to pay and sue for a drawing card for the hotel or restaurant that is priceless. It is no doubt true that the keepers of hotels and restaurants make as much out of such advertising as possible but imagine Shakespeare, Dickens or even the notorious Byron stooping to such trickery.

There is one feature about window dressing in shops in London that is as odd as it is unwarranted. Without exception windows are crammed with goods to the very top, ten feet or more. It matters not whether it is books, bread or boots, clothing or anything else. The same is true of our well known chain stores in Canada in this respect and you often feel that all the goods must surely be in the windows.

Saturday afternoon we went to London's famous zoo and soon discovered that it was a very large one. It covers about what usually requires two or three days. It is a dreamland of thirty-five acres crowded with cages and houses with many fewer and down the shrubs set in between. Thousands of tulips were in full bloom, a wonderful sight. It seemed to us that the zoo contained every animal, bird, reptile and live butterfly ever created. Most of them we had never seen or heard of before. Elephants and camels were there and down the walk for children to ride upon. We entered a house of about a score of lions and tigers separated in pairs in strong cages. It was startling to hear the animals could smell the raw meat before it was given in sight. They roared terribly and struck the cage (iron) bars fierce blows with their powerful paws. Each animal received about five pounds which was pulled over the bars by the cage. Then all was quiet as the gory feast began. There were many monkeys, large and small. One large one (called a chimpanzee) learns the game much amusement. It would dance and jump sideways in the cage and then dart for its drinking dish, fill its mouth with water, give its head a sharp turn and spray the unsuspecting crowd with water. We watched it do this several times and at first it was indeed part of the show. We continued to laugh at our companions and scattering. The London Zoo is certainly a paradise for children, who are always there in large numbers.

Our first Sunday in London was spent in St. Paul's and Westminster Abbey in the afternoon. At both the choir is composed entirely of boys and men, about thirty of each.

The organ and the chimes of the tower bells at St. Paul's sound very much like those of the Metropolitan Church at Toronto. The officiating clergy in each case were clad in beautiful scarlet robes with much gold braid. The attendance at both services was large, about four times as many as would fill Bellleville's largest church. The Dean of St. Paul's preached on Church Union and stated principles which are accepted generally in Canada. "The great majority of the people of England are heathens as far as attending worship is concerned." This was a startling statement but corresponded with what I had found on journeys throughout Ontario and in the large American cities. I have sometimes wondered whether it is due to the fact that we already know much more than we put in practice. Worshippers at St. Paul's are surrounded by statues, life size, of the illustrious dead. As we sat under the Great Dome we were not far from the statues of Earl Roberts, Duke of Wellington, General Gordon (slain murderously in Egypt) and many others. Inside a little room at the right of the main entrance is the completely uniformed figure in lying posture of Lord Kitchener in white marble. He is very beautiful and life-like.

At Westminster Abbey we found a repetition of all that we had seen at St. Paul's but very much more. The Abbey is packed full of statues and memorial tablets dating back to the sixteenth century. The paved floor, too, is covered with brass slabs showing where the illustrious dead are buried. Just inside the main entrance we saw a large wreath of artificial poppies on the floor. It was at the head of an open grave which

On Nôvember 11, 1920, King George and his Cabinet had been present at his burial which was representative of all those who had died for King and Country during the Great War. More visitors lingered around the tablet to the memory of Sir John Franklin, November 6, 1677. I feel much more dignified now that my name appears among the most illustrious in the world. At the north transept we saw at the Abbey the statues of Gladstone and Peel looked down upon us from the Speaker's Chair and stone in the seat carved in near by. LATE PROF. DOXSEE

Former students of the old Albert College mourn the passing of Rev. Professor E. R. Doxsee, classics master for twenty years here before his acceptance of a classics professorship in Regina. The many hundreds who in that time learned all the history and the Greek and much else of the more kindly and lovable of men, with a personality which did not fail to inspire his students. Some students took additional work with Mr. Doxsee in theology.

To all this gentle, genial scholar, who made the lessons so easy for his classes, and who dignified the calling of teacher because he put so much of himself into his work, endeared himself. Study ceased to be hard work when in his classes there breathed a rare atmosphere of culture, refinement, attainment and sympathy. He put human values in the hours of study, and his students were his closest friends.

His name forever will be linked with Albert College, because he was for so long associated with its work. It is noteworthy that one of his sons is at present a member of the faculty of the new Albert College.

REAL FAIRY STORY

Not unlike a fairy story was the story of the three year old boy who was lost in the woods of Carlow township last Saturday morning until Sunday at seven fifteen o'clock. This had all the elements of a fairy tale but it was a real event, after all to little Elwood Wasmund. The little boy was probably soon wearied by his wanderings as he started to find his way home and like every other lost person he tried to find some place of rest. His choice of shelter was between logs, which protected from the chill of the cool night, and gave the strayaway what little sense of security he had.

In one case only this true story was unlike a fairy story. There was as far as known to the youngster's friends no wild beast to threaten his life, though there have been in many parts of the county. Had there been a bear about, the story would have been par excellence a fairy tale. As the boy was alive, there was no need of robins to bring last year's leaves.

Boys and girls of this district who dine on the stories of little lost boys and girls in magic woodlands have here the true story of how little Elwood became lost, how his flight was discovered, how the father sought the aid of the police and suggested the use of bloodhounds while the police wisely trusted to the plan of combing the woods in small squares within which the boy would be discovered.

Romance and fairy stories are right about the love of mother for her girls hereabouts. They have enough experience to develop their imaginations so that they may be able to tell a fairy story, which most of them can soon do without a flaw.

The little stray child of course is so young that he will never be able to tell just what happened, what wonderful things, if any, he saw, and how long he kept some before he awoke to the fact that the logs and good mother earth, the last refuge of man and woman, boy and girl in distress.

Those who read this story realize how the human element was revealed in the surrender of forty men of their time and pocket-book to go in search of the lost baby. Time was an element in the hunt for dangers of accident, exposure and exhaustion were overhanging.

But the elements and nature were kind, and the thoroughness of the search instituted by Police Constable Price Morris formerly of Bellrock, resulted in early discovery of the boy's whereabouts and his restoration to his parents possible.

"WE FARMERS"

Friday was a busy day for the Prince of Wales as he attended fairs at Bath and at Yeovil, speaking in both places of the need of modernization of agriculture. Speaking concretely he told how the great roasts of beef which used to be eaten with relish on Sunday at Windsor castle a couple of cutlets. The big joint he thought in place thirty years ago but not wanted on the bill of fare today.

So he urged the British farmers to study the market.

Two things stand out clearly as a result of these addresses. The Prince who knows farming says there is something wrong with British production because it does not study the market for its farm products and the Prince who said these things has probably started a movement already.

The Prince has a deep insight into trade principles and his pronouncements are always of great value.

"Some says that love is a gift and marriage is a token."

"That so? Then I suppose divorce is a souvenir."

THE NET
By Aline Michaelis

We have come up from the mists and slime
Of a million years ago,
Up through the highest ways of time,
Through the centuries none can know.

Every soul that has dwelt on Earth,
Though it sojourned but briefly here,
Left us a share of its joy or mirth
Through year after dragging year.

Slowly the infinite net was spread,
The net from which none escapes;
Set for our feet by the ancient dead,
Those dim, primeval shapes.

Woven and laid in the way we must go,
Every thread of it decked or thought
Spun by some soul in the long ago;
By this are we snared and caught!

We have come up from the mist and slime,
And the net, in turn, weave we;
God, let us place there a thread sublime
For those who come after me.

STOCK MARKET BANDITS

These amateur financiers who sit on the sidelines but occasionally dabble in stocks, should get slightly indignant when the sordid revelations that form the evidence before the committee investigating the New York Stock Exchange.

Last week the interesting manipulations whereby shareholders in one concern took a half-million-dollar loss, was spread up the record. High finance was exposed in all its shamelessness. The insiders handed themselves out a fat melon, and all the unfortunate shareholders were no more or considerately than the fish-fans than so many cattle in the stockyards. They were given what they asked for, but the asked for it cannot be wondered at all that here was a financial crash of enormous collapse. The wholesale dishonesty which accompanied the despoiling of those who invested their money in securities could not go on indefinitely. The confidence of those manipulating financiers was a classic in the annals history of the conduct of gentlemen bandits.

Since the buying and selling of stocks on public exchanges has become a game for the rich, and information figures so flagrantly in the success of the speculator, and to the unsophisticated public which supplies the money the impression faith that there are no loaded dice in the game.—Cult Reporter.

TWO PROFESSIONS

The Detroit News, calling about for a solution of the unemployment in the United States in general and Detroit in particular, has recently presented a new thought yesterday when it inquired why the doctors of the country, through the medical and legal professions in their contacts with the unemployed, should not point out that "A criminal is a product of the impulses and not of his crimes and seeks the ministrations of a physician, and that every report for incommissance to the authorities immediately. But if the criminal misbehaves and refuses to retains a lawyer, he runs little risk of being sent to the tipped off of his intentions. "There's something wrong with this picture," says the News, "The lawyer doubtless would protest that his relations with his clients are privileged, but under ordinary circumstances, are these between a lawyer and his client in justice being a paramount consideration to the law. Between other citizens, a law has been passed to help the forces of law and order to get on the track of information that may be wounded in their contest with society, and the lawyer who doubtless ignore this law, but the law exists and is on the statute books it, they themselves become outlaws and subject to action." And then it is submitted that the time has arrived for the doctor to logically should be sauce for the lawyer, and vice versa. The fraction of laws have done some straining at a gnat and swallowed a camel than the legal fraternity, in the very nature of things, has greater contact with the criminal element than has the medical profession, yet the group with the lesser contact is compelled by law to turn in to the authorities those outside of society's pale, while the lawyer, in a position to be of real service in the war against the vicious, are permitted to throw a mantle of protection around them.—Punch

Letters to the Editor

Editor Ontario Intelligencer:

Dear Sir:—

In answer to a letter in Thursday night's paper concerning the dog tags. I am a tenant and I also own a dog, and have had one for the last couple of years. I might say I have yet failed to buy his dog tag. He is of little use as far as dogs go, but still he finds a place in the heart of my children whose father has been out of work for over a year, excepting the few odd days he can catch. It takes all the income to keep a roof over our heads and a few pair of coats for the children to go to school in. There is nothing left for such a dog tag, yet our neighbors are, the writer of the letter advises, to act the sneak and inform the police there is a stray dog without a tag living on their street, and therefore doggie goes to Mr. Thorley's and is tied up in the yard and destroyed by one of our fair policemen, with a gun. I would like to know if all these people, who are so ready to help our officers with their phones would feel to have the same thing happen to their dog as the poor children broken-hearted over the loss of their pet just for the lack of a mighty dollar. I might also say that if I ever get that low in the estimation as to have my dog such a sneak as this man promises, I hope the police will not waste the time instead of the dog as we have to live with the dog. Thanking you in advance we will get just as many crowns to mind our own affairs and leave the affairs of others alone.

I might also state I think and take consideration should be given to those who are unemployed as they have a few feelings as well as the ones who have all the money and know how to keep it.

Signed on behalf of the working man and women who have to earn a dog tax.

Thank you for the space in your paper, I remain,

MRS. McKENNA,
31 St. Paul St., City.

DON'T DEPEND UPON ADVICE MAKE CHOICE

Gullibility and Folly of Many People is Remarkable

BY LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D. Ph.D. Famous Authority on Health and Psychology.

LOUIS E. BISCH

It is quite a reasonable thing to take advice from one who knows more than you do upon a particular subject, provided he can be trusted and provided advice is necessary.

But many of us are altogether too ready to take advice even when we don't need it, or don't know whether we need it. Gullibility and unexperienced salesmen sell many people things they want that is anything but becoming.

Don't be afraid to ask for advice. They will tell you how much hair you have to comb up, how to react to your husband or wife, in case they don't seem to get the biggest bargains, how to keep your children in line, what to say, and how to save, if you don't. Don't be afraid to ask for advice.

Old Pete Donohue Making First Start For Skoots Wins

(By The Associated Press)

The wild race for the top of the International League standing which came from the fall of the Newark Bears, had produced another new leader, the Buffalo Bisons, today, and the prospect that almost any one of the three rival clubs might step into the place after another afternoon's games.

Buffalo, the leader before Newark went to the top, regained the position yesterday by downing the Rochester Red Wings, 5-4, in an exciting finish of an otherwise slow game, while the Baltimore Orioles fell before the assaults of Jersey City Skeeters, 8-3.

After accomplishing Newark's downfall with four straight triumphs the Orioles couldn't get their bats working right against Old Pete Donohue, who was making his first appearance in Jersey City uniform. They got just five hits, including homers by McGreevy and Heffner, but tossed away their chances of victory by batting into errors with Chaplin, Hopkins and Melton gave the Streets 10 blows. Ike Boone and Joe Wilson led the attack with, Moore driving in three Jersey runs.

Relief Hurler Here.

Buffalo piled up a neat lead in a duel between Brown and Winford but the former weakened and allowed Rochester to tie the count on Pete Fox's homer in the eighth. But Joe Gould, relief pitcher, put the Bisons ahead on top. He polished off the last six Red Wings, fanning two, but with one out and a man on second, took a three and two count on a attempt out a single that drove in the winning run.

The Newark-Reading and Toronto-Montreal games were rained out, leaving Buffalo with a lead of 1½ with Baltimore for second place and Newark a half game even back into fourth position but only one full game back of the leaders.

Jimmy Thompson

Did you ever hear of this fellow? He was new to me until a friend in dear old London sent over a picture. Well anyway the boy's not twenty years old yet. In an amateur he won the "cruiser weight" championship of England and then got right into pro ranks. In fifteen pro battles he has yet to taste defeat. Get that! Old Charlie Smith whom I had looked on as one of the smart-est boxers the Islands took the count from him in quick order — that's what got me going on the boy.

Peterson hails from Cardiff and got his early training from his father who handles a mean glove himself, they say. His father wanted him to be a doctor, but Pete decided he would rather break noses than mend them and that was that. He is hailed as the second Georges Carpentier, and resembles the great Frenchman both in ability and in physical characteristics, being flat on his feet and a mighty two armed slugger. He is one of the "up and downers in the throne room" that something has been these last few months.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

We do not intend going back too far for our old time readers today merely for the fact that some of them may have taken part in the games to be mentioned below. Therefore we will only go back 12 years or to the spring of 1913. That year saw a four team city league with games on the Coleman Plats, Grand Trunks, Ontario and the Dairy Company of Canada all entered in the loop.

One of the first games that year was played on the Coleman Plats with Dr. Gilbert as umpire. The "Railroad" team beat their "across the river rivals" to the tune of 24 to 12. The game was witnessed by over 400 fans and according to the press reports of that day the game was keenly contested. The Coleman Plats team lined up as follows—Sanford cf; Carter lf; the late "Gus" Watkins 3rg base; Les Gerow, c; Joe Kelleher p; "Trotter" Draycott ss; Guy Harris 1st base; Hi Gerow and F. Orr shared short stop positions.

The winning Grand Trunk team had players on their roster from all points along the line. They opened the season with a "dark horse" pitcher by the name of Yott but he soon gave way to the veteran twirler, Tommy Smith. The rest of the "Trunks" lineup was Talbot cf; Bl. Simmons lf; Dougal Simons 1st base; Finch cf; Harry Pringle 2nd base; Bill Simons 2nd base; Bobbie Mair ss; and Fantaise catcher...All of the Simons boys came up from Brockville for the games while a couple of the other players worked along the line sometimes between trains at Brockville. The two other teams in the loop that season, we will introduce to the fans next week.

On June 24th that year the then famous Barnum and Bailey Circus played in Belleville. That was long before the amalgamation between them and the Ringling Bros. Circus. Those were the happy days of "hold your horses here comes the elephants."

It was in the late spring of 1913 that Arthur Petky was tried for manslaughter after Luther McCarthy had died from the effects of a blow received in the first round when Petky K.O'ed the latter in a boxing bout staged in Calgary. The jury acquitted Petky after watching for all sport fans throughout the Dominion.

More information has been procured for those interested in box lacrosse and tonight's meeting at the "Y" should bring out plenty of ideas as to the formation of a league in Belleville. We sincerely hope that there is a junior or juvenile loop formed so as to try to promote and foster the game among the younger sporting element of the city. If such a proposed project is completed then it might be well to form an industrial loop whereby the other integrated players of a mature age could enjoy the game. Charlie Hamilton, of Campbellford, was in town yesterday and assured us that the game was going over in a big way at the Hydro town. Charlie is quite interested in baseball national game and was of the opinion that the Campbellford team would gladly come to Belleville and give a demonstration of the "peale" game, as Les Marks calls it, against some local players. The game would only be staged for the purpose of introducing the game into Belleville and the fans would be recipient of the rudiments of the appeals. Charlie claims that the game is there as far as hockey. If that be so we will hold up the hands in praise of its reception in Belleville.

Harry Drew, superintendent of the signal department of the C.N.R. arrived in town yesterday that Alex Weir would officially be stationed in Belleville by the C.N.R. this summer and that Vincent Massey would be moved from Peterboro to Brighton. Vincent therefore will be eligible to play ball for the Nationals as the O.B.A.A. recognize affiliated players of the employes by their employers.

Almost the entire season opens there has been a squawk registered from the camp of the Kingston Ponies. They wanted Cobourg to play today's schedule game last evening and were quite peeved when the Cobourg executive of B.A.A. hockey Newt Thompson both refused to accommodate. The Kingston moguls can remember as far back as the annual B.A.A. meeting, held in their town, they will bring to mind the statement made then by the Cobourg delegates to the effect that their club could not play on the road except on either Wednesday or Saturday and Wednesday was more preferable and both clubs agreed to play Kingston's opening game on June 8th in the Limestone City. Now the Kingstonians are very bouyant in their outcry refused to play the game last night. We might add right here that the O.H.A. has never enjoyed the feeling of good fellowship and sportsmanship between the various clubs participating, since Kingston was admitted into the loop. They are always squawking about something.

Lots of sport is scheduled for next week when the Belleville Senior Men's Softball loop swings into action on Tuesday night and the Y.M.C.A. have entertain the Wellington kids at the Fair grounds the same evening. On Wednesday afternoon the Belleville Agricultural Society are staging a monster harness race meet at the Fair Grounds with some of the best horses in Ontario being present. On Wednesday evening the first girls' softball game of the season is scheduled and the Chaco nine battle the National Maids in the opening game of the season.

Tigers Tighten Hold on Third Place By Win Over Chicago

BY HERBERT W. BARKER

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

One of the minor mysteries of the Major League season has been the ease with which the Pittsburgh Pirates floundering around in the National League's second division most of the time, have been able to take the St. Louis Cardinals in the traces.

The world champions won their first two clashes from the Corsairs at the start of the season but have since then been few and far between. As a matter of fact, the Pirates have walked away with eight of the last ten games the clubs have played.

Their eighth victory over the champions, achieved yesterday by an 8-4 count, boosted the Pirates into fourth place, only one game behind the third place Cincinnati Reds. Larry French, hard working left-hander, whose name has appeared in 14 Pirate box scores already this season, was the victor although he allowed 12 hits. It was French's fourth victory of the season and the Pirates' fourth in succession. They now have seven to their credit.

Meanwhile the Chicago Cubs increased their lead to a game and a half by beating Cincinnati 6-4, while the Boston Braves succumbed again to the Phillies, 8-5. The Cubs rushed all their runs across the plate in the third inning. Charley Grimm, Cub manager, was being the high spot.

George Kelly's second home run to be made in days started a five run Brooklyn rally that sank the New York Giants, 9-2, and Watty Stewart-Graw's benchmen into the cellar. Van Mungo gave the Giants only seven hits and fanned seven.

American League

The American League schedule was restricted to two games. The Detroit Tigers bunched ten hits to good advantage to halt the Chicago White Sox 7-5, and tighten their grip on third place.

The Cleveland Indians battered George Blaeholder for nine hits and six runs in seven innings and coasted to a fairly easy victory over the St. Louis Browns, 8-3. Clint Brown gave five hits, one Goose Goslin's first homer of the season.

WALL STREET LEAGUE

Two more games were played in the Wall St. loop last night, when the Y.M.C.A. nine battled the Delaney Bearcats for seven innings after which the game was called due to darkness and had to be called a tie game as the score was 13 to 13.

In the second game the Belleville Fulmanizing scored a decisive victory over the Hydro by the score of 24 to 11.

In the first game the battle was fought on a water-soaked field with the result that the ball was quite hard to handle. The batteries for this game were, Y.M.C.A., Miller and Harris, and for the Bearcats, Jerpinnian and Ridley pitched, while Gray was on the receiving end.

In the second game the Belleville Fulcanizing literally pounded their way to victory when they collected 17 hits from the offerings of Barrage and Barrage all day in the score of 24 to 11. The batteries for the game were Hydro, Barrage and Parks; Belleville Vulcanizing, Ridley and Morgan.

GUIDE WORK IS SHOWN IN PLAYS

Company 3, Guides and Brownies, Present Concert

Demonstrating what a Girl Guide must know to merit the various badges and awards, a series of interesting little plays and sketches were given last evening, in John St. Hall by members of the Guide Company and Brownie Pack of Company three. To those whose interest in Guides has not been keen, but whose actual knowledge of their activities has been slight, the entertainment last evening was a welcome opportunity to learn about the girls. And as the evening progressed, and Guide aims, ideals and practical work were portrayed the audience was not a little amazed at the requirements for a real Guide. In fact Guides and Brownies were regarded with awe as the spectators realized their attainments.

Miss A. McKay, the energy mother of many Guide outings, was chairman for the evening and briefly told of the aim of the Guide movement, the work of the Guides in Belleville and group of Guides in training which the Guides of this city recently would soon be progressing.

The Guides and Brownies in a group on the stage sang a welcome to the audience and told of the Brownie and Guide laws and badge work. Four interesting and amusing plays were then presented, and the entertainment closed with a campfire, dear to the hearts of all Guides.

The first little sketch told of a little girl who brought up by three aunts with Victorian views who looked upon Guides as tomboys. The three accidently visit the church hall where a Guide meeting is in progress and are delighted with the work, mistaking the organization for a church society. They are so completely won over that they take part in a folk dance to the great amazement of the audience. The dances in the programme had been taught the Guides by Miss Mary Roberts of Montreal and the nursing and ambulance work demonstrated, had been taught by Miss Collier.

The second play showed the efficiency of the Guides in an emergency. This time in bandaging an injured girl while her companions utterly helpless and distraught was merely a hindrance to the other girls. The arranging of a stretcher by means of two lathes and two sweater coats greatly intrigued the audience which was relieved to find that it not only held but was an ideal stretcher.

The aim of the Brownies was revealed in a play that told of two grumbling little girls who disliked helping at home. They seek the traditional Brownies of long ago and find that they themselves can be the Brownies and do the work of the "little folk".

The last play was most interesting and the costumes were very clever. Lady Arthur and the Knights were shown waiting for unanswered calls for help to come back to the earth to continue their deeds of chivalry. They find that the Guides are following in their footsteps. Guide laws not unlike the rules of the Round Table.

The entertainment was greatly enjoyed and Miss McKay referred to the work of the Captain, Mrs. M. E. Branscombe, who prepared the Guides for the plays.

The Quebec Department of Highways is experimenting with a liquid asphalt preparation as a covering for the gravel highways in that province.

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

It's Beauty Plus Charm These Days

That men admire pretty girls goes without saying. They like to drag her around a pretty creature who wears the same clothes, looks nobby. "That's a swell baby I saw you dancing with last night, "the boy's pal says. "Some crazy about her, why not? Isn't he, attractive to swell ladies?

Yet few girls knock a man completely off his head; have him on his knees listen to his poetic love sayings, just because they're good looking and clothes. Because they located the clever coiffure builder or because they are familiar with every item in the art of make-up. The girl that a man goes crazy about is the one who is a jolly entertaining companion, who makes an effort to be charming, whose personality shoots Cupid's arrow straight into his heart and makes him consider matrimony.

Pretty girls are everywhere, a drug on the market. They maincure our finger nails, they hike on our bundles in the cash-and-carry grocries. Being easy on the eye is what is expected of the modern blade, as a clean shirt every day and properly clipped hair are expected of every man. If a girl is going to be a person, she's got to display something more than external pulchritude.

Amiability is the big lure. That catches 'em. Women are learning about the compelling influence of a low, sweet voice. Bell, was cheated when a man out for being late at an appointment or forgetting to telephone isn't done any more. It's old stuff.

For the preservation of her youthful look, for the sake of her soul, for the good of her digestion and her nervous system a woman should be amiable. When she has learned to hold her tongue and mind her business, to treat her fellow creatures—all of them from the garbage collector to the grand person with good manners and respect she has found the best of all possible means of oiling the wheels of life, of making her way smooth, unrippled by the storms of disputes and misunderstandings. Then it's a fair face and fair weather.

The girl who is out for a good time has been losing out these last years; she's had to turn to the problem of making herself extremely attractive, It's doubtful if she appears quite so pretty in the eyes of those swains who threw away their money on her entertainment. They now wish they had those rolls of green-backs. The day of gold digger is over.

What a fellow likes is a girl who is nice to talk with, able to walk with, most of all nice to do nothing with—to lolly back, rest, be cozy and comfortable.

How can a girl be that nice? By developing a sunny, human feelings, by behaving in a natural, pleasing manner, by realizing that one of a jolly, happy nature and growing one.

We've not bellitling the lovely complexion, the wavy hair, handsome white hands and the svelte figure. They're taken for granted. For our own satisfaction we must attend to external beautifying. But to make the grade there must be personality, character, brains.

Joan Bennett, who plays with John Boles in "Careless Lady" at the Capitol, Monday and Tuesday.

LIBRARY CORNER

"The Samaritans of Molakai" by Charles J. Dutton is the story of the lives of Father Damien and Brother Joseph among the lepers. Begun as a biography of rs Dutton (Brother Joseph), the work has been expanded to include an historical survey of leprosy in ancient and mediaeval times, and an account of the life and work of Father Damien, whose helper, Brother Joseph, was in the leper colony on the island of Molakai. The book is a record of the great spiritual adventure of two heroic men and describes their work on the little island in the Hawaiian Archipelago. The New York Times in reviewing the volume remarks: "It is taken for granted that in the slow, deliberate years of the Catholic Church Father Damien, the saviour of the lepers, will be canonized and take his place in the saints calendar."

The most recent methods and practical findings of present-day psychology, described by seven specialists who are recognized authorities in their respective fields, are presented by Paul S. Achilles in the volume "Psychology At Work". In a series of brief sketches by seven men as Prof. Floyd Allport, Prof. Walter Miles, Prof. Morris Viteles, Prof. Mark May Lois H. Meek, Arnold Gesell and Prof. Arthur Gates, a realistic picture is given of science at work. The reader is afforded an opportunity to see the application of psychology to industry and the professions, to social and political problems, and to child training and personality development.

A panorama of Spanish-American life, peaks, valleys and culture throughout the years from the time of Bolivar, is presented by Waldo Frank in his book "Virgin Spain: a Portrait and a Prospect". Spain, the land of the Andes, the Pampas, the Pacific, the Caribbean, and the Central Sea, and their national problems, race, great men and cultural aims. After the Spanish people, in interpreting which Bolivar and San Martin are considered, the book concludes with a "prospect" of America His-pana of the future.

SCOTS CHURCH WILL JOIN IN UNION TALKS

Will Consider Closer Union With Church of England

PRIMATE ENVOY

Edinburgh, Scotland, May 28 — The General Assembly of the Church of Scotland last night voted to accept an invitation from the last Lambeth Conference of Anglican Bishops to a conference for consideration of closer union between the two Churches. The Assembly passed a resolution favouring attendance at such a conference by a large majority.

The invitation was brought to the General Assembly by Most Rev. Cosmo Gordon Lang, Archbishop of Canterbury, himself the son and grandson of Presbyterian ministers. The Archbishop suggested that, though actual union between the two Churches might well be unattainable they might enter full communion while each retained its own autonomy.

Introducing the resolution Rev. William A. Curtis, Professor of Biblical Criticism, at Edinburgh University, said the Assembly was dealing with a matter which, in the broad sense, affected the whole branch, brought in the hands of a distinguished delegation of peace from a great Church, whose influence in the counsels of the nation and of the Christian Church worship in the Assembly could doubt.

A long discussion followed presentation of the resolution, during which proponents of the conference overwhelmingly defeated two amendments which would have rejected the scheme.

No Apprentices in Harness Making, Horses Are Passing

Leather Merchant Tells Reporter of Conditions of Trade

ODD JOBS VALUE

All his life Thomas G. Wells, of Campbell Street has worked among the savory odor of untanned leather, the aroma of harness finish, the smell of beeswax for the dyed, and the scent of the polish to shine the brass. After his life he has stitched and sewn and cut, the same as his father had done before him, and his grandfather—even to his great grandfather. They come of a family who have for generations taken pride in their neat stitching, their accurate cutting of leather, and their still in fitting in the living animal in the shape of new shiny harness in Lincolnshire, England, he learned his trade as so many of the Wells had done before him, and there was pride in his voice as he reluctantly related a few facts about it yesterday afternoon.

A reporter smelled the scent of new leather as he passed the shop. He smelled in. Reposing on a bench was a pair of new trace harness hanging with the rest, beautifully finished to one of the police motorcycles. It seemed out of place somehow, in the shop of harness hanging up on the trees and pegs, more in keeping with congruously appearing were the leather satchels, the trunks and cases and every odd leather glove fitting around to be stitched. Yet incongruous appearing contrasting articles are the bread and butter of the harness trade these days. They represent over one half of the work in a business so. It is responded on harness these days as a means of livelihood then these articles on the cupboard when dinner time came.

Odd Jobs.

Mr. Wells noted the question in the reporter's eye. "Not a lot of work is just odd jobs like I am doing now," he said. "Some of the trade made many a set of shiny harness by grace the big sleighing parties of days gone by. Now they seemed Pressed for the need of a set of leather. They .... But again Mr. Wells broke off. "I suppose that does fix a reporter to ask too many questions. Let them talk."

"To ask me how I started business would be to ask me how old I was. Suffice to say that it was a good many years ago. A long time ago I made my first harness for a set for overseas service I have been here ever since.

Horses Passing.

"Business dying? I'm afraid so. Not only business but the horses, too. Now it is a rarity to see a team of horses ambling down the odd few around the race tracks or at fairs. And every city has a good set of harness on them .... A sight escaped him and he ran located between stitches. "Now harness repairing is only a fifty-fifty proposition. We depended once on the harness, there can always be found a few buyers around every city, and there always will be, so that there the occasional job first thing, but making harness is a lost art. The trade is dying while there are a few days .... no apprentices wants to learn it. When a few of us odd fellows go what's going to happen to it ....?

He put a stitch which was answered with deep silence. The subject began to get interesting to Shoemaker and Harness.

"You see, when you repair man can fix harness, which is exactly what a lot of them are doing, but no one man can do it right. They're not only got to be harness horse-collars have to be heavy lovers, too. They have to understand the animal. They have to in sympathy with him before they can fit him properly and give him ease to fit him. In my day that was an art—it still should be, but there are a lot of rubber stamped out of harness making on some of the poor horses in this town. They furnished the motorcycle saddle and bild it also. Then they wonder at the poor worn piece of harness and begin to stitch it together and expertly. There was silence except for the click of the awl in and out of the bit of leather.

"When I remarked some time ago that horses were rapidly disappearing I did not take into account the fact that many farmers in the district still have a number of them. This year they will be using them as they are coming back to the horse more and more. Tractors in these hard times are more expensive than the horse .... No the tractor will never displace the workaday horse ....."

Heavy Harness.

"Back some years ago it was the light harness and saddles we used to make the money on. Then it was a matter of pride to turn out a good piece of work. These days we depend mostly on heavy draught harness. Light harness is only a part of the past .... Now it's gloves, print cases for ladies, have you in your leather that needs repairing? Yes, I can do it for you.

"Some time ago you remarked that apprentices nowadays were passing the trade up. When some of you older men quit the business there will be nobody capable of making a set of harness, is that right?" "Well, it looks that way. It's a trade you can't learn in a day or so, you know. It takes experience and lots of it to cut and fit a set of harness for any horse. The ordinary shoemaker's apprentice would find himself in a lot of deep water if he ever tried it. No, when we go so will the trade." Poor horses!

7 Years Training.

"And this apprenticeship harness makers must go through—how long a period is it?"

"Seven years. You work under instruction for seven years until you learn all the business, and then when you have put that much time in you would be considered "improver" for another two years. During the rest of the while you work as if you are learning all the time. But in the beginning you have to feel that you will like the work and will stick at it when you learn it."

Seven years apprenticeship ..... another two years when you finish that little bit of learning ..... and still you don't know all there is to learn!

What price harness makers!

Changes Are Irregular But Narrow and Little Changed

New York, May 28—The stock market succeeded in throwing off early weakness today and closed with a steady tone. Net changes are irregular but narrow.

A rather substantial volume of overnight liquidation, reflecting Friday's decline, brought losses of 1 to 3 points for many leaders during the first half hour, covering in addition of the Monday holiday and a feeling that the tax bill would have made considerable progress by the time traders reconvened next week checked the sag and built up support for the upturn.

Tobacco, utility and merchandising issues bore the brunt of early liquidation but eventually seized their groups in retracing lost ground. Trading was fairly active. A view of the fact that many traders were away for an extended week end, transactions approximating 1,000 shares.

BETTER PRICE SEEN FOR EGGS

Scarcity of Production Lengthens Price on Local Market

Despite the drizzling rain which fell during the trading hours of the Belleville market on Saturday considerable business was transacted.

At the inside market the variation in the price of eggs was quite marked when they sold from 11c to 15c per dozen. Butter remained firm at two pounds for 65c. Plenty of fowl were seen retailing at from 60c to $1.15 according to size. Young fowl were in evidence and brought 90c to $1.00 a pair. The change in the price was caused by the fact that the farmers' hens are not producing as heretofore.

The outside market was also a hive of industry. Potatoes jumped from 25c a bag due to their scarcity while a few cooking apples were to be seen. Lettuce was retailing at 2 lettuce at 5c and 10c a bunch, green onions 5c and 10c a bunch and a bunch were soon purchased. Fresh radishes were seen during the first time this year and sold for 5c a bunch, while asparagus was four bunches for 25c. Water cress was also offered at three bunches for 25c and all of the flowers were observed on the market.

Hundreds of bulbs and baskets of plants and vegetables for transplanting were also on sale and found a ready market. They show this year a decided increase in quantity described by the growers to the cool spring and greater interest being taken. Hot bed and cold frames the heat has not been of an intensive nature at any time and the growth has been steady instead of rushed. It is hoped that the season will prove a lucky one for those offered for sale this year.

MOOSE MEMBERS GREET ZIHLMAN

Supreme Dictator Tells of Growth of Order

About two hundred and fifty members of the Belleville Moose Lodge gave a very hearty and enthusiastic welcome to the Supreme Dictator of the order, Mr. Frederick N. Zihlman, in the Moose Auditorium, Belleville, on Saturday evening. Members were present, in addition to those from Belleville, from Port Hope, Trenton, Kingston and Brockville. Mr. Zihlman, in his capacity as Supreme Dictator, is on an official tour and during the past year has travelled seven thousand miles, visiting lodges in the United States and Canada.

At the meeting last night the Past Supreme Dictator, Mr. Hugo Meyd, Toronto, and District Deputy Supreme Dictator, Mr. R. Hogg, of Toronto, were present.

In a very happy and interesting speech, Mr. Meyd introduced the Supreme Dictator to the large audience.

Prayers of Order.

Mr. Zihlman is an excellent speaker and his address throughout was very interesting. He spoke with great advancement which the order has made in the past few years and of its benevolence was told by the speaker and the members present were very much pleased with what they has been and is being accomplished.

At Moosehaven, Illinois, a small town founded by the order, there is a large institution and each dependent orphan children are taken care of and educated in a trade and an academic school and they are sent out prepared to take their place in the world as good citizens of their men and women. The training and schools at Moosehaven are unsurpassed at the institution has been studied by representatives of many foreign countries and societies and it is believed that as a result, schools will be formulated by them whereby hundreds of thousands of children in the future will be taken better care of and given a fair chance to make something of their lives.

Moosehaven.

At Moosehaven, Florida, a home is conducted by the order for aged and dependent people. Here aged people are not separated, the aged member of the family and wife are permitted to pass the remainder of their lives together in comfort.

At the close of Mr. Zihlman's address a short program was rendered and community singing entered into. Vocal solos were given by a very pleasing manner by Mrs. Ollwell, Mr. Burke, Mr. Vanderbilt, Mr. S. Turner, Mr. W. Edwads and a cornet solo by Mr. Jack Green of the Belleville legion and a vocal solo by Mr. Jamieson of Port Hope. Before the evening closed a short address was passed socially and refreshments were served.

IN MEMORIAM

DRACUP—In memory of Fred Dracup.

Just one year ago today,
Without good bye you slipped away
To that blessed home God prepared
And left no more this world can Only trust.
Yes, dear! It is both cold and lonely here,
And even worse since you're not
there,
With smile and joke from day to day.
To help us drive our cares away.
Sadly missed by wife and daughter, and mother, father, brother and sisters.

Y. M. C. A. Looks Out on Future with Optimism

At a supper provided by the Ladies' Auxiliary in the lower hall of the Y.M.C.A. Friday evening, officials and directors of the Belleville Y.M.C.A., representatives of the Ladies' Auxiliary and representatives from each department, met to hear the 39th annual report of the association as presented by its president, E. F. Jennings, and the Celtic and financial report of H. W. Ackerman, chairman of finance.

The report of the Ladies' Auxiliary was made by Mrs. Earl Hickey, secretary and in concluding its reading of the 1931-1932 year on April 30th last, were all re-elected for another 1 year period. Though Mr. L. W. Anderson wished to withdraw his name he was again elected director, his resignation to be considered. If he still felt so inclined, at the next meeting of the board of directors. The prevailing sentiment expressed by several speakers was to have him remain on the board and not transfer to the Advisory committee. The directors re-elected were H. W. Ackerman, Dr. N. E. Edwards, L. B. Pinder, C. H. Griffin, C. E. Hanna, G. B. Smith, F. R. Smith, and O. F. Cox.

Optimism Voiced

Optimistic sentiments regarding the coming fiscal year's work of the Y.M.C.A. was expressed by Mr. Jennings and Mr. Ackerman. The past year had shown a falling off in returns from the business end of the work but membership had increased. New work was been undertaken by the association and had proven both successful and beneficial to the membership. The scope of work was ever enlarging and more so this next year than Y.M.C.A. had been the centre of community life in Belleville, and the country over the Y.M.C.A. was looking forward with hopefulness, optimism and good courage, toward the further accomplishment of its work in Belleville.

The short programme and order of business as carried out last evening was as follows:

"O, Canada"; Grace; Supper; Prayer—Rev. Clarence Hamilton; B. F. Jennings; Financial Report—H. W. Ackerman; Election of officers; Business; Adjournment by singing "Fight the Good Fight."

During supper period Victor White seted as song leader with Alex Gordon as pianist.

Ladies' Auxiliary

The Annual Report of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Y.M.C.A. was read.

During the past year there have been nine meetings with an average attendance of nineteen; and we feel that the work has been progressing favorably under the faithful guidance of our President, Mrs. C. S. Scanlebury.

The membership have been followed up very closely in an endeavour to widen the interest and increase the income of the Auxiliary. Our total membership at this time being 126 in comparison to 124 of last year. The membership fees have been taken care of when necessary, and the Auxiliary have been entertained by the various Circles under the guidance of Mrs. E. F. Baker and assisted by Convenors O'Flynn, Wheatley, Marshall Jones, Hall, Hunter, Hamilton and Mrs. Sharpe. It is with gratitude we record again the splendid support of Mrs. Rollinson throughout another year.

Mrs. Norman Edwards executive of the Flower committee reported the sending of flowers and plants where possible in cases of sickness or sorrow. Also relief work has been assisted through Mr. Shorst at the Y.M.C.A. building.

The Social committee under the chairmanship of Mrs. Shorst have served fifteen suppers on banquets making a total of approximately 650 meals. The receipts and expenditures of the year are as follows:

Balance from last year.....	18.68
Membership fees.....	58.00

	383.57

Balance on hand 22.85.

It is with thankfulness for another year's opportunity of service and with hope for the future, that this report is respectfully submitted.

Jane Hickey, Secretary.

Jessie Fairfield, Treasurer.

Belleville, May 27th, 1932.

Thirty Ninth annual report for year ended April 30th, 1932 follows:

During a year of serious economics and social adjustment, of unemployment and distress, the physical need the Young Men's Christian Association itself has been because of its concern for men and boys, faced with exceptional demands upon its program service, staff and physical equipment. In a period of unemployment and retirement when the fifth of men in their fullest years and strength in their God seemed strained and tested the Association was called upon to minister to the needs of men and serve the Community in a much more comprehensive way.

The unselfish painstaking and conscientious service rendered by the woman of our auxiliary in the service of meals; caring for the dormitories and providing for the needy should be acknowledged with sincere thanks and gratitude. The readiness of soldiers and sailors to assist in programme leadership, the generous gifts of time and talent by business and professional men in Committee Service, Membership and Finance are contributions without which it would be impossible for us to so adequately serve our field. The Y's Men's Club should be commended for the generous support the Association in many ways but particularly for its service to and activity among the boys of the city.

The consideration of and friendly response of organizations, groups and individuals and the daily press has made a year of interest, continuance with one of happy and enthusiastic effort.

The departmental reports which follow will indicate the outreach of the programme.

Respectfully,

Howard Clarke, Chairman: - We have this 5-yr meet than ever determined to have the Christian Spirit manifest in all our activities and to have every piece of work done contribute to the building up of Christian character. We seek to work in harmony with existing agencies and to serve the church. In our local programme Talks, Addresses, Services of Worship, Bible Study Groups and Personal Interviews all help.

World Brotherhood.

P. C. MacLaurin, Chairman: This is an objective dear to the men and boys of other lands and an effort to understand their problems and needs. We have had two addresses by Secretaries returned from the Foreign Field, a report from Mr. John Goldhart formerly of China and one from Dr. Beal after a season in the Orient, a visit from John Foomiah Baron of India and Albert Metala of Ethiopia, delegates on their way to the World's Assembly. We had an older boy, Elton Mcal—ray and a young man, Ewart Calder represent us at the great International gathering at Rochester and report from Dr. Chas. Bishop and Newton Thompson after visiting the International Convention at C'eviad. We raised during the year for Foreign work the sum of $128.30.

Boys' Work.

N. E. Edwards, Chairman: In our Boys' Division are the Prep (age 10 and 11) Junior Juniors (12 to 14 years) Senior School (15 to 17 years) and Employed Boys (15 to 17 years). The regular program consists of a gym period, shower and swim and club meeting. In addition to the regular programme for these groups we had the following special features, Hi-Y Club with support meetings, addresses, etc. Mother and son banquet, Hi-Y Hockey with eighteen teams nearly 200 boys competing, Hi-Y hard and soft ball league, 180 boys competing, Hallowe'en Party with 300 boys and girls participating, Boys' Camp Ruckton and Boys' Camp opposite the matter of receipts, a condition not wholly unexpected, the physical department, rather in the contrary, experienced one of the best years it has shown for a considerable period in point of both attendance and interest maintained in the activities, stated Mr. Brown, chairman.

As a result of several special activity groups which were taken into the association at the high rate had a financial returns for membership received a much needed and welcomed increase in the Business Men's Class which resulted in the largest contingent of business men for the last decade, was another factor that contributed to the banner year. Attendance at all classes and activities was maintained at a high level throughout the whole season. So fully utilized was the gymnasium that it became extremely difficult to find practice periods for representative teams in the Association not to mention outside groups applying for privileges for special activities.

The regular gym class schedule included nineteen weekly gym periods with each session followed by the usual period of recreation. Besides these class periods, special activities such as the Senior circuit league, taking up an entire evening, Church and Home League Activities, Badminton, Swimming, Lifesaving and Boxing were engaged in.

Membership.

Harold Werby, Chairman: This committee is active in the promotion of membership efforts, Fall Membership Campaign etc. The Committee to think the Women's Auxiliary for the splendid assistance in putting on suppers and dinners for the membership lunch. The Committee is glad to report that in face of the depression the membership receipts are better this year in every department than the year previous. The figures follow:

R. J. Wray, Chairman: While the total receipts show a falling off we had a very satisfactory season. Ten-pin bowling and home games were played and ladies entertained in each city. The bowling alley should be acknowledged.

House and Dormitory.

J. B. Pinding, Chairman: Dormitory will show in the financial report a decrease of some $320.00. We have however room accommodation to almost as many boys as the greater portion of the year. We have 27 single rooms and cots for transients in two other rooms. Forty-two regular roomers and six bunded and thirty-four regular roomers and six bunded and thirty-four regular roomers were taken care of during the year. Many of the transients were individual men, out of employment, etc, and were provided meals and lodgings without charge.

Of our regular rooms nine were redecorated during the year and new supplies of linen curtains, etc. were supplied by the Women's Auxiliary.

The building is in good shape with exception of some decorating and heating plant repairs. These will be attended with by a committee at present.

The building is more than ever a Community Centre and is being used to capacity. Forty-seven different organizations used the building for a total of 279 meetings during the year. Ten twenty-seven different occasions assolation proper. It was loaned for use outside the building.

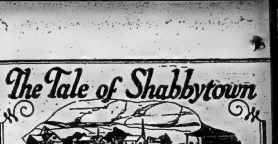
FAMOUS ENGLISH CRICKETER DIES

W. H. Lockwood Considered One of Greatest Bowlers of All Time

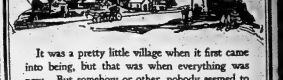


(By The Canadian Press)

LONDON—The death took place recently at Nottingham, his native city, of W. H. Lockwood, the old Surrey and English bowler.

W. H. Lockwood was born on March 25, 1866, at Nottingham and first played for his native shire in 1886. He was then considered more as a batsman than a bowler, and it is no wonder that in those days when the standard of Nottinghamshire was so high, he failed to establish a batsman good enough for the County Eleven. Shrewsbury, Gunn, Barnes, Flowers, and Attewell were then in their prime and as Lockwood's name is not mentioned, not appear until some years later. Nottinghamshire allowed him, on an evil day for them, to qualify for Surrey. This was considered a tough thing at those times, and Lockwood only followed the example of William McGregor, Hugo, Sharpe, Abel, Read, Crowland, and other Nottinghamshire cricketers.

Lockwood's first year for Surrey was a disappointment enough, one of his best innings that year was 43 against his native county. He was a good bat, but it was not until 1891 that he began to show distinct promise as a bowler. In 1893 he was perhaps, the best bowler in England. He represented the Players against the Gentlemen both at Lord's and the Oval, and was also one of the best bats that Australia in 1893. In that match he got the first five wickets at a very cheap rate, and then Mr. Gregory and Mr. Graham got the upper hand. A statistical analysis, however, was six wickets for 101 runs; and he also got eight wickets for 123 runs in the return match at the Oval. In the match between Surrey and Lancashire in 1894 Lancashire wanted only 75 runs in order to win, but Lockwood took six wickets for 30 runs, and the result was a tie. Lockwood's visit to Australia with Mr. Stoddart's first team in 1894-95 was disappointing, largely owing to the fact that he was not fit; on his return to England he was in the midst of his cricket career appeared to be ended. In 1898 he began again, and for the next six years he was the greatest bowler in England. Lockwood's record was a celebrated performance of Lockwood's for Gentlemen and Players' match in 1902 at Lord's. He made 100 runs and took seven wickets. The second innings for the Players it was a typical Lord's wicket, which is so wonderfully remarkable for the difficult bowling had seldom been seen than that of Lockwood's, for the famous two-run victory of the Australians at Manchester in 1902 the Australian innings began on a sotfish wicket, and Mr. Trumper got most of the runs made. He was not until 129 runs had been made, but after that the rest of the side in the first innings and five for 28 in the second. This was perhaps the finest performance of his life. After that Lockwood practically dropped out of first-class cricket, and his last season for Surrey was that of 1903.



Lockwood's career may be separated into distinct periods; from 1886 to 1891 he was a fair batsman, but from 1891 to his Australian tour he was a great bowler. Then came two or three years of relapse, and then from 1898 to 1903 were the best years in which he was incomparably the best bowler in the world. Richardson and Lockwood were household words, and it was something a batsman might be proud of to remember as his first appearance against that pair at their best on the Oval. Lockwood took a long run and came down very heavily on his left foot when delivered the ball. He was very apt to break down, and he never was able to pound away week after week as his great rival Richardson could do. His successors as a bowler may be estimated by the fast that though he bowled for 15 seasons he did so somewhat intermittently and in that time he took 1,374 wickets, and very often he bowled, have taken more. He could not keep his feet on soft tickets, but on hard ones he was. when fit, the most difficult bowler to face, due to his pace off the ground was tremendous, and he whipped back from the off with a spin that made him at times almost unplayable. He was not such a great bowler as Richardson, as he was more uncertain. Richardson thundered away over after over, never sending down a bad ball, but Lockwood bowled more puzzle balls than any bowler since George Wootton and Freeman in the sixties. This stamps him as one of the great bowlers of all times.

The Tale of Shabbytown

It was a pretty little village when it first came into being, but that was when everything was new. But somehow or other, nobody seemed to care much about keeping it so. When approached on the subject, they always said: "We're so busy building a bigger town that we can't stop every little while to Clean-Up and Paint-Up."

But the funny part of it was the town failed to grow. It just stood stationary, and folks who came there visiting, with an eye to settling down, or opening a store, or building a factory, shook their heads and kept moving.

MORAL: Progress and Paint seem to go together.

"THREE WOMEN"

By FAITH BALDWIN

COPYRIGHT, BY FAITH BALDWIN — DISTRIBUTED BY KING FEATURES SYNDICATE, INC.

Mrs. Sheldon permitted this invasion of her house with a bleak smile. Girls were heroines in her time, but changes must be endured. These children were rowdy, they wore shorter skirts than she dreamt; some of them dipped into the rouge pot. And Elizabeth was unashamed of paint, and by contrast, all the more dewy and lilylike for it; these children sang to unmusical instruments they clattered and pushed, in and out the great halls. They spoke a language that was harsh and alien to her ear-drums.

Yet she allowed them to come, as her guests. Better, far better, that they should be here; then she knew where Joyce was.

Chaperonage was becoming very lax, but not in her household. When Joyce went to dances some one went with her. Mrs. Sheldon was more often the mother of another girl who was not much older than the same fashion; now and then Louise Harris, very bored, when her boys came to call, as they began to do when Joyce was sixteen, took the remaining mother, Elizabeth Van Alstyne. The young men were tremendous with their "Yes, Mrs. Harris" and names for the elder Mrs. Sheldon: "Old Dragon," "Queen Victoria" or Washington Square." None of them ceased to be polite, and in time they mumbled Joyce but pronounced to their fellows that the pretty girl must be seen and heard. Joyce continued to ring the echo-awakening bell defiantly; Louise appeared as no chaperone Joyce Sheldon was a speech. Elizabeth tried to keep herself and sometimes to their friends, "a peach."

As thoughtful as in childhood Joyce took all her problems to her grandmother. I need a new frock ....or a pair of slippers....or a hat coat. Her little hurts, her vexations, her sudden friendships, her affections. She was realizing that grandmother did not understand very well, not always, that she was sometimes spiritually hard of hearing, but to whom else could she go? Not to her mother. Her mother was a gentle automaton. The butterfly which had emerged from the chrysalis, which had lived out a brief summer, had returned again to the cocoon. Joyce had almost forgotten that bewildering, ephemeral life.

Once, however, the resort of last despair, she turned to her.

"Why, can't I go to the Harris's house party?"

"I had not heard of it."

"Grandmother says not."

"Well, then—"

"But I want to go. Every one'll be there. Oh, Mother, I'm dying to go."

"Why doesn't she—"

"Oh, how do I know? Says she doesn't like them—says they're new rich—says they're not well brought up. As if that mattered! Jim fought in the war and was decorated and all the girls are mad over him. And Louise is sweet—not a bit like mother. Oh, please, you ask her for me."

"I'm afraid I haven't much influence." Elizabeth admitted, quietly. But a slowly scintillating contentment rose and exhibited an embedded life. Why couldn't she say, "Of course you may go, dear?"

The resentment drove her to Louise.

"Joyce says you will not permit her to go to Cornwall."

Mrs. Sheldon was at her desk, going over the housekeeping accounts. She said something abstracted about the increased cost of living and the extravagance in the kitchen. Then she laid down her pen and asked with a flicker of unpleasant amusement, "She has been appealing to you?"

"Yes, after a fashion. Why not let her go? Maisie Harris seems a rather nice child, and it would be a pleasant Easter holiday."

"I do not approve of Maisie, nor of her background. Maisie is unendurably slangy, undisciplined. The mother is fast; there are stories about the elder brother. I cannot imagine what you are thinking, Elizabeth, to encourage Joyce to plot with you behind my back."

"But—"

Why can't I say it—why can't I say—"I'm her mother—I say she shall go—I'm her mother. I tell you!

Mrs. Sheldon took up her pen again, "She does not go with my permission."

Elizabeth ventured into deep water, cold water—water in which she must drown.

"And if I give her—mine?"

Mrs. Sheldon, impalpable glove lay upon them. Mrs. Sheldon picked it up disdainfully, with, as it were, the tips of her fingers.

"Then I, of course, have nothing to say. There will be no conflict of discipline. By all means, give your consent—if you think you're a fit person to judge.

The waters were closing around Elizabeth's head; they were very salt and bitter. She struggled free a moment and asked, "Pity my own child!"

"Ah, yes—exactly."

Elizabeth turned away, reached, somehow, the door.

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

In her own room Joyce waited, swinging her foot against the window seat, the sun on her dark hair, her blue eyes alert.

"You've sake diner?" Joyce questioned her mother.

"Yes—I——" She faltered, unwilling to confess failure, along the path of least resistance. She chose the retreat. "I—I don't think I'll go. It was a very nice house—both dear and there's plenty of time for house parties—don't be too disappointed."

Joyce nodded briefly, flung herself out of the room. Downstairs grandmother was part of her, of a decade, a generation. Elizabeth thought grandmother was old! Mother wasn't old, only—now her age—was uneven. Young enough to understand, young enough to be understood. Perhaps mothers never were, no matter how young they were, perhaps you had to stand on your own feet, get along by yourself, each of you. . . Grandmother, Mother, Joyce.

Elizabeth alone, thought miserably. . . she failed—the first time she's come to me, really. The trivial cause did not matter. She was in a mood to send her child into a dragon's cave. She demanded it—as a proof of the mother's omnipotence.

It was then, when Joyce was sixteen, that Elizabeth set out to win her secrets. Oh, they secretly indeed, for Louise must not know.

The girls that Betty Van Alstyne had brought to her in his man's hands were not that. She had refused to. They were gone from her. She was ceasing, impercipient, to remember. But love again she would not forget. Love, and jealousy, and quiet—all these she had to her. But love, and conquer, in secret.

She began to go to Joyce's room, at night, in the early morning. She began to go for casual walks at about the time the child would be returning from school. Walking thus, seeing her at a distance, the waiting heart would glimpse with a wistful tenderness. See, there she comes, little girl of lost, lovely as dark Elizabeth!

Joyce was a little shy of her, at first. She could not forget her mother's inadequacy, her defections But little by little ties began to weave between them. They liked the same books, the same sort of weather. They laughed at the same things. Elizabeth was wearing a roster mask, she was prettier—girls are proud of a pretty mother. And she would window-shop with Joyce by the hour. "Look, isn't that a lamb of a dress? Mother, couldn't you almost die for that bracelet? What would you choose if I told you you could have anything at all in that heavenly window?"

An illness kept Louise to her room for almost six weeks, an angry, grating rheumatic fever. She lay straightly in her bed and cast her mind back over the years, and ahead. What would happen to Joyce if she were to die?

But she would not die. She made up her mind to that. She was an uncommonly strong woman, and heart attacks that had troubled her earlier in her life had mysteriously ceased; she had not had one since —how long was it?—since Jim before Louise almost had died.

Died? He was not dead. He lived, in his child, her heir.

When she was up and about again it did not take long for the undercurrents to reach her. "Mother, look at that Mother, do you remember.....? Granny, when you were ill Mother and I ....."

Louise studied Elizabeth furtively. She thought to a surprise a look of triumph. Thought to recognize malice, to be sensible of a deliberate revenge.

Did the little fool think that she could rob Louise Sheldon Harris? Not again, never again, for this time Louise was armed.

In the fall—

"Grandmother, Billy Osborne's asked me to go up to Princeton for the game."

"How nice. You'll enjoy that. Who is taking you? Mrs. Osborne?"

"No, she's South. But I thought, perhaps, Mother. She said she'd go. All the boys are crazy about her, Granny. She's like a sister, and such fun."

Mrs. Sheldon made no comment as the moment. Later, she spoke to Elizabeth.

"You are thinking of going to Princeton with Joyce?"

"Yes," defiantly. "She wants me—"

"I see——"

A long pause .Then, "Tell her I will go in your place."

"But——"

"I could scarcely be mistaken for her sister," Mrs. Sheldon acknowledged, with a smile that had been refrigerated for some time. "Elizabeth, if there's anything I find distasteful it is the sight of a middle-aged woman making a fool of herself over a lot of young boys."

Elizabeth went crimson. There were no words for what she felt. So she said none. She looked at the elder woman, in desperation and in scorn.

Mrs. Sheldon continued, evenly.

"It is the fashion nowadays. But perhaps I misjudge you. However, you seem to have —blossomed out, quite remarkably, while I was ill Elizabeth."

Elizabeth turned on her; straightened her back against an invisible wall.

"You—you're trying to anger me," she accused, very low. "I won't mind myself—I'm used by believing that you mean what you said. You've given me other reasons not wanting me to go."

"And what is your reason for wanting to go?"

She could not answer and not betray herself.

"Joyce wants me."

"It's no doubt of it," Mrs. Sheldon mused; "the ideal chaperone for Joyce. Elizabeth, I misjudged. Perhaps, in other circumstances, she would not feel so sure of her judgment.

Words, words! Elizabeth moved her hands before her face, blindly, as if fighting away a cloud of them; they were gnats, stinging, swarming. She'd ask, she'd know, once and for all.

"You're trying to separate me from Joyce. You have always tried. You've almost succeeded. But not quite. She's mine, my own, my baby. All I have. You shan't take her. You love me. I'm her mother."

"Quite so——"

Mrs. Sheldon rose from her chair. She came quite close. She said, spacing the words, "If I have tried to separate her from you, as you put it, it has been for her own good. If I have tried to forget that you are her mother, that from you she has a certain inheritance, it is because I have thought—and still think—that I can safeguard her against it. She is of my blood, too, remember. I will permit her what there is breath in my body—from you. And if I cannot —I'll put the decision into her own hands——"

"You'd—tell—Joyce!"

The will was dissolving. Elizabeth felt the world spin around her. She had one hand to the mantelpiece, but she was very weary, too beaten. Her mother, who had been developing into the most delightful of pleasures had vanished. A door shut on a room empty of her. Joyce had been very badly let down.

NEW PICTURE AT BELLE PUTS MOTION BACK IN FILMS

A romance of the lo[g]ging camp, the first since some years, was combined with motion pictures, "Carnival Boat," at the Belle Theatre, today and Monday, matinee daily, proved to be an exciting and novel successor to Bill Boyd's previous picture, "Suicide Fleet."

Romance and comedy are set against some of the most thrilling and beautiful mountain scenic scenes the screen has ever shown, in the atmosphere of the logging camp and a river carnival showboat the love story of a young lumberman and a red-haired singer is told. Bill Boyd is seen as the young lumberman and Ginger Rogers plays "Honey."

Fast-moving action centres around the efforts of Boyd to deliver the logs to the mill before the ice goes out. Dramatic highlights are found when Bill rides across a log-ging high-line to reach a runaway locomotive on which his father is struggling to make defective brakes hold. The fight between Fred Kohler, as the villainous "Black Jack," and Boyd is so realistic that you forget they are in front of a camera and they race across a log jam with dynamite to break it free, the thrilling action is a breath-taking climax.

Loves Carnival Singer

The story concerns itself with the shortcomings of a young lumberjack man. He is in love with Ginger Rogers, a carnival boat singer, but his father attempts to separate them and persuade him to get down to business and settle a rift between them. Bill does not believe that life is at all serious until he sees his father on the runaway train and realizes the old man was racing down the mountain in an attempt to help.

Derby plaid trousers from the dis-tance and action portions of the pic-ture are a number of comedy moments hilariously done by Roger Imhof, ably as "Baldy" and Harry Sweet as the dumb Swede "Stubby."

Albert Hogell directed with fine judgment. In addition to those mentioned the cast also includes Robert Bosworth as Boyd's father and Mary Prevost in the role of "Babe," the showboat queen.

Youth prevails in the dramas of reckless young blood in "Young Bride," the second feature picture on the same program.

Heading the cast are four of the screen's most popular young play-ers. Helen Twelvetrees, the blonde beauty, who rose to fame in "Her Man" and "Millie," has the star-ring role. In the romantic lead opposite her is Eric Linden, young New York actor who made his debut who was hailed as a film find as the result of his work in "Strictly Dishonorable."

Arline Judge, youthful Broadway beauty and Polly Walters carry the other two screen roles, and are also supported by Roscoe "Stuttering" Ates, Cliff Edwards, Allan Fox and Blanche Friderici.

The popular Belle News Reel and a funny comedy are scheduled on the same program. The last complete double on Saturday and Monday will commence at 8.30 p.m.

PREMIER SAYS HECKLERS PUT WOMEN AWAY

Stormy Meetings Close West York Political Campaign

LIBERALS DIVIDED

"Swing to Left" Speech of Hepburn May Hurt His Cause

Toronto, May 28.—Facing the first meeting he had encountered in 30 years of public life "where he had to shout for the men drove women away," Premier George S. Henry of Toronto, walked to the front of his speaking platform last night and declared that the Liberal party faced in the final address of the West York by-election campaign "the choice" to the polls today to fill the vacancy in the Ontario legislature caused by the death of Dr. Forbes Godfrey.

The Premier rose to his feet only after the hecklers had howled down each speaker and made things unpleasant for three others as well as a much harassed chairman.

Declaring himself "ashamed of the bubbub and bedlam" which had characterized the most tumultuous campaign meeting, nor only of the by-election, but of his own entire political career, the Premier finally got down to the serious section of the audience to comparative attention.

Speech May Heal Rift.

"The Premier said there was talk within the Liberal party itself of a party convention. If Mitchell Hepburn should fail of re-election the suggestion is that a party convention rected the recent "swing to the left" speech of Hon. Mr. Hepburn, primary cause of defeat, with failure to eliminate the whole question date in the by-election or get behind him as the accepted leader.

"As the government's record, the Premier declared the administration had "nothing to fear." The specific pledge to carry on relief and to con-tribute to the unemployment fund in matter of relief.

"Not only that the Henry govern-ment could show only a record of increased debt and taxation, but the Premier said, "Liberal candidate wound up his campaign. He pledged the province's unemployment insurance, a short working day and public ownership of hydro power. He recommended Premier Henry had proven his inability to cope with the unem-ployment problem.

"The Liberal candidate is in tune with the government statement that Ontario was the lowest taxed prov-ince. "Actually," Mr. Liberal candidate, "$83,000,000 during the last two years and $40,000,000 has been properly charged to current account instead of to capital account as formerly, which has to be one of the heaviest taxed provinces."

The Premier said that if J. Buck-ley, told his meeting he considered the workers unemployed at the open-ing of the ways, it was a ques-tion whether they had the right to vote in the interests of the great majority.

Voters have a four-cornered con-test before them in addition to the polls today. Harry I. Price is at-tempting to carry on the Hepburn government; W. J. Gardhouse is Liberal candidate, John W. Buckley, Labor, and James M. Reid, Technical Labor.

DISCOVERY BY DR. COLLIP IS IMPORTANT

Elusive Element in Life Found By Former Belleviliian

CHILD BEARING

Next Problem to Secure Sufficient Quantities For Clinical Use

Ottawa May 28—Dr. J. B. Collip, of McGill University, Montreal, announced to the Royal Society of Canada here his discovery of a hormone in pure form. It was des-cribed as a great advance in the chemistry of life and was acclaim-ed by many biologists in attend-ance.

Isolation of this elusive element of life has been said to offer possi-bilities of a great boon to women in child bearing, and to increase in-telation to the pituitary and other ductless glands, the ovaries and the placenta. Thus the pituitary, ov-aries and placenta were intimately connected chemically was indic-ated, he said.

Master Gland of System

The pituitary gland, he explained is the master gland of the whole hor-mone system, and the secretion of the pituitary affects other of the glands functions, responsible for the main-tenance of the body's chemical activities of the ovaries.

During the course of each cycle the ovaries add, and remove, a chemical substance, described as another hormone, which controls the reproduc-tive of the accessory genital tract and the mammary glands of the body.

When pregnancy occurs, Dr. Col-lip said, the ovarian cycle ceases, and during the period the placenta takes over the function with the anterior pituitary-like hormone substance which has just been isolated in its pure form.

Accumulation Next Problem

It is understood that the next problem to be solved is the accumula-tion of this hormone in its pure form in sufficient quantities to make it ac-cessible to physicians in treating various disorders of women. The previous announcements of the pro-gress made by Dr. Collip and his as-sociates at McGill in the isla-tion of this hormone, it was stated would be of great value in the treat-ment of sterility, and in the more effi-cient quantities it would result in the production of more and larger corpus luteum connected with child bearing and the change of life.

CALL DUQUESNE DANGEROUS MAN

Said to Have Been Agent of Central Powers

LONDON, May 27.—The Home Office has under consideration an application for the deportation from New York a man listed by the police here as Captain Frederick Joseph Duquesne and described as the former German secret service agent of the Central Powers during the war.

It was explained officially that, contrary to some reports, Duquesne is not regarded here as having been connected in any way with the loss of the British battleship Hawke, in which Lord Kitchener was drowned.

If extradition proceedings are taken against Duquesne they will be on charges arising from his activities in connection with the plots to bring the man back to face a charge of murder. The murder charge was the death of three seamen in an explo-sion on the British steamship Fred Tennyson off the coast of Brazil more than 15 years ago.

WHITE COLLARS

The changing styles in keeping with the newer methods of the world, have printed indelibly in the minds of the present generation of children thoughts which you never had when you were a child.

The days when every boy dreamed of the day he became an engineer, a fireman, a hunter or trapper or a mounted policeman, have passed and in a dozen cases a dozen modern ideas, and in their wake come ambitions which the modern boasting children of today will go to say he aspires to attain.

Out of dozens of children and par-ents who have been questioned as to what they want to be when they grow up and leave school one half of them have answered questioning of a staff reporter on the Ontario Intelligencer, that an ambition to be at some time the pilot of a transport plane; if they can't be that then they want to work around the hangars on the aerodromes.

Other Jobs

The remainder have sub-divided themselves into other occupations, all savoring of the new and the new modern world in which they live. Some of them want to be radio announcers, and have been with China, not to trade alone, but pa-cific relations. Hon. Vincent Massey, Canadian Ambassador to Great Britain believes the move would be an admirable one. The society to promote both Canadian and Chin-ese members.

"It has been found that when influenza until we are sure it is not a cold, as a disease much more serious than we think, and it is a much neglected disease."

KNOWS JOB

Big Cheeses and Big Meat Joints Not Needed Today

YEOVIL, Somerset, Eng., May 28 —The Prince of Wales, who has been a farm for almost twenty years, sold an audience of farmers at the county fair yesterday that they were behind the times.

"We farmers must study our mar-kets," he said.

"A couple of cutlets for mother has replaced the great joints of beef and mutton which were in evidence at Sunday dinner in the days of our fathers. His home farm is about 350 acres, on the Sandringham estate, built up his famous short-horned herd at Floke Climisland, but transferred it to the old Alta Wil-kinson farm in Nottinghamshire two years ago. How Dare Amnand, his farm manager, concentrates on Devon cattle. Lord numbers are seventy, including thirty cows in milk. The Prince hopes one of his Devon heifers will head her class at the fair.

His farm follows up the diversi-fied plan with a flock of about 200 sheep, a dairy herd of commercial lines. Poultry runs on a free range, as well as pigs.

MAGICIANS IN FOOLING MOOD

Have Laugh on One of Their Number as They Hide Scarfs

DETROIT, Mich., May 30.—The spectacle of magicians being fooled by other magicians entertained common folks who make up the audience today at the meeting of Assembly 31 as Magicians held their annual convention here.

One of the victims was Walter Domaskati, sleight of hand artist, who presented his "magic tube" in which he produced scores of colored scarfs from practically nowhere. In the audience were several magicians in their own right.

"Do it, Walter," called an observer.

Outsiders Laugh

Resisting confidently into the tube, Domaskati suddenly looked bewildered, then crestfallen.

"Hey," he said, "who swiped my scarfs?"

"Look in your hip pocket," called someone from the audience.

As bewildered as they member of the audience, Magician Domaskati reached in the pocket—and drew forth scarf after scarf, while the common folks cheered.

LOSES HOUSE AND CONTENTS

Loss to Mrs. Yorke Heavy as No Insurance is Carried

Fire of an unknown origin completely destroyed the home of Mrs. Eliza Yorke, nine miles north of Tweed early this morning. It is thought that the blaze started from defective stove pipes, although nothing authentic could be learned as to the real origin of the fire.

Early this morning Mrs. Yorke and her son were awakened to find the house in a complete mass of flames. Every assistance could be summoned soon enough to keep the fire within bounds, and burnt to the ground.

Both buildings and their contents were a complete loss as Mrs. Yorke did not carry insurance on the buildings or their contents. Insurance had been carried for a number of years but Mrs. Yorke discontinued her insurance some days ago and everything in the fire was a complete loss to the family.

Bi-Lingualism in Canada is Varsity Conference Theme

Ottawa, May 30.—(CP)—Some of the work of Canadian Universities, aimed at making Canada a truly bilingual country, was described at the opening session today of the 12th biennial meeting of the National Conference of Canadian Universities. The conference opened under the chairmanship of the president, Dr. W. Sherwood Fox of the University of Western Ontario, with a full attendance of delegates. Presidents of universities from coast to coast and other representatives brought the registration at noon to thirty-one.

The subject of the first session was "modern language teaching," and dealt almost entirely with the teaching of French in English universities and the teaching of English in French-speaking universities.

Miss Alexandre Vinet, representing Laval University, substituted at short notice for Dr. Walter Long who was to have represented Laval, made some interesting comments upon the methods used and the success achieved in teaching English. He observed that practically every Quebec member of the House of Commons could express himself adequately in the English language, and that every could speak with equal facility in either language.

CHANCELLOR AND CABINET QUIT POSTS

Hindenburg May Name Successor Free From Nationalists

COURT RULING

Material Seized in Raids of March 17th Not Incriminating

Berlin, May 30.—(AP)—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and the members of his cabinet resigned today and the resignations were accepted by President Paul von Hindenburg.

The sterb, hard-fisted Chancellor, combination of soldier and statesman who in the little more than two years he has been in office has guided the German republic through unprecedented storms and a financial era of collapse, finally lost an uphill fight against growing nationalism and dissatisfaction with government by emergency degrees.

No Socialist Named.

As far as the mind of President von Hindenburg was known today he leans towards the appointment of a new chancellor from the Nationalist, but not the National Socialist ranks, a cabinet whose first duty it will be to weather the coming Lausanne conference on reparations.

After the return of the delegation from Lausanne, the new cabinet will have to face the Reichstag, which will probably be dissolved. New elections would then have to be held which might well sweep Hitler into power.

Works on Farm for Board Though Willing to Pay $5 Week to Save City Living

A young man walked up to a farmer Saturday morning on the south east corner of the market. He was a discouraged looking young man, and there was a determined air on his face. He wore a soldier's overseas button in his lapel.

"Mister," he began to the farmer, "I've tried a dozen here on this market this morning for a job on a farm for the summer. They all say they don't need any help. I've even offered to work for nothing, but still they refuse me a job. You see I've never done any work on a farm, and when I tell them that they lose all interest. But I'm willing to learn and if I get a job I'll do my share of any work there is to do. Now I'm willing to pay myself to you for the summer—and work for nothing."

The farmer addressed straightened up from the task of arranging some garden produce and eyed the young man before him.

"Son, I don't need a man any more than one of my old heifers needs an extra tail. I can't even afford to keep one—"

"Then," countered the young man, "if you can't afford to keep one, but you still would like to have a man around the farm to do odd jobs I'll pay you $5 a week to work for you. I can see it's like this—I get a small monthly pension but it's hardly enough to keep me going. In the city here it costs me about $15 a week to live. If I can pay you five dollars a week for board and let me help you work, then I'll be that much ahead."

The young man got the job, and goes to work for his board.

Voluntary Workers Favored as Buffer in Operation

Ottawa, May 30 (By The Canadian Press) — Regret that a salaried commission was to be appointed to conduct Canada's proposed new radio broadcasting system, was expressed today by officials of the Canadian Radio League which organization was largely instrumental in the presentation to the parliamentary committee of the basis for the radio policy adopted at the session just concluded.

It had been felt by the league that the commission should be composed of voluntary workers "third ensuring greater freedom from political interference and constituting a buffer between the government and the operating organization."

TOURIST TRAFFIC IS STILL HEAVY

Present state of times have had no appreciable effect on the number of tourists, who have entered the city this season. According to Mr. Sidney Nelson, caretaker of the city camp, the registration of the tourists this year so far at the camp on Bridge Street is about as heavy to date as it has been in other years with indications that the steady stream will continue. So far since the season opened there have been sixteen registrations in the book at the camp kept for that purpose, the first party to avail themselves of the facilities of the camp was in charge of Mr. H. Smith, 50 Shields Avenue, Toronto. Other registrations to complete the first five, who have entered the camp were, Mr. J. Braithwaite, Peterborough; Mr. Harry Carson, Smith's Falls; Mr. Harold Norton, Thomasburg; and Mr. A. Booth, 183 Parker Avenue, Toronto. Another tourist even, who have signed their names in the party to have inspected the fair when so far was one party from Flint, Michigan.

City Hall tourists stations report a great increase of business owing to the fact, that tourists are beginning to go through.

NO COMPLAINTS AGAINST CORN ACT

This year there has been a noticeable decrease of complaints received regarding the Corn Storer Act, according to Mr. Hope McClinchie, Provincial Inspector and Corn Borer Inspector for the city. Although a few complaints have been received at the office these have be disposed of immediately declared Mr. McClinchi, and only a warning sufficient for the owners of the small plots to clean their property up.

The reason for the decrease of complaints this year is accounted for by Mr. McClinchie by the fact, that very few residents of the city this year are planting corn. It can be bought on the market and in the stores cheaper than it can be planted and cared for, is the general opinion of many people and very few of them are taking the trouble to plant the succelent vegetable.

On his way to Sunday School just before two o'clock yesterday afternoon seven-year-old Norman Wilkes of this city narrowly escaped severe injuries when he was knocked to the pavement on upper Station Street, near the North Station, by a motor car, the driver of which apparently did not observe the lad, who stepped in front of the machine as it approached. Fortunately the machine which was not travelling very fast was able to stop at the moment of impact and the fender of the car merely brushed the boy to the ground. No bruises or cuts were sustained by the boy and he was able to continue on after the driver of the car had helped him to brush off his clothing.

The machine bore a Quebec license plate.

WANT TRAFFIC SIGNALS.

St. Thomas, May 30.—A request has been made to the city council by the Women's Institute for a safety march for action in having traffic signals, or other protection, at the intersection of King's Highway No. 4 and the Pitgad Road in the city. The women, in a letter received by Mayor Jagoe Saturday, suggested that the city co-operate with the Ontario Department of Highways in improving this dangerous intersection. Members of the City Council decided two years ago that it was not dangerous enough to necessitate the construction of a subway or the erection of traffic lights.

YOUR EYES

CHILDREN STARTED on the road to success must have every handicap removed. Above all things don't let eyestrain hinder them. And it DOES hinder many children. Every school has its ill children who if they received proper eye help would advance much faster. Parents, consider if there is a possibility that YOUR children might be helped by a modern eye service.

SPEAKS IN AID OF BLIND FUND

Mr. H. C. Treneer Also Plays Organ and Sings at Bridge St. U. C.

Herbert C. Treneer, former organist at Bridge Street United Church, Trenton, represented the National Institute for the Blind at a meeting held at Bridge Street United Church on Sunday evening after morning and evening services when numbers on the organ which were appreciated by the large congregations assembled from all the churches and sang "The Publican" and "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say" in a vibrant tenor voice which thrilled his hearers.

Speaking in aid of the institute for the blind campaign here he explained the early history of the care of the blind, the present training for occupations and the educational facilities available of the blind. One person in a thousand is blind, he said.

Mr. Treneer noted the instances of blind persons who had made remarkable success in education, in the law, medicine, the church, public life and the press, but the average blind person found it difficult to make ends meet earnings.

The aims of the institute are to help the blind in economic problems of the blind in part, by operation of factories, by the employment of blind in motor and steel plants, by establishment of the afflicted in business, by instruction (and even with this many are unable to do anything towards their living); to add comforts of life and instruct in housekeeping, and to preserve their initiative; and to prevent blindness through sanitary measures and through advice to keep sharp-in-struments away from children.

Rev. Dr. Bell thanked Mr. Treneer for his address, and the musical part of the program. Mr. Treneer is himself blind.

SUMMER HOMES ARE RANSACKED

C. M. Reid's Cottage at Weslemkoon Lake Entered

Saturday, May C. M. Reid of this city received a telephone message from Harvey Gunter, the well known guide, fishermen and trapper of Weslemkoon Lake, that his summer home at the lake resort had been broken into. Mr. Reid left at once to make an investigation and upon arrival at the cottage he found the rooms in great disorder. Closets and trunks had been forced open and the contents scattered about; the bedding had been thrown about the rooms. As far as could be learned from checking up Mr. Reid made nothing was taken. The unlikely barred boat house had also been forced open and an attempt made to operate a small motor launch. In this the marauders were unsuccessful and a pair of oars were used, which were found broken in the boat, which had been forced into the boat house. Nothing was found missing in the boat house.

The summer homes of Mr. Grubb of Pittsburg, Pa., Mr. R. T. Paton, President o' the T. Eaton Co., Toronto and the cottage of Mr. Corby came have also been broken into, but no information is available as to articles stolen if any.

The matter is being investigated by the Belleville District Office of the Ontario Provincial Police.

Benefits Factory Worker

With nearly 125,000 unemployed citizens in Ontario, it is obvious that an increase in the purchase of Ontario's factory products is vitally necessary. To inspire Ontario citizens with the idea of buying more produced-in-Ontario goods we have enlisted the co-operation of Ontario manufacturers in "Ontario Week at A & P". Their co-operation makes this event possible. It needs the purchase of YOU—and Ontario citizens generally—to crown this effort with success.

Farmer

The prosperity of our cities and towns depends upon the farmer. Ontario Week at "A & P" is organized to focus the attention of Ontario people on the high quality of Ontario's farm products and to stimulate the purchase of them throughout the Province. If the farmer can sell his products, he will be able to buy the products of Ontario's factories. Buy Ontario farm products and help beat the depression.

YOU—the Consumer

174 "A & P" Stores stand ready filled with Ontario products from farm and factory. Carload after carload of fresh, high quality merchandise awaits your selection. Prices make values that invite and justify generous buying. Stock your pantry shelves. Study the prices quoted and avail yourself of the opportunity—to save money while helping along a Province-wide plan to "make more work".

THE COMING CONFERENCE

British papers are stressing the forthcoming conference which is to be held at Ottawa beginning July 21st when all parts of the Empire will be brought together by delegates. The binding force is the unusual world conditions under which the conversations are being held. It is no wonder that all eyes are turned towards Ottawa, not only the eyes of the Empire but of the whole world.

OPEN BOOKS

The man on the street is the open book that people read today, remarked the Rev. G. G. Wright at Christ Church on Sunday evening. It is not only the merchant but it is everyone who is under gaze.

The rector had been stating that reading of the Bible was not so general as it was in the days of our grandfathers, but man and woman are being read today as to their real value or the shams of their lives.

The present age is very practical and is not tardy in voicing its hatred of sham. This outspokenness has increased since the war and the rising generation has again and again been mentioned for its directness and even bluntness. It may even be blunt where there is no need of so great directness.

While the man who reads another on the street may through his own personality appear to be prejudiced because he sees everything through his own eyes and his own colored glasses, yet the open book of people generally and in the long run catch a gleam of true values. As in the drama, Justice may prevail.

But the open book is being read, he is also exerting an influence. And there lies his responsibility. He must try to be good and not indifferent for what people think of him, for it would be a sad world if everybody was brazen.

How ideals in the mass may go awry for a time is seen in the unrestrained optimism of the period which ended with the collapse of commodity prices and securities in the year 1929. Gradually a new sense of values is growing which is going to mould legislation so as to correct some of the conditions which today are a blot. Movements become legislation when the common consciousness and the sense of values have become set.

Because of the long run men and women have fairly accurate ideas about how they should live, it does become the individual to have his book and slate as clean and as true that the passerby can see that in him is no guile.

MIGRATION

New York Times refers to the return of emigrants to Great Britain in the past year and draws the inference that the settling of a country by immigration is not so speedy an undertaking after all. It says:

"Last year less than 18,000 persons left Great Britain for a chance of bettering themselves in the dominions, while more than 38,000 persons came from the dominions to the old country, mostly to Great Britain. Canada took less than 8,000 immigrants and sent back nearly 18,000. This was a striking change over 1930, ending when 1930 Canada took 31,000 immigrants and sent to England less than 16,000. Apparently, she received more than she was expecting—and not a little of that, economic conditions in 1931 changed for the worse.

"The simple remedy of moving large bodies of people from the cities to the land is not so simple as it sounds. Here at home it seems to be agreed that there has been a heavy drift back from the cities to the farm. But it is a much easier enterprise for the country lad who has moved into town to go back to the old home where things improve in the city than it is for a city-bred worker to find food and shelter overseas, particularly when he is considered only the business of colonizing a country does not move forward at lightning speed."

PATHWAYS

Oshawa Times joins in the argument in favor of pathways:

"A few days ago the daily newspapers carried a despatch from Prescott telling of the running down of a school child on a public road by a motor vehicle. The child was fatally injured. The child, along with others, was returning home from school at the time. It is hoped that the tragic accident would in all probability not have occurred. It must be admitted that accidents of the kind are not uncommon in Ontario, perhaps because of the alertness of the children. With sight and hearing good, and with parents urging upon them the need of caution they have many dangers without getting hurt, but there is always the risk of being run down. Pathways, says the Renfrew Mercury—and we agree—along the fences are urgently needed, not only for school children but for older people."

She: In nearly thirty years of married life we've only had one quarrel.

He: That's right—and you must admit it has been interrupted occasionally.

HAND IN HAND

By Aline Michaelis

Of all the griefs by which the heart is torn,
Of all the loss and stain,
No anguish is too weighty to be borne
When two can share the pain.

There is no gleam too far,
No night too dark
For eager eyes to see,
When two together seek, hope's golden spark
Through care's obscurity.

Each rosebud grows the fairer, and each song
Of lark and thrush more clear,
When through life's gardens two can pass along
Through joyous year on year.

The human heart is such a happy thing,
So tranquil and elate,
That all the vexing goads must lose their sting
When it has found its mate.

We can defy life's bleakest wintry gale,
Life's fiercest desert wind;
Before no stress of circumstance we quail,
When two go hand in hand.

WHY ENGLISH "BEST SELLERS" take so many words to tell a simple story and why so many people take time to read them is a mystery to readers over here who like their—literature snappy—and have the human interest and few words. Perhaps English readers have more time and a keener appreciation of local color and familiarity with the scene and characters depicted, but the average English "Best Seller" is wearisome to the Canadian reader, as a rule. Occasionally one is interesting, but too strung out; while Warwick Deeping, who made a big hit with "Sorrel and Son," is not the only one but he is the best example of that interesting story in his later attempts, and his stories all suffer, in my opinion, from too-much tellcolors being red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet, and

There are also other color radiations not visible to the naked eye. These extend beyond both limits of the spectrum at each end, and that is how we have discovered what also called infra-red) and ultra violet (ultra-violet) rays, and wonderful. And these colors just beyond the spectrum, which we cannot see, have other, possess special stimulating qualities for human beings.

The ultra-red and ultra-violet rays are responsible for the remarkable changes in the skin when the body is exposed to them. These beneficial changes not only have an immediate effect, but they last for days and days, days at a time, or until another exposure is given.

Natural sunlight even does not contain all of the ultra-violet rays that comes from the carbons put in the ultra-violet lamps. That is why we get ultra-violet rays and ultra-red rays in the lamps generated form. Therefore use of these lamps is necessary in the winter when not in the sunlight. Modern science has made it possible to use of lamps rays that will make us practically sun proof, and satisfy special needs, and then the individual can be fully and perfectly suited to the individual requirements.

But summer is on its way, when everybody can have all the sunlight. Even if natural say rays are not quite so healthy as lamp rays, there is nothing to do. Sunburn must be guarded against. Sunburn makes the skin only does damage, and accomplishes no good whatever.

Backwardness in children may be caused by such physical defects as adenoids, defective hearing, defective vision, faulty digestion, etc. On the other hand, it may sometimes be purely a psychological one, the child requiring a mental test and diagnosis.

LITTLE ROADS.

I love the little winding roads
That lead just anywhere
Through pastures, woods—which hide surprises everywhere.

I love the little paths that wind
And curve, and dip and bend,
That lure me on to unknown promises
And nowhere seem to end.

The little paths that run and hide,
Then spring out gaily again
All laugh, in playful mood, they seem to say
Play hide-and-seek with me.

Byways, through leafy solitudes,
Always my feet enamour.
They seem to whisper, come away
And leave behind dull care."

The quiet ways and vagrant paths
Where woodland flowers nod,
And all the little happy roads
That lead one close to God.

SPECIAL RAYS AND SUN BOON TO MANKIND

Natural Sunlight and Ultra-Violet Rays

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

You have heard the words, of the healing qualities of the sun's rays. You may also have learned that regular sunbaths bring into existence those substances that expose themselves daily to the sun, entering a field of clothing.

Sunlight rays appreciated. Ancient tribes and races knew that the sun's heat and light and made their crops grow, and that without it not only plants but animals, as well, were doomed to die. It is not difficult to understand, why the sun was often worshipped as a god.

But our primitive ancestors could not have known very much about the effects of sunlight upon the human body or of its healing qualities, especially those which might be summarized under the heading of sunbaths.

Perhaps it was Mother Eve, our mother known, however, by instinct that to keep her baby in the sun as much as possible makes him grow, keeps him healthy; that the sun is the thing to wait upon and that the baby's cheeks become more and more becoming color.

Although Mother Eve's advice is undoubtedly out-of-doors, it is not, of course, the only way to employ sunlight in like measure. That can be done in the city, too, but there can be no question. Each and every one of us should endeavor to manage somehow to expose ourselves to the sun and sunlight as often as we do.

The fact is it may, it has long been evident that if a supply of sunshine could be obtained conveniently, especially in the house and at night, it would be a great boon to mankind—and that's exactly what has now been accomplished. Through various types of ingenious lamps we can now obtain the beneficial rays to be found in sunlight, and employing them in accordance with scientific knowledge.

If a beam of ordinary white light is allowed to pass through a wedge-shaped piece of glass it has been found that it will be broken up into its component parts of the spectrum. These are red, orange, yellow, green, blue and violet.

EYES ON OTTAWA.

Under the heading, "All Eyes on Ottawa," messages are printed from the several Dominions. Premier Bennett extends to the people of Australia the cordial and friendly greetings of the Dominion of Canada and declares that he finds it singularly fitting that amid world-wide depression the five communities that comprise the British Commonwealth should unite their efforts to restore a return of prosperity to a quarter of the world's population, thereby demonstrating that it is capable of realizing the ideal of each for all and all for each." The Hon. J. A. Lyons, Prime Minister of Australia, expresses a belief that the best purpose on an Imperial basis and by the economic use of Imperial resources in the interests of the British peoples as a whole, "we shall most satisfactorily meet the call of our present troubles"; and New Zealand's Premier, the Hon. G. W. Forbes, too is convinced that at no time since the formation of the Empire has there been more urgent need for the development of the spirit of mutual loyalty, [illegible] Government to co-operate in the adoption of reciprocal advantageous proposals designed to foster the intra-Imperial trade. The Hon. E. G. Smith writes that he hopes, and the whole of South Africa hopes, that the possible means will be explored at Ottawa to make the most of a wonderful opportunity for the benefit of our own and all other countries of the Empire."—Montreal Gazette.

MANNERS.

High spirits prevail—and should prevail—in young people, especially in the graduating classes, but the general society of their fellows; but high spirits are not to be accepted for bad behavior. If young men only realized it, they are in no position they made on others by their boisterous conduct when they quickly estrange their way. Rudeness is never funny; and rudeness of the kind described is the result of plain cruelty. Nothing that inflicts hardship or discomfort on others is amusing. Any person with any pretense at all to being educated knows the good nonsense of this kind. One of the first purposes of education is to form manners, to make one unselfish, sympathetic, considerate, kind. It should not be necessary to rely upon the schools and universities to teach these elementary notions of polite behavior. Whether it is fair, perhaps, to blame the educational system when failure occurs. Character, and not the school, is to blame; and character is largely of our own making, apart from our scholastic accomplishments.—Hamilton Spectator.

DEGREES AND DIPLOMAS.

With cap-and-gown month but a little of the calendar past away, the school problems soon will hold the attention especially of many a home forum. And foremost among these problems, apart from our scholastic accomplishments, shall be that of the new graduate, "Shall I go to high school, to college, to technical school, to college, to graduate school. Financial conditions will preclude many from any education for many, but probably that number is not so large as it can be supposed. Loans, part-time employment, and night schools may help some. Made to provide the way where there is a will.

Certainly if it is humanly possible young people should plan to continue their training. Even were the times normal, the increased working periods of adults that a longer training period implies, would make the early participation of youth in business less socially desirable than in the days of the grandfather. Today, with unemployment widespread, the necessity of a longer training period for young men and young women is apparent.

That a community may displace the educational bankruptcy by the problem with a clearly defined understanding of the issues at stake is demonstrating of the Georgia. There the business and professional men, whenever possible associate themselves with educational authorities in a campaign of educational campaign. The question was brought squarely to the attention of practically every citizen of the state. The result was that high-school enrollment for the current year increased by 12 per cent. over that of last year.—Oshawa Times.

ADVERTISING for the MERCHANT of TO-DAY

Conducted by HAROLD B. EDGAR

A weekly articles on advertising and merchandising prepared by the advertising department of Belleville with the co-operation of The Ontario Intelligencer.

ARTICLE NO. 12

GOOD SALESMANSHIP

Good salesmanship is part knowledge of your goods and part knowledge of your customers — some may require a lot of talk but-time times out of ten the best salesmen are those who do most listening. Avoid technical language, giving the customer a chance to talk — to ask questions. Sales are lost by over-selling as well as under-selling.

A few days ago I started to look for a washing machine and as a few stores as I could conveniently visit. Two items would be around $100.00. Before purchasing, prompted me to note the attention paid by the salesman in the various outlets.

First call was made at a furniture store room. I was interested in one particular model of a widely advertised machine. The regular salesman in this department was busy but one of the women on the ladies wear staff was free. This staff, because she was not familiar with the machine.

This pointed up the necessity of having every member of your staff study the products sold and know how to demonstrate them on the customer's time. Many times when the regular demonstrators are rushed, and it will be necessary to transfer salesmen from one department to another. They have to look into the another department. They have to look into the breach.

Before leaving the store I asked for some literature describing the machines. After several minutes of searching, the only folder they could find was one in French and even that was soiled.

Make sure that there is a sufficient quantity of your manufacturer's sale's literature on hand. Keep them where you can get them easily. A display card is unnecessary if you can get them easily. A display card is unnecessary if you keeping literature handy.

The next call was at the branch office of another well known line. The salesman was his reading the wording of a display card telling the features of this machine. The window display card telling the features of this machine. The salesman was his reading the wording of a display card telling the features of this machine. The salesman was his reading the wording of a display card telling the features of this machine. The salesman was his reading the wording of a

HOMERS GALORE

Most of Games Decided By Four-Ply Swats at Right Time

The pernicious habit of splitting doubleheaders has been a contributing cause to the downfall of many a team that could win the greater part of its single bills, but so far as the current International League season is concerned, it seems necessary to have added to the cloeeness of the existing race just the kink.

All eight of the circuit's clubs engaged in twin bills yesterday and any one of the nine contests that could have won both games would have taken a gigantic step toward the lay all failed, however, and wound up just where they started.

Baltimore and Buffalo, tied for first place, suffered identical consequences of that second game letdown. Each team won its first game, the Bisons by batting their string of victories to six straight by downing Rochester 6-2 and the Baltimore Orioles pounding Jersey City for a 14-8 triumph. Then both clubs came around and lost a heartbreaker in the second half of the programme.

After pounding out 15 hits, including four homers in the opener, the Orioles could get only seven hits off Gordon Rhem, who pitched shortened to six innings to allow the Birds to get in a full day's work, although they made the most of their blows and Evans Adair in the second four-ply wallop of the day and his fifth of the season, the Skeeters won 10-4.

Red Second Game Win

Buffalo's second game all but won in the final inning but Jack Wilson's single with the sun and Rochester came thru' with three runs, two of them on Bisons fumbled a good supply of home runs to address Ethel Shutt, Buck Crouse and Bubbles Hargrave, the two latter getting a two and Ollie Carnegie smacked one in each game to equal Baltimore's total of six homers.

Art Smith of the Toronto Leafs, had his control on Montreal by pitching a three hit shutout, his second straight over his former club, while Toronto hammered out an 11-0 victory in the second game. The Royals had won the first 8-4, when relief pitcher Clarence Mitchell came home to his winning run in the eighth.

Newark had things all its own way against Jersey City when Al Keys in the opener, winning 7-1 with seven hits, limited Walter Welsh's good mound work. But in the second contest Darrell Vyhlen and Vince Barton turned the tables. Vyhlen held the Bears with three hits in tan innings, while Barton made the fourth hit of Harry Rolfe's career good for the circuit and slammed a drive out of the lot for a home run.

Saturday's Games

Saturday's results in the International was confined to three games, the Rochester-Buffalo argument being washed out by rain. The Royals kept up their hitting with Frank Barnes' fine pitching with a ninth inning 3-1 win over the Montreal Royals at Walter Hayes Park on the firing line. Jersey City bowed to Harry Smythe's Baltimore for the Baltimore Orioles, and the Reading Keys gained a 10-inning victory over Newark.

CARRYING PLACE SCORE FIRST WIN

Defeat Concession 19 to 15 Who Have Yet to Win

Carrying Place, May 30 (Special)—Tuesday evening saw Carrying Place score their first win of the season over Concession 1, by a score of 19-15. The game was played at the ground in large open spaces of enthusiastic fans, and the collection for the game totalled about eight dollars. Play was inclined to be ragged, but there was a very noticeable difference between present performances and those of the first few games. Batting was on the part of pitchers for both teams had their share of loaded in the early stages of the game, but Norman Gay for Carrying Place got steadied down after several innings and won his game with ease. Low, On two occasions he succeeded in striking out the batter with two outs and men on, both teams tried hard to win as neither had scored in the previous inning. No long hits were registered, but most of the hits were singles, as a result of short flies over the infield. Carrying Place will play again against Victoria at Victoria on Thursday evening next week.

CURRENT SPORT

Knocks and Boosts

Wednesday's race meet seems to be the outstanding feature event, when the Belleville Agricultural Society are staging their annual harness meet at the Fair Grounds. According to reports from Secretary Dick Ketcheson's office such classy horses will have a fast six started with the probability that some of the classes expect as high as nine horses to face the barrier.

Louis Bennett, who is training his horses in Belleville this spring had his favorite horse St. Charles out yesterday morning and we were privileged to see Mr. Bennett chase the big chestnut for one of the fastest miles seen in Belleville this season. Mr. St. Charles has a mark of .06 1-4 and well the big chestnut exemplified his ability on the stretch yesterday morning. He was clocked unofficially, of taking a mile in :11 so some of the outsiders horses will have to step along if they expect to head the chestnut on Wednesday afternoon.

To date there have been 19 horses owners signifying their intention of coming to Belleville after the "big money" on the race list. Indications are all indications of a real treat for race horse lovers.

On Wednesday evening the Belleville Ladies softball keep gets under way when the Clarke Road Ladies team meet the National Maids in the opening game of the season. We were informed on Saturday that the Armourettes will likely be played on the Armouries lawn again this year, although as yet no arrangements have not been sanctioned by head officials.

On Tuesday evening the league leading B.A.A.A. juniors entertain the Wellington juniors when Manager Cliff Mowat's entry play their initial game of the season. The Belleville kids were out to practise under the watchful eye of their manager, Herbie Morris, on Saturday afternoon and are all ready to "go" as Herbie says. Following this game the Wellington juniors meet in practise while the Nationals go out on Monday for their initial nights of this week. Manager Jones is also planning a couple of changes for the Nats before the take the field against the Pemies on Friday down in Kingston

The Men's Senior Softball loop also gets under way on Tuesday night when all eight clubs meet in the City at the diamonds. Cornell's go to Point Anne while the Ontario Intelligencer team battle the Class

Plenty of sport is on the boards for the fans this week-end. The Wheat St. Debating team play the Hamlen team at the Cricket Field while the Hovers battle the Black Squirrels at Ann St. School grounds. In the other men's loop in the city the Firemen and the Expressmen battle at Queen Mary Grounds.

There was not much interest shown at the meeting called for the purpose of talking over the proposed golf tournament in Belleville at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday night. Those interested in the sport, however, are going to sponsor the game among the local boys of the city. As there are four troops in Belleville they are planning on organizing a league among them. The plans are not definite in a big way in other centres but it looks as though the local aspirants are willing to "Let George do it." Well if the players are not interested enough to attend a meeting then the project will be shelved in favor of the younger and more interested players in the city.

The Napanee Gilbarde, backed by Manager Ed Gilbard and Doug Fraser, started off their current season with a bang right foot when they trimmed the Odessa team by the score of 8 to 3 on Saturday. Manager Gerow and Gilbard must have gathered together what looks like another league pennant winner. They have made a number of changes all of which look for the best.

If they can get the franchise made vacant by the Point Anne league entrants and get the local junior loop, there is another junior baseball club in the making in Belleville. The rejuvenation of baseball is assured and with the many younger sporting element taking hold and are willing to step in and battle with teams that have been successful in the past season. Like hockey, the present junior players are the rookies and professionals of tomorrow and we therefore welcome any new juvenile sporting organization with open arms at all times.

According to reports the Cobourg senior team should have taken the measure of the Champion Bellevilles right in their own back yard on Saturday afternoon. The former Town" boys had it on the Peoples baseball organization leading them until the fatal eighth inning when they got that "bay wire and the homesters scored three runs to win the game by the score of 4 to 3. Trey Hoy was on the hill-top for the Cobourg team and for the Kingsolanas at his mercy until his team "blew up" in the eighth.

BILLY ARNOLD IS FAVORITE

500 Mile Motor Race Will Be Witnessed By Large Crowd

By CHARLES DUNKLEY,
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Indianapolis, Ind., May 30—Forty daring drivers, with more at stake than steel, awaited the start of the twenty-fifth international automobile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway today, with the prospect that more than 150,000 spectators would witness the death defying battle for prizes of $100,000.

The race promised to be the fastest and the most dangerous in the history of the classic. Two men were killed in the record establishing qualifying tests and their survivors feared for their lives in scores of the cars over the perilous 2½ mile brick course.

Only a moderate degree of luck and favorable weather conditions, the winner of today's race figured to break the track record of 101.13 miles per hour established by Peter de Paolo in 1925.. Lou Moore of Hollywood, Cal., who finished second to de Paolo in the coveted number one position as the result of the fastest qualifying car lineup of the qualifying test at the rate of 117.363 miles an hour, the first forty drivers qualified at speeds averaging more than one hour to the average made by Moore.

Billy Arnold Favorite

Louie Schneider, Indianapolis-Pontiac, winner of the 1931 race at the rate of 96.629 miles an hour, Schneider with Billy Arnold, 24-year-old Chicagoan who won the 1930 race, remained the favorites with the crowd to triumph today. All the drivers are Americans with the exception of Juan Chaulino from Buenos Aires, Argentine.

Crowning the finishing line first, the fastest and all in one piece is the object of the daring drivers to win first prize of $25,000. The fastest car is far from assurance of victory. A year ago Arnold led the race for 465 miles, and then had the misfortune to break an axle which sent his car crashing into a retaining wall. He spent six months in a hospital, but is back today in his same old car determined to repeat his triumph of 1930.

CHICAGO CUBS BROKE PIRATE WIN STREAK

Dazzy Vance Helps Himself to a Real Win

ALL SPLIT

Apparently National League Teams Are Evenly Matched

(By The Associated Press)

Dazzy Vance finally has won himself a ball game from the Boston Braves, perhaps because Bill McKechnie so far has forgot himself as to start someone besides young Bob Brown against the veteran speedball artist of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The dazzler, beaten twice by the Braves with Brown pitching against him, finally broke the spell yesterday, winning a 3-2 decision in the second game of a double header. Vance fanned nine and needed a two run rally in the ninth to save him. Pinch hitter Bruce Caldwell's single drove in the tying run and Lefty O'Doul drove in the winning tally with another. The Braves had won the first game, 10-6, with an eight run drive in the second inning that featured a wallop for the circuit by Wally Berger. The victory although he was so wild he had to be relieved by Fred Betts in the ninth. He walked eight men.

Split Twin Bills.

All other National League games played double headers and split them, leaving the eight clubs in the same relative positions they occupied before the double bills started.

The league leading Chicago Cubs broke Pittsburgh's winning streak behind Pat Malone in the first game, 7-4, but the Pirates won the second, 3-0, behind Glenn Spencer's effective 3-hit job.

After Bill Hallahan had pitched the St. Louis Cardinals to a 5-0 shutout over the Reds in the first game, Paul Derringer came back to win the nightcap, 3-2, in the winning combination's first victory of the season.

The New York Giants spotted the Phillies seven runs and then beat them 10-8 in their slugging opener but fell, 4-1, in the second game as Phillies in the second game and succumbed, 4-1.

American League.

In the American League the New York Yankees stretched their lead to three games over the Washington, 11-8 as Babe Ruth hit his 14th home run. Yesterday Gehrig staggered through the entire game to bang up his eighth victory, outlasting Jimmy Dykes' Chicagoans.

Detroit strengthened its hold on third place by a 4-3 triumph over the Chicago White Sox, Luke Appling's double in the eighth scoring the way for the Tigers' winning run.

The St. Louis Browns, scoring seven runs in the eighth, trounced Cleveland, 12-1, in the first game of a double header but could do little in the second, which went to the Indians won 2-1. The Browns' late rally was a bonn run in the ninth by Campbell.

Bob Weiland outpitched three rivals as the Boston Red Sox whipped the Philadelphia Athletics, 6-4, in the first game of a twin bill but Rube Walberg shut out the Sox with four hits in the second contest as Jimmie Foxx clouted his 16th homer in the opener.

Saturday's Games.

Saturday's double header in Washington gave Babe Ruth an opportunity to step up two more home runs but the Yankees lost both games to the Senators. Detroit and Cleveland broke even in a double while the Athletics and Cleveland broke even in a double while the Athletics and St. Louis, respectively.

The Giants opened the third and final game of their series with the Brooklyn Dodgers Saturday without the ex-player in the engagement. Travis Cuccinello and Glenn Wright provided the batting punch for the Giants, Wright's proving the margin of victory with a two-run circuit drive. Klein's 11th homer of the season figured in the Phillies' victory over the Boston. Cincinnati toasted the Cubs for a 5-3 win and Pittsburgh won their fifth straight at the expense of the St. Louis Cardinals.

Police of Leigh England, are trying to solve the mystery of the death of an unidentified bearded woman, whose body was found on the beach.

Prevention is better than cure, but it doesn't get its name so often in the papers.

GIBBARDS WIN FROM ODESSA

Doug Fraser Lots Opposition to Down With Five Hits

Behind the masterful pitching of Doug Fraser, their hustling ace, the Napanee Gilbards baseball club defeated the Odessa baseball team by the score of 19 to 3 at the Odessa fair grounds in the opening attraction in the Lennox County Baseball League. Fraser turned in an almost perfect game when he had allowed but two hits and no runs up until the eighth inning, when the home team scored three runs on two hits and an error and two batters being hit with pitched balls.

Odessa Batter Cold

The weather was most suitable for sporting except baseball when the two teams took the field as there was a steady cold west wind blowing across the diamond. O'Neil Gerow was the starting battery for the Odessa club, while Manager Gerow elected Doug Fraser and Gilbard to be the battery duties for the Gilbard nine.

Gilbards scored two runs on two hits and a walk in the first inning but Odessa held the locals in the second inning and two runs on two hits and a base on balls in the third frame. The fourth inning proved to be most disastrous for the Odessa nine as the Gilbard team scored five runs on four hits with a base on balls and an error. Roy Wilson, who replaced Ab Young, in the box for Odessa to try and end the "apple" for four bases when each man was responsible. In the fifth frame neither team scored, while Gilbards banged another one in the sixth inning. The seventh frame went scoreless, while both teams scored in the eighth, Napanee getting four counters and Odessa two, making the total runs of the day. In the last inning Gilbards failed to score and made four more runs making their grand total 19 runs.

Roy Wilson, Gilbard's new first sacker, was the big hitter of the day, getting a triple, a single and a home run in six trips to the plate. Doug Fraser helped himself to two hits in two tries.

The locals were managed to squeeze out five hits, four being singles and Ernie Gilbard getting to a double in the eighth and was the only player of the team to reach second base. Odessa got but when he also got a single in the first frame. The batting honors went to Napanee, Reid and Leonard on the home team getting two hits each and three runs each making their grand total for the day.

The batting and fielding features in all probability there will be more horses face the barrier at the Belleville track on Dominion Day than ever before. The purses offered by the local Agricultural Society are quite large enough to assure the very best horses will be here. Program stable of Waterloo was third with $6,020.

Burns McKaine of Kingston will be in Belleville with Canadian, pacer Toll Gate at Napanee had some horses entered in the 2.12 and another in the 2.16 class. Whether he will bring Toll Gate to Belleville or not was not ascertained today due to the fact that Mr. McKaine was not sure whether he was bringing the crack pacer to Belleville or not. He only has three horses at Napanee and in all probability he will start Toll Gate in the 2.12 class.

Eddie Keane of Peterboro has written to Secretary Dick Ketcheson assuring him that he will be here with one two and one mile for each class, while another horseman from Cobourg has also made reservations for the Belleville race meet. Secretary Ketcheson says he expected before Wednesday

Beauty.....

BY HELEN JAMIESON

Feather Edge Bangs and Button Curls

To the neckline—by cobhair
To the neckline thou shall go, bob, and no further. Those flattering locks attained the height of approval of the transitional growing-out process—you know gals how it was when the lacklustre ends stuck out behind the pearly ears!—fall once more upon the floor of the beauty shop to be swept away with the dust and rubbish. Sad, isn't it? One could weep. But of what use were they anyway?

So long a time existing 'en—those extra inches—and so short a time lasting 'em. But one must conform. The fashion is: side locks less short—as below the earlobes, feather edge bangs becoming, wide undulating wave lines that wave all over the head and shave all a neat, even outline at the back. That little hip-sie curler, resting on the nape of the neck, is out, too. It doesn't mean anything. It never did.

To attain the proper head contour the under part of the head at the rear is shingled, with stiffened or loaner hair left to cover the shortness. By that method there is no hitching or bounce, nor is there a shingled effect. The dear sweet old shingle is there, but under cover and unsuspected.

The time has come when woman's glorious crown must carry the professional touch. It must be taken to Louie de Angelo or some other finger waving or marcelling emergency fortnightly, self offence. But it's worth the expense. Compare it to the hairdress of the cringing Pollyanna era.

For eight years the bob has been with us. "It is nothing. It will pass. When the men kick up a big row and want their women to have pigtails again, the old style will be revived." Thus sayeth the wise ones. A poor thing, that prophecy. But the men folk didn't want it in the first place. They drew clocks, black eyes and threatened divorce, ran away from home, came back, sat down and retired at the accustomed hour, after all, the old girl didn't look so bad. Same in the end.

The original bob with the bowl-cut evolved into a thing of beauty. Hairdressers this season have surpassed all previous efforts in producing effect and beautiful design.

The one-sided coiffure is exceedingly fashionable, the wave is pushed over the head running up and down, button curls around one ear and behind and above all, a neat, proper and precise that they might well be buttons.

Another strictly fresh and sassy idea is the curl directly on the temples and forehead, finished with a feather edge fringe that is soft as fog and as fragile. An exquisite arrangement for the girl with expressive eyes, real hair and smooth unturrowed brow.

No ragged ends of hair must be visible at the nape of the neck. Shadowy necks are the newest beauty crime. The new bob overcomes this horror through permanent wave, by curling the tapered ends slightly, turning them upward toward the one side. Neither piece of goods news; there are no standard outlines. Each head of hair must seek its own destiny, appear individual, be different.

DAWGS and FLOWERS

"It isn't the kids so much, it's the dogs" wearily remarked a typical suburbanite Saturday afternoon, as he bent over the handle of the hoe and surveyed the pockmarked garden where active paws had been busy, and the bent and broken young shoots of radish, sweet corn and other garden produce which had begun to grow several inches above the ground. Now they lay above the ground. Now they lay there bent and trampled. The place looked like as if a violent tornado had paid it a lingering visit. It also compared favorably with a section of "No Man's Land" after a particularly heavy and intensive bombardment.

"Yes, it's the dawgs alright. Kids can be depended on to go to bed sometime at night, but I never saw a dog yet that could keep regular hours." He waved a hand over the ruins. "All that was done last night while we were sleeping." Tomorrow morning when I get up, I'll spend a half holiday, but I can't spend it trying to fix up what the dogs have done to this plot. Nice looking piece of work, isn't it? Those people that don't keep track of their dogs should pay for the run loose in their neighbors' gardens would be the first to holler if anything happened to one of them. Well some of these days if I can ever catch up with 'em I'll learn them."

T. D. RUSTON GUESTSPEAKER

C.A.S, of Prince Edward County to Hold Semi-Annual Meeting

Picton, May 26 (Special) — The local Children's Aid Society has introduced a new plan, whereby meetings are held semi-annually instead of once a year as in the past. "In holding a semi-annual meeting we are taking the lead in such a move in this province," said Mr. Ralph Hubbs, local superintendent of the Children's Aid Society. "Societies have held just one meeting annually and our aim is to increase public interest in the work with the hope that the public will get a better understanding of, and recognize the importance for which the Children's Aid Society is organized."

The semi-annual meeting here was held Friday in the Baptist Church. Mr. T. D. Ruston, superintendent of the Belleville C. A. Society, was guest speaker, and gave a most enlightening address on how problems were met in his district.

Mr. Ralph Hubbs gave his report which showed an increase in work all kinds. Lack of proper environment and training is one of the great factors contributing to problems faced by the Society.

Miss D. Gard, Deseronto, gave the report of the Children's Aid Society convention in Toronto, telling briefly some of the work the government is doing in this matter.

Mrs. J. Dodds, county president of the Women's Institute, gave an address and with Mr. T. Ruston, moved a vote of thanks.

Mr. Fred Newman, president, was in the chair, and was assisted by Vice-president W. S. Blakely.

Previous to the meeting Mr. Newman entertained at luncheon representatives of all societies who had contributed donations to the Shelter. Those present were:

Softball

The local Softball League continues to draw large crowds. Friday evening Moore played Cherry Valley and in a close game the former won by a 9 to 8 score.

A junior softball league is now in action and the Rinky Dinks defeated the Stumblers in the opener.

Baseball

Friday, June 3rd, will see the opening of the Bay of Quinte Baseball League when Picton plays Picton here. The local team has not yet been chosen. They are however fine prospects among the twenty candidates.

Mr. Cy Welch has been appointed by the Ontario Amateur Baseball Association as convener of Intermediate baseball in this district. Welch has been a prominent booster of sport for many years.

Games, singing, and other amusements were thoroughly enjoyed by the children and refreshments were served and greatly appreciated. Everybody had happy singing praises of their pastor and teachers.

Indications are that Crowe Lake will this year have quite a large season this year. A number of the cottages are being repainted and otherwise improved and the surroundings are general. Apparently all the cottages will be occupied some of them at an early date. Mrs. Edwards has quite a number of reservations already some from parties who have been coming for a number of years. Mr. Sills also has a number of applications for the use of cottages at Marble Cliff.

Army and Navy Veterans Bring Aid to Distressed Cases

TWEED—Since this association was formed in Tweed a few weeks ago, much good work has been accomplished. There are several veterans now in receipt of pension whose claims had been previously flatly refused. These cases were won by the untiring efforts of the Army and Navy Veterans' Association. Last week, two more victories were won in the cases of Percy Thompson of Tweed who was awarded Veteran's allowance and Charles Wood of Madoc, who has been awarded pension. It will be remembered that Wood walked 27 miles to present his case at the opening meeting in Tweed.

It has been a long cruel winter, with spring stubbornly refusing to bring the fine weather we crave or yellow daffodils. Mother Nature will assert herself, and then the homes up and down your street will tell their individual stories of personal pride.

Lawns will be green, flowers will glow in window boxes, hedges will be neatly trimmed. It is this season of the year that requires garden implements in adequate number to do each job well—you will want to patch up fences and trellises and repaint them, that your home may be "the prettiest of all."

"I Was Terribly Run-Down"

Says Mrs. Doughty. "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Put Me Up"

Wrought Marvellous Change

"I believe it my duty to tell others what wonderful results I obtained from Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." writes Mrs. James Doughty, Brantford, Ont. "I was in a terribly nervous and run-down condition; very thin and had no appetite. I took three boxes of the Pills, and I soon began to feel like a new woman. No trouble to do my housework. The Pills built me up and put me in first-class condition."

Mrs. Richard Rusk, Robbin, Man., writes: "Diphtheria left our daughter, Beth, a nervous wreck. She was unable to continue at school. I gave her Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and the change in her was marvellous. She is enjoying splendid health—and we do feel that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills saved her life."

Don't allow yourself or your daughter to be robbed of health and vigour. Take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They are no purgative relief. They banish run-down or nervous conditions by creating new blood, which means new health, vigor and vitality. 50c—at your druggist's.

HYMNARY IS INTRODUCED

Rev. Dr. MacMillan Special Preacher at Holloway Church

To make the first use of the new hymnary in the services of the church, Holloway Street United congregation on Sunday had as special preacher, Rev. Alexander MacMillan, D.D., secretary of the Hymnary Committee who devoted his sermon to the singing of music in worship and defining the aims of the new hymn treasury which are to include the greatest hymns of the church universal all through the ages and to make a special contribution in music to spiritual thought from the Presbyterian, Congregational and Methodist schools of music. Dr. MacMillan who conducted the musical service was welcomed by the Rev. Harold B. Sharman, minister of the host church.

In speaking of the musical setting of the hymn "In Heavenly Love Abiding," Dr. MacMillan noted that it was founded on a Welsh folk melody. The hymnary contains music from many other sources, from Anglo-Saxon to show the inclusiveness of the music of the church and the others being hymns from Ukrainian, Polish, German, French, Swiss and other musical traditions.

The voice in song plays as in addition to being the medium in worship, there being a stanzer response in the human breast, he said, there being few who are not aroused by the sound of music when associated with thought and words which have to do with God. The hymnary comes from the Greek word "hymnarium" a treasury of hymns, which includes the thought of new and old music.

Social Consciousness

Dr. MacMillan defined the departments served by the new book, stressing the inclusion of the inadequacies of this age upon the music of the church.

On the score of the part of music in bridging the barriers of controversial schools, he said: "We are separated by barriers of race and language, by differences of conception of church government, and of ritual but there is one common ground on which we can meet —in song. I do not say that we can pray for the greatest ground is of course the Word of God and the Person of Christ."

The choir sang "All Creatures of our God and Kings," composed by St. Francis of Assisi, when ill in a poor house, rendering it also for us one of the great songs of the church in its spiritual joy. Dr. MacMillan at the end did not been for the Middle Ages, the translations from the Latin, "Jesus, the Very Thought and "Jesus, Thou Joy of Loving Hearts" would never have been available. Then there are Lutheran Bohemian and French Huguenot hymns.

Dr. MacMillan referred to the contributions of the composers churches in the union, Presbyterian, Methodist and Congregational. Psalter in purest English, the Congregational which gave such a number of Isaac Watts and others and Methodism whose greatest singer was Charles Wesley, and translator of hymns, John Wesley. The book will also contain Welsh hymns.

Books Presented

The church association and other officials presented the choir with hymnaries and placed copies in the pulpit desk for the use of visitors to the church.

The choir sang two hymns as anthems.

At the evening service the Rev. Mr. Neal spoke on the subject of "The Ministry of Music" dealing very thoroughly with the fundamentals of music and its value.

The congregation was assisted by the services of the Belleville Musical Society choir under the direction of Mr. Reg. Hinchey. The members of the band played the accompaniments on the violin to the singing of the hymns. The band played a number of sacred selections.

Mr. Neal thanked the members of the band and choir for so generously giving them that their efforts were highly appreciated by their congregation and the congregation for their services.

At John Street United church on Sunday evening, the new hymnary of the church was introduced to the congregation by the Rev. Dr. Alex. MacMillan, editor in chief of its compilation. Dr. MacMillan has been devoting his full time for the past two years to the selection, arranging and editing of the new book. The committee will be one of the leading hymnologists in the country and his work in the book of hymns of rare excellence and which will be much accepted by the church with great satisfaction and pleasure.

The service last night took the nature of a song service. Dr. MacMillan spoke briefly on the hymnary and then selecting a hymn he told of the author and some interesting incidents of interest relating to it. The choir sang the hymns —first alone and then the congregation joined in the singing.

The attendance at the service was quite large and those present greatly enjoyed the singing of the new hymns.

Rev. Dr. MacMillan is the father of Dr. Ernest MacMillan and Principal of the Toronto Conservatory of Music.

J. V. ENRIGHT IS DROWNED

Was Leader of 80th C.E. F. Bugle Band During War

Perth, May 30—John Vincent Enright, aged 52 years, electrician and machinist, of Perth, was drowned in the Tay Canal here a week ago, but his body was not recovered until yesterday when it was seen floating in the canal about half a mile from the outskirts of the town by two brothers, James and Cecil Lacasy, who were motoring along the canal bank. Deceased disappeared suddenly and mysteriously from his home which adjoins the canal bank in the centre of the town, and it is presumed he accidentally fell into the water while walking along the wharf. He was well known throughout the Ottawa Valley for his connection with the 42nd Lanark and Renfrew Highland Regiment, and also as a musician. He was one of the leading cornet players in this district, a member of the former 42nd band, and "Perth Citizens' Band. He was bugle Sergeant of the 80th Battalion C.E.F. which was located in Perth during the fall, winter and spring of 1915-16, and left with that unit for overseas in May of 1916. The unit was disbanded in Borden Camp, England, and he was attached to the 30th Battalion, C.E.F., of Calgary, with which he went to the front in August of 1916. He was wounded in active service, and after convalescing in hospitals in England, returned to Canada in 1919. He is survived by his aged mother and a brother Edward with whom he lived. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon, honors Saturday to St. John's R.C. Church and cemetery. The cortege was headed by Perth Citizens' Band, and the services a large representation of the Lanark and Renfrew Regiment, the Perth Fire Brigade attended, as he was an honorary member of that organization.

ENSIGN WILL MOVE SHORTLY

Ensign Calvert Will Be Transferred Elsewhere

Ensign Calvert, commanding officer of the Belleville Corps of the Salvation Army, Monday evening received Farewell Orders' from divisional headquarters; this means that he will be transferred to some other field of labor. Where he is to be stationed was not given in the notice and the Ensign does not expect to have this information for two weeks. The farewell service, however, has been set to take place on Sunday, June 26.

The notice of his removal came as a surprise to Ensign Calvert and he regrets very much to leave Belleville, where he has been very happy and successful in his work. Members of the local corps regret greatly the transference of Ensign and Mrs. Calvert from the city; they have both been very popular with the members of the army and also with many citizens outside of the Army. The Ensign brough his excellent musical ability has been of great assistance to the Army Band and in entertainments held at the citadel his piano playing as well as his singing given by him upon other musical instruments have been greatly prized and have added much to their success.

Ensign Calvert has been in the Army service as an officer for ten years. He came to Belleville a year ago this coming June. Prior to coming here he was stationed at Sault Ste. Marie. He has also been also in Sudbury, North Bay, Parry Sound, Newmarket, Mount Dennis and Oakville.

As a general rule officers are left in charge of a corps for from one to two years and Ensign Calvert had hoped to be allowed to remain in Belleville for the two year period in order to see the improvements completed to the citadel and other work brought to completion which he has in hand. Many changes, however, are being made just now by the officials at Army headquarters. Belleville has been for some time in the Montreal division; it is now being placed in the Toronto East division. Some economy it is expected will be made by the new arrangement.

Many citizens, who have known Ensign Calvert and his wife, observe the energy with which he has discharged his duties will regret his departure from Belleville and will wish him, Mrs. Calvert and their children all success and happiness in their new field.

In observance of the feast of Corpus Christi a procession was held at St. Michael's Church last evening after the 7.30 service. Harry I. Price Succeeds In Holding West York in Triangular Battle

Conservative Wins With Liberal Second and Labor Third

LARGE VOTE

Labor Man Carves Deeply Into Conservatives, Liberals Standing Pat

Toronto, May 30.—Following an intensive campaign, Harry I. Price (Conservative) was elected on Saturday to represent the riding of York West in the Ontario Legislature as successor to the late Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey. While the Returning Officer will not issue the official count until Thursday, returns from the 108 polls gave the following figures:

Harry I. Price (Cons.) 8,715
W. J. Gardhouse (Lib.) 5,804
J. W. Buckley (Labor) 3,788
Jas. M. Reader Socialist) 102

The figures give the Government candidate a lead of 911 over the next Liberal, which is less by 2,914 than the majority given to the late Hon. Dr. Forbes Godfrey in the general election of 19129, when the figures were:

Godfrey (Conservative) 8,206
Edwards (Liberal) 5,411

This indicates a shrinkage of 1,581 in the votes polled for the Government's candidate, and an increase of 1,393 in the Liberal vote.

Wins by Minority

Perhaps the most significant feature of the result is that the new member has been elected by a minority of the total vote. Against the government vote of 8,715, there was an opposition vote of 9,894, which leaves the Conservative 2,879 votes behind his combined opposition. This in Liberal headquarters was hailed as being indicative of the Hepburn administration was tottering, and that the West York result was a handwriting on the wall."

On the other hand Conservatives claim that the large vote given the Labor candidate, John W. Buckley would have been about equally divided between the Liberal and Conservatives had it been a straight contest between the two old parties.

One advance poll is yet to be heard from, but the figures will not make any significant change in the result.

Heavier Vote Cast

On Saturday 16,408 votes were cast, which compares with 13,797 in the general election of 1929 and shows that approximately 80 per cent. of the available vote was cast. The Liberals piled up an early lead in the rural sections, while the Conservatives led in the city districts. But the Labor vote was strongest in Mount Dennis, New Toronto and Long Branch, which last polled only 91 Mount Dennis.

The Socialist candidate was a negligible quantity, as had been expected, and his thirty-five polls led to register a single vote, while he highest individual vote was at Minico, where he received 38 votes.

A special polling booth at the Ontario Reformatory at Mimico returned an overwhelming majority for Price, who secured 45 votes, against 7 for the three other candidates.

As the results came into the Conservative headquarters on Dundas Street west, Trenton, there was considerable anxiety right up to the last, and little evidence of jubilation until the Mimico result finally assured them of victory. At the Liberal offices, in sharp contrast, hopes ran high to the finish, and even then the overwhelming anti-government vote cast was the source of keen satisfaction, and hailed as a moral victory.

Premier is Pleased

Speaking last night, Premier Henry expressed himself as very pleased with the result, which he said, was an endorsation of the Government. I am also pleased with it. from a point of personal interest and glad that my native county still has faith in me, after my thirty years of public service in various capacities."

Mitchell F. Hepburn, Provincial leader, who campaigned in West York, could not be reached yesterday, for any comment on the result.

Harry Price, the victor, spoke briefly after the result had been announced and thanked his workers for their efforts.

"I am delighted with the result which amounts to an expression of confidence in the Henry Administration," declared W. J. Gardhouse when asked for the press for comment on the election. "It is not hard to see how badly the government candidate would have been defeated only for the split in the opposition ranks," said Mr. Gardhouse, who expressed keen satisfaction with the overwhelming vote accorded him in the sections where his forbears settled a century ago, and where the Gardhouse family has since resided.

Labertie Comment

"The result in the industrial centres is a magnificent tribute to Labor," stated John W. Buckley, "and will have its reflection no doubt in other industrial districts in the province." He expressed the opinion that the electors had shown a pronounced classification with the government's teller policy. He declared that Labor would in the future continue as a party in West York, in both political and municipal arenas.

ROBBERS GET $7,000 CACHE

Victims Exclude Police in Crime Near Whitney

Whitney, Ont., May 30— Three brothers, Malcolm, the oldest about 55 years of age, are reported to have been assaulted by three unknown men and robbed of $7,000 at their farm 30 miles from this town. According to the report, the men, whose names are known, are of Polish descent.

The police, learning of the affair yesterday, sent a constable to investigate. The brothers refused to let the officer see the premises, and would not permit his entry to the house.

The story as told here is that a man approached the brothers on May 19 requesting bread. Later the same man, accompanied by two others, returned to the home of the three bachelors and demanded money. After being subjected to brutal assault, the brothers finally produced the hidden money place, and it is alleged the men escaped with a total of $7,000.

LAND ANNUITY IS NOT PAID

Decision is Announced By Minister of Industry

Cork, Ireland, May 30 (UP)—The Irish Free State has halted payment of the land annuities to Great Britain, Minister of Industry and Commerce Sean Lemass announced yesterday in a political speech.

"The money is now being retained here," Lemass said. "We are now going to demand that Britain repay 30,000,000 pounds which she illegally received on account of these annuities."

The last annuities amount to about 3,000,000 pounds a year. The new Government of President Eamonn de Valera announced it would cease to pay them because the Free State was not required to make such payments under the agreement.

The British Government disputed de Valera's contention and produced documents to support its stand. The land annuities are collected from tenant farmers, who are in the process of acquiring ownership of property which once belonged to wealthy landlords. The British Exchequer originally financed the operation enabling the tenants to buy the land.

The next land annuities are due June 15. They are paid semi-annually.

MOTOR FUMES FROM GARAGE CAUSE DEATH

Kenneth A. MacPhadyen Dies in Chair in Den Over Garage

MAID DISCOVERS

Gas Seeps Upward Into Room When Engine Left Running

Toronto, May 30—Carbon monoxide fumes seeping through the floor from the garage beneath killed Kenneth A. MacPhadyen, aged 30, of 430 Orlob Parkway, broker and mining engineer, as he sat in his den reading, smoking and drinking a glass of beer just before retiring early Sunday morning.

Mr. MacPhadyen had inadvertently left the engine of his car running when he came home, and it was still running at 9.25 Sunday morning when his body was found slumped in a chair by Jean Gillies, maid.

Adjacent to the den, built over the garage, is a bedroom where slept the two children. Shirley, four and Craig, two and a half. Apparently nothing but blind chance confined the fumes to one room and saved the lives of the children. Mrs. MacPhadyen was in Timagami visiting friends.

A book stand and an ash tray, which appeared to have been knocked to the floor, indicated that MacPhadyen had made a futile struggle to resist the paralyzing effects of the deadly gas and get out of the room.

Magazine on Floor

At the dead man's feet when he was found was a magazine spread on the floor. At his elbow on a table was a glass of beer.

The maid, in morning cries of the two children for their father roused the household. Mrs. Gillies and her son Jean Gillies" Miss Gillies went to their room to awaken them and then when they asked for their father again, went to the den and there found Mr. MacPhadyen dead in his chair.

Dr. Charles Sheard was called, and discovering his friend was dead he summoned Chief Coroner M. M. Crawford. Dr. Sheard told Dr. Crawford the conversation he had had with Mr. MacPhadyen Saturday night in front of the latter's house.

According to Dr. Sheard, Mr. MacPhadyen had put his car in the garage and had then walked around to the front of the house where they had talked for some time before they both retired to their respective homes for the night.

At that time Mr. MacPhadyen was in the best of spirits and was looking forward to the summer months. Going into the house, the broker, in company with Mrs. MacPhadyen, who was spending a few days at Lake Timagami with friends, sat down to discuss a breakfast for Sunday morning.

Sitting in Chair

He then went to the den and after filling a glass with beer and smoking another cigarette started to read in a large armchair. He was found in the chair when death silently stole in from the garage below.

The death is the result of his accidentally leaving the engine of his car running in the garage, which caused the carbon monoxide fumes to seep into the den," said Dr. Crawford.

Mr. MacPhadyen had been dead for several hours when his body was found. Dr. Crawford was so filled with gas fumes that Dr. Sheard ordered the window. Even after I had concluded my investigation, I came out of the room with a headache."

Mr. MacPhadyen was born 35 years ago in Toronto, Ont., and at the age of 15 started to work for the engineering department of J. M. McConnell and Company, with which he was connected until about two years ago.

At 17 he enlisted and served two years in the 3rd Field Co. 3rd Battery of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Upon being discharged after the war he resumed his duties with the McConnell company, eventually becoming well known for his exploration and prospecting work.

About two years ago he went into business for himself, retaining connections with various interests in the mining field as well as establishing his own brokerage house. In addition to his wife and two children he is survived by his mother, Mrs. J. H. Dietz, of Clarkson.

Piles Go Quick

Without Salves or Cutting

Itching, seeding, protruding piles are caused by bad circulation of the blood in the affected parts. The parts become weak, flabby, almost dead. Only an internal remedy can remove the cause—that's why salves, suppositories and cutting fail. Dr. Leonhardt's prescription, HEM-ROID succeeds because it restores congestion, relieves circulation, heals and strengthens the diseased parts. Dr. Leonhardt's HEM-ROID Tablets must end your piles agony or money back.

FLIER SCALDED WHEN OIL LINE BREAKS

Returns to Field and Will Take Off Later

Seattle, Wash., May 30—Napthan G. Browne, New York flier, was forced back on an attempted non-stop flight from Seattle to Tokio yesterday by the rupture of an oil line in his monoplane, "The Lone Star."

Narrowly escaping death in the take-off from a ramp at Boeing Field, blinded temporarily by hot oil and forced to drop some of the previous fuel supply to gain altitude Browne returned to the field after several hours in the air, and immediately started preparations for another flight, while half a dozen mechanics tore into the motor to repair the damage. He stated the oil to break and to repair a stabilizer brace were responsible for his accident. No scalded eyes.

CANADA MAY HELP IRISH

Officials Suggests Dominion May Smooth Out Tangle

Ottawa, May 30.—The meeting of the Dominion Cabinet during the present week will be devoted to a very considerable extent to preparations for the imperial economic Conference. It is doubtful, however, whether much information of an official nature regarding these preparations will be made public. So far the government has been careful to keep much of its activities in this connection a secret.

It is suggested by those in close touch with the ministry that the government is anxious to avoid premature discussions of subjects to come up at the conference. It is felt that long-range discussions over the cable now might militate against the success of the conference when the delegates are around the table and talk things over face-to-face. According to an authoritative source outside, Prgnent R. R. Bennett has disclosed very little as to the agenda or what Canada will propose. His colleagues have followed his silent policy as the Minister himself.

An example of the attitude of the Canadian delegation has been in connection with the dispute between the British Government and President de Valera of the Irish Free State over the oath of allegiance. No word has come from the Canadian Government either one way or the other as to this.

"The constitution of the Irish Free State was modelled after the Canadian constitution," said one Government official. "and Canada has lived much longer under it than has the Irish Free State. It seems reasonable that Canada might be very helpful in smoothing out this situation, and that it will be unlike any of the other Dominions. Canada has always been in the position where she wants to be free to help if she sees a chance without causing her unfriendliness by premature expressions of opinion."

Another reason given, also unofficially, for the secrecy is that anything said as to what Canada hoped to accomplish might engender controversies within the Dominion. Some Canadian interests may be opposed to the proposals to be placed before the conference and if they were made public, a series of log-rolling deals might result.

Accordingly, while the sub-committees have been named and are working hard, even the personnel of these bodies have not been made public and information of their activities only comes in indirect ways.

ART HAS CURB MARKET

New York, May 30—The boulevards of Paris, which take their art seriously, have nothing on Washington Square. Artists with pocketbooks have been flattened by a curtailed market for their wares set their paintings on pedestals and showed them to passers-by yesterday is, the hope that many would buy. Almost 200 began the one-day exhibit on the sidewalks of New York, and eyed appraisingly the delivery boys, critics, proprietors up-towners, shabbily clothed ones from park benches and friends who jostled each other to view the works. Remarks were plentiful, sales numbered sixteen paintings.

Canadian General is Villain In Unsung Armentieres Verse

Slapped By Original Mademoiselle Who Was Lonely

Paris, May 30—The true story of a little French girl who slapped a general's face and inspired a war song which was on the lips of every English-speaking soldier in France, was disclosed yesterday almost fourteen years after the last gun was fired in the World War.

The girl, of course, was "Mademoiselle from Armentieres."

Sir Gilbert, American composer, who is making a study of war songs to be used in his operatic version of "What Price Glory?" told the story.

"The song was inspired by a certain French girl in the town of Armentieres," he said. "However, she was about 30 years old rather than 40, and all insinuations as to her character were false. She was married at the Cafe Pas De Calais, where British and Canadian officers spent their time.

"A London music hall actor and a Canadian song writer used the music of a French folk song in writing a marching chorus for the old army. About that time a Canadian general came into the cafe and attempted to kiss the mademoiselle, who scorned his gold braid and slapped his face while his staff looked on.

"The authors of the show heard the story—as did everyone else—and decided to write it into a song. Then, fearing the wrath of the general, they changed it to the familiar verse about the 'unkissable' mademoiselle.

It runs:

"Mademoiselle from Armentieres
Hadn't been kissed for forty years.
Hinky-dinky parlez-voo."

"THREE WOMEN"

By FAITH BALDWIN

Her alert and maturing mind considered the situation not alone the trivial significance of the present game, but the importance of these two women in relation to herself. Grandmother was old and Joyce was young. Mother was nearer to Joyce in point of years, but she'd look as far removed from the girl as grandmother herself. One might love grandmother for her splendidness, her depleted vitality; one might love mother for her clouded beauty, her childishly wistful appeal, for the glimpse of the comrade one had had of her. But these it needed, understanding, friendship—where were they? For a little time, it had seemed as though Elizabeth had achieved that most delicate of relationships, friendship with Joyce, was both child. Or friendship despite kinship. Yet an episode such as that to become almost in retrospect had shaken it to the new frantic footing.

Joyce rose from her bed and considered the mirror before a mirror. Without words, without thought even, her mother had taught her the loncly self-reliant way of each generation.

Grandmother went to the Princeton game, subdued as the young men by her presence, was both unconformable and watchful. Then she went home and Joyce's first real prophecy by a recurrence of her rheumatism. She was uncomplaining over it. The episode was closed.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

Winter came in stormily. Tea dancing engrossed the youngsters. Shaded lights in the apartments, playing, gilt on the ceilings and cream in the tea urns, boys and girls embraced, moving to music and laughter over a polished floor. Louisa did not approve of tea dances. Dances were well enough in their place. One entered a ball room with dignity, and poise, one had little white cards and a pencil on a ribbon from a gloved wrist, correct young men wrote their names upon it with an infinitesimal pencil. The music had restraint. Chaperons sat along the walls. Supper was early and homecoming followed. In her time dances had been conducted along these lines of self-respect and decency. But not now. She attended one tea dance with her grandchild and turned down the thumb. Last smoke, a bewildering change of partners, scene of them unpresented, nameless, a vicious display of sable, a closeness of embrace, young girls cooped and smoking cigarettes, the whole affair brazenly in public, in a place which any one might enter, a careless and undisciplined exhibition. Joyce might not attend any more tea dances.

Joyce listened gravely to the ultimatum. Her mouth, primmer at sixteen than her mother's had ever been set hard. She said nothing at all, with a fine air of docility.

But she talked it over, later, with her most precious friend, Yvonne Harkness. Yvonne was pink and blue and gold, as to regard from a frieze, with great, innocent eyes and the whispering voice of a good child. She was mischief masquerading as a novice to falsehood. She lured th.the newest of apartments with a blonde mother whose divorce had been accomplished with clarity.

"Poor father." Yvonne had commented, "I can't blame him. He must be the devil to be rich and good looking—and married!"

To Yvonne after school. Joyce brought her troubles.

"Well," announced her friend, sagely, "what they don't know can't hurt them."

Joyce pondered.

"But that's not honest, exactly—I hate a neat."

Yvonne chuckled lightly.

"Are they honest? Oh, don't bother to answer. Do any of them move with the times? Not they, they think the world ante-bellum. Even mother. She goes on, she has what she calls a good time, dancing, men and all. She's a thousand times more modern than your two—she thinks? But honest? Not she! Three years ago I asked her some questions. Not that I didn't know, basically, but I wanted to get it straight. Did I get an answer? I did not. I got a dim sort of lecture on—well, sex. Birds and cabbage leaves, exactly, but the beauty of innocence and wait until you're older and don't listen to horrid girls talking in corners. Oh, a lot of stuff about flowers and bloom and wouldn't you like that new frock we saw at Hollander's last week? As an adjective way to change the subject, that's it? Oh, they make me sick, the lot of them. Hugh Masterson and Pete Garret want us to go somewhere and dance Saturday. Are you game?"

Joyce hesitated.

"I hate lying——" she began.

Yvonne regarded her ironically from eyes which looked as if they had never gazed on anything more material than bluebells and seraphims.

"Of course you do," she agreed, "we all do. But it can't be avoided. Where would you get if you always told the truth? Do you want to sit in the parlor and bring out the old you're spoken to? Don't you want any sort of freedom at all? I've waited for Joyce's nod and went on briskly. "Of course you do. Well, you won't get it by asking for it—pretty—please. You've got to take it."

"But they'll ask me where——"

"Well, tell them something. Tell them you are coming to my house for tea and dancing, and a symphonic tea and read a little Polyanna. Your grandmother approves of me. She's told me so. Even if Mother is divorced from Father," concluded Yvonne, sedately, "Mother does scrupulously she did it. We are still in the social register, Father under 'Distinguished Dunicles!' Dilatory is very good, I think."

Joyce nodded.

"All right. Saturday then."

"That's the way to win the harm? That was what hurt her most. Such a good liar, the floor and ceiling just right, and Hugh Masterson, a dear sort of person. Had she succeeded pede been wrong, dangerous, even adventurous she talked. Instead she had been the jadique justice of deceit. But it was none of those things. It was just tea with two nice, correct boys and a dozen dances. And she couldn't go home and say, "I've had the best time!"

Set to that music she took step by step with Hugh. There were other steps, not progressive exactly, more marking time. No one reproved her. All the girls of her little circle were permitted these, by common consent amusements. It appealed to no one as unusual that she should not attend them. In an age when chaperonage had been practically discarded, when girls had become, each one like her, sat in a dunkin in corners, sipping tea, in dubious proximity to Joyce realized that she would have been considered a disloyal old lady had she not struck her veiled blow for freedom. She was seventeen in the spring, and in soon not be asked places if she lacked a proper sense of acceptances. "Of course I'd like to come to your party, Yvonne—when is your mother to be one of the party?

She thought, restlessly——will it go on like this always? Lying and planning and slipping out and being afraid to get home ten minutes later than usual? It had to be if I were doing anything wrong, but I have to make it wrong, somehow. Yvonne, consulted, consoled.

"Marriage, I suppose."

"Married women haven't any more freedom, really."

"Some have——"

"I don't mean that kind—besides that's not marriage."

Yvonne yawned pinkly, and knocked off the ash of her cigarette. The standing ash tray perched a brass emu on the rim of the receiver. An unlikely animal. Yvonne regarded it with complacent affection. The two girls were curled up on the orchan taffeta bed spread. Beyond the windows the late afternoon fair had faded, and the round drops of May rain, which even in town were warm and fragrant of fields, came splashing down, like the tears of a baby giant.

"A career then," Yvonne suggested. "Dolly Hows says she's going on the stage. Her family is having kittens over it."

Joyce made a wistful face.

"She won't. Just an idea—because she had the lead in the school play."

"Perhaps. But lots of the girls are planning to do something. Mary's taking a secretarial course after graduation. Her father believes in it."

Joyce announced, suddenly, "Doctor. I've always wanted to be a doctor. Wanted to go to college, to Johns Hopkins. Do they take women? There's a medical college for women somewhere—well, I can't of course. That sort of thing costs money—which I haven't. I mean, my own. Of course, grandmother wouldn't put up with it—or for it!"

Yvonne looked her astonishment. "There's no accounting for tastes. I get sick if I see a cut finger."

"So does mother. I don't. Never did."

"You've never said anything before," reflected Yvonne, "but it might have known. Just by the things you take to in school. Always toting 'round the laboratory after hours and jawing Miss Loder."

"Yes, I like her course. Of course you don't get much of that sort of thing where we are—biology, chemistry." She added, slowly, leaning back against the ruffled blue pillows. It's not just the healing, you understand, the being able to help, although that comes into it. It's seeing life first hand. Finding out the beginnings. Being in at the start, and there at the finish. Discoveries—exploring——making life a little easier, safer for millions of people. Laboratories—not like that little trick one in school. The real thing, you know. Work—and then hitting on something, perhaps, not by accident, not by chance, but by digging and digging——something that cures, something that helps—wonderful.

"You'd better not confide all this to Hugh."

"I don't intend to . But why not?"

Joyce flushed, a very little. A tenuous romance had deep rosy threads between her and young Masterson. She found him disturbing, attractive. He seemed older than the older boys, he had the cultured accent Americans call English, he was going into the diplomatic service. He had traveled since childhood, really traveled, not just walked on a train or boat and seen the rounds of hotels.

"He wouldn't approve either—that's why not. You see," explained Yvonne, "men don't progress either. They don't belong to any particular generation. They're fixed. They're at settled as—as your grandmother. All men. Always. People how! about modern boys and girls. It's common sense! "There have never been any modern boys and girls, same as you're dying to mess around "with new babies and scalpels and prefer the odor of iodoform to perfume! Tell Him, if you must tell him anything, that you years to help a brilliant young diplomatist rise in his profession."

"Shut I don't," Joyce contradicted, flatly. "I want a profession of my own."

"Of course you do. We all do. No matter what it is or how unprofessional it appears. Only don't tell the men. They don't pant after that kind of intelligence!"

Yvonne was a year older than Joyce. But in the economic era was older than grandmother. And so different, through. Joyce thought crazy about books, always reading. She most extraordinary things and activities—bewildering.

Joyce sat forward and reached out long arms to enfold her elderly friend.

"Yvonne, you're priceless!"

"Above rubies."

"No, really you are. You look like an engraving valentine and you talk like——"

"The Delphic Oracle?"

"Was that its name? Perhaps. You haven't told me your profession."

"Avocation, Marriage, my dear," answered Yvonne solemnly.

"But I thought——"

"Thank you, I haven't a talent. I haven't, even, a personal ambition. That is to say, I don't want to be a doctor or a lawyer or even an interior decorator. Therefore, my problem is all a solution. A nice men, not too clever, not too rich, so that his achievements will be all the more remarkable. And when he is both clever and rich beyond a maiden's dreams, I shall sit back and say, "Aren't you wonderful darling!" And no one will know that his glory is reflected—himself least of all."

She smiled and Joyce cried out, "Yvonne, if you weren't so young I'd swear you looked smug!"

"I am smug, aged. I shall be smugger before I'm through. I shall marry early, Then," remarked Yvonne, "I shall ask you to wield my entirely lovable smoke."

After a moment, she added, "I despise business offices, and must find some outlet. For you see, I was born an executive."

Kisses, reflected Joyce gravely, are always stolen, even when bestowed them. There is no such thing as a free gift to a man, she mused, walking along the little beach not far from her home. There's always that element of theft, of robbery. Perhaps they prefer that way.

It was the day after a Country Club party. This was the familiar corner of Connecticut. The same small summer settlement, the same milkbegotten house slitting plimmly with the same gardens, the same round of motoring, of thin frocks, calls, tennis, bathing, dancing. Yet not quite the same. The Joyce who went to dances accompanied by grandmother, who wasn't allowed to motor alone with a male creature but must content herself with more populated excursions, still remained. But there was another Joyce, and she slipped from her bedroom to the sleeping porch, slid gaily down the new, and fortunately strong, latticework, and ran off, gay finery shrouded under a dark cloak, to dance all a madness with half a dozen youngsters who waited for her somewhere in car brimming over with exclamations, laughter and spirits of a high voltage, both natural and bottled.

Methods of Combatting Forest Menace Explained by Forester

Mr. H. W. Crosbie, of Tweed District, Addresses Audience

SYSTEM USED

Tweed, May 27 (Special)—H. W. Crosbie, district forester at Tweed was the speaker at the Tweed Consolidated School Empire night Concert. He said in part:—

"Primarily you are interested in Ontario's forests—nearly 200,000 square miles of forest wealth. Ontario's forests provide playgrounds for thousands bringing in each year millions of dollars from tourists. In normal times the forests produce an annual production value in terms of lumber, pulp and paper, etc., of over one hundred million dollars, employ thirty-two thousand persons receiving a payroll of over thirty-five million dollars.

"Ninety-two acres out of every hundred acres of forest land in Ontario are owned by the people of Ontario. These are crown lands administered by Governments for the benefit of the people.

"For the Dominion of Canada as a whole the forest is second only to agriculture in the value of its products in primary production. It furnished in 1930, one and one-half times the value of minerals, five times and seven times the value of the fisheries. It invests in forest lumber and pulp and paper industries alone some six hundred and seventy-five millions of dollars, two-thirds of which is in the pulp and paper industry.

100,000 Employed

"In Canada these industries employ 100,000 men in woods, factory and mill, while 75,000 more are employed in other manufactures dependent on the forest. The salaries and wages paid annually in the forest industries amount to one hundred million dollars.

"Again the forests play an important part in the transportation of our railway systems. Over fourteen million feet annually are required as equal amount of timber for bridges, building etc. Twenty per cent. in fact, provide 20 per cent. of the entire freight haulage on Canadian railways.

"There is little need for me to further enlarge on economics of forestry protection. It is now generally realized that our forests are inexhaustible although this was not true just a few years ago.

Fire Prevention

"That forests are inexhaustible and forest land destroyed large areas of timber inevitable was a general belief. It was not one of those who believe that our forests are very slowly going to be destroyed of timber, but I do believe that unless we intelligently administer the forests which remain there is grave danger of us, in Ontario, losing to a marked degree the great value which is derived. The forests of Ontario constitute one of its most valuable natural resources and protecting them from fires is essential for their perpetuation and for our future welfare.

Forest Fire in 1845

"One earliest recorded forest fire of any size in Ontario occurred about 1845 when extensive areas were burned west of Lake Superior. In 1855 another destructive fire consumed all Lady Evelyn Lake (or what is now the Temagami Provincial Forest) and burned eastward up Temiskaming Lake northwest up the Montreal River to its source and westward along the height of land for two hundred miles to near Michipicoten on Lake Superior.

Immense Waste

"These with subsequent fires impressed upon the minds of people this immense waste of timber. In 1878 the first forest protection legislation was passed. In 1883 fire rangers were first appointed—37 in number for the whole province. This number has increased from year to year until now throughout the fire season we employ approximately 1200 men. Following each disastrous fire, laws were strengthened, but the hazard increased greatly with logging activities and settlement of the north. In 1911 seventy lives were lost in forest fires in the Porcupine and Cochrane districts and valuable timber was destroyed. Again in 1916 another most destructive fire occurred in the Clay Belt Country in which 250 lives were lost and 1200 square miles of timber land destroyed.

Fire Protection by Ontario Forestry Branch

"Following these catastrophies steps were taken to place the forest protection organization of the province on a more efficient basis. In 1917 forest protection was made a duty of the Forestry Branch and the Forest Fire Prevention Act was passed which, with many improvements, is in force at the present time. The existing systematic fire patrol organization of Ontario dates therefore from that year. In the course here we have the handling of certain areas improved upon and the whole service made more efficient.

Areas in Fire District

"That part of the province within the fire district and therefore under the jurisdiction of the Deputy Minister of Forestry is that part north and west of a line extending east roughly from Port Severn to Lamart thence north to the town of Pembroke.

Provincial Administration

"For administration purposes this area of approximately 130 million acres is divided into 7 districts inspectorates. The men in charge of these inspectorates or districts have supervision over forest protection and other forestry matters within their respective territories. They so far as technically trained foresters. The policy has been to create a directing personnel of technically trained foresters. The principle of decentralization is following and each district forester is given complete authority over his staff, is allowed to handle his district as he sees fit and is held fully responsible. Under each District Forester are the Assistant Foresters, chief rangers, deputy chief rangers, boatmen, car drivers, pump operators tower observers and rangers.

Change in System Over Old

"Many changes have taken place in the forest protection service during the past few years. Out of a service which a few years ago was not even skilled labour and was assigned to any inhabitant of a forest region a service has been developed which requires men with all the abilities of a thorough woodsman, the training of many engineering sciences, necessitating courses of men and a talent for law enforcement and investigation of offenders.

"The new service has developed because of necessity; new methods and equipment have had to be used to keep abreast of inventions in other lines. Many of these have been adapted and adopted.

"Telephony, radiography, meteorology, aviation, topography, range finding and surveying are but some of the sciences upon which we have made a part of methods of detecting and suppressing fires. There is also nothing of the mechanical perfection or equipment in transportation of feeding, transportation and housing men under most adverse circumstances that has not been called into greater care with fires new to the service. In the matter of the actual fighting of fire—never the same—defying all rules—profiting by all experience—we have found new ways for news and decisive reasons.

Trent Inspectorate

"Now a statement of that has been done in the Trent Inspectorate. We divide it into a few lower with parts of which many of you are acquainted. The Trent covers 13 townships with headquarters at Tweed, includes the southern part of Hastings and Northumberland, also the northern parts of Peterboro, Hastings, Lennox and Addington, Frontenac and Lanark Counties and parts of the district of Nipissing—a total of 3,250,000 acres. This area was first organized as an Inspectorate in 1922.

Before Re-organization

"In this area before re-organization under old conditions each employee was given a definite territory to protect. He spent most of his time in patrolling trails or making an occasional trip to an observation point. If he discovered a distant fire outside his territory the knowledge was of no value. If he discovered one on his own territory he went to it and tried to put it out. When he could not do this alone it required from one to three days to secure help. All the time he was engaged in suppression work his district had no protection. He was without support of other members of the service. Co-operation between members was absent and correlation of functions of members of the staff did not exist.

New Systems

"In forest fire protection it is realized that there are three distinct functions of staff—detection, communication and suppression. The success of the permanent staff lookout tower and improved means of communication have revolutionized the whole scheme of fire protection. Ten years ago there was not a permanent lookout tower in the whole Trent Inspectorate. Today, the responsibility for detection of fires on all of the area is entrusted almost entirely to lookouts. Under present conditions lookout stations with commanding peaks specialize in the work of detecting, locating and reporting fires. It properly equipped and manned they can report fires at best the location and approximate size of a fire up to 40 miles or more away. The facts are immediately reported over telephone wires which have been erected and in a few minutes members of the local suppression staff are on their way to the fire. As there is no disruption of the detective agency the territory is protected at all times. Old fires are under continuous surveillance and reinforcements are frequently dispatched on the basis of the lookout report alone.

Staff, Towers and Telephone Lines in the Trent Inspectorate

"For forest protection purposes in the Trent Inspectorate are employed a staff of approximately 60 men, which is supplemented by about 200 men in times of fires. At the time during last season over four hundred men were employed by us for fire suppression. In recent years we have erected seventeen eighty foot towers on highest peaks of land throughout the district. These towers are equipped with an eight foot windowed weatherproof cabin in which is located a tower man oriented in true azimuth with graduations in degrees. An alidade surmounts this map. Telephone lines connecting with our telephone lines are also in the cabin. Towers and rangers are connected by a telephone system. In the Trent Inspectorate we have constructed during recent years over 400 miles of telephone lines for our own use. Incidentally these telephone lines are also used by local settlers as it is realized that a great convenience is given to them and therefore we to communicate with them in the event of a fire occurring. We are operating some of these commercially and a considerable revenue is obtained in this way.

How Fires Located on the Map

"How let me illustrate the working of our system by a simple fire. To facilitate this I have a map before me. Towers and telephone systems. The centre of each yellow circle is the location of towers. Black lines on the map represent O.F.S. telephone lines and the red lines are privately owned lines used by the O.F.S. The tower observer on duty at Cashel Tower sights a fire. He examines it closely and takes a bearing from the Cashel lookout tower which is, we will say 60 degrees. He communicates these bearings to Matawachan and Myers Tower. These towers also take a bearing observing over the same area. The other tower observers immediately do likewise and from these data in all probability have already determined by the Cashel tower observer of their direction readings the fire has been approximately located in degrees and Myers Cave 221 degrees. An inspection of the fire location map gives the fire location accurately as being Lot 9, Concession 11 Hungerford. Ranger Chapman in charge on whose patrol area the fire is burning, is immediately notified of the existence of this fire, its approximate location and directed to keep abreast of inventions in other lines. Many of these have been adapted and adopted.

ROMANCE AND ADVENTURE IN NEW WARNER BAXTER FILM

Based on Denison Clift's story of intrigue in Washington, both political and personal, "Man About Town," the new Fox production comes to the Belle Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily. It depicts the adventures of two life long friends who become bitter enemies when a woman enters their lives.

Set in a locale that includes the dusty sage-brushed sights of a fire, the Arizona desert and the nation's capital, the film is said to convey an intimate picture of political and social intrigue in the international colony. The princesses of the United States Secret Service, as they attempt to unravel a foreign plot, are revealed. With the background of world politics and social functions, the story of "Man About Town" is woven around the indomitable love of the two men for one woman.

Warner Baxter, handsome and talented screen star whose popularity is steadily increased since he came into prominence for his role in "In Old Arizona," appears in the leading part, that of a gentleman gambler. Secret Service agent and lover. Conway Tearle plays an important role as a man, who, while jealous, is tempting to send a friend to his death.

Karen Morley, who recently scored a personal success in "Arsene Lupin," "Scarface," "Letty Lynton," and "Scarface," enacts the leading feminine role—the girl who is loved by the two men. Other personalities in important roles are Lilian Bond, Allan Dinehart, Leni Stengel, Lawrence Grant and Hallwell Hobbes.

Baxter, who has recently appeared in "Daddy Long Legs," "Surrender," "Doctor's Wives," "The Cisco Kid," and other successes, is said never to have played a role better suited to his talents. His romantic and adventurous qualities as an actor are declared to be unusually fine.

The popular Movietone newsreel, a funny Mermaid comedy titled "You Said a Mouthful," and Movietone Entertaining Sportlight reel, and Clifford McCormick and Harold Barrett in a delightful vocal offering have also arranged for presentation with the feature offering.

Two Features Tonight.

A supplementary program progress closes a successful engagement at the Belle tonight when Bill Boyd and Ginger Rogers appear in "Carnival Boat", "Young Bride", a human and appealing story is the second feature presentation and stars Helen Twelvetrees, Phillips Holmes and "Stuttering" Ates and Cliff Edwards. A clever cartoon and the Fox Sound News are also included in the program. The last complete double show commences at 8.30 p.m.

JOAN BENNETT SEEN TODAY IN "CARELESS LADY"

Dinnerware Gift Tonight

"Careless Lady," a new comedy opens this afternoon at the Capitol Theatre. It has nothing of the slapstick about it, but is said to maintain a steady flow of laughs through clever situations and brilliant dialogue. Joan Bennett and John Boles head a notable cast.

The story deals with the plight of Sally Brown, a small town girl who craves adoration instead of patronage from the local boys. Outclassed by her cousin who returns from Paris with stunning gowns and an intriguing reputation, Sally decides to experiment with life in the world and gets forth to conquer. In New York she meets Speakasy, is arrested in a raid, and through the accident of being mistaken for the wife of a well known man, is dismissed in court.

The action gives her the idea of going abroad as a Mrs. instead of as a Miss because of the greater advantages in having a matrimonial status. So Sally uses the names of "Mrs. Stephen Illington" from Boston and sails for de la Paix, where he money makes her a sensation. Unfortunately, however, Mrs. Illington's husband makes a visit to Paris and is intrigued to find he has a double. The complications and when her new "husband" returns to Boston a sensational fiasco hastily back home for peace and quiet, only to find that her "marriage" has been reported.

Desperately inventing a quarrel and a separation to account for the bridegroom's absence, Sally is further amazed to find that he has followed her—under an alias. The complications end in the lady's swift climax.

Miss Bennett as Sally, John Boles as her persistent "husband," Welldon Heyburn, Hardie Albright, Lilyan Tashman, as various admirers, Minna Gombell as Sally's adviser and Cora Lane as her glittering cousin, head the cast of "Careless Lady." Edmund Goulding directed the production for Fox Films.

Robert Riskin writing the screen play and dialogue from the original story by Reita Lambert.

VENTURE ENDS IN BLASTED HOPES

Partners Purchase "Going Concern" That Had "Gone" Too Far

(By The Canadian Press)

MONTREAL—Following their purchase of a "going concern" that in their opinion had gone too far already, Auguste Abadia and Joseph Brailleau took their troubles to court and obtained a decree annulling their capital investment in the Canadian Road Brick Company Limited, a firm devoted to scrubbing the faces of clean-cut Canadian bricks.

Where were the $150 a week profits? Abadia and Brailleau wanted to know. The company, according to them the business, had promised them a handsome profit from the business, they claimed, but there were too few handbrick who wanted the facade of their property subjected to a compressed air sand shower.

A newspaper advertisement was produced in court. The owner of the business was willing to teach the purchasers the intricacies of launching skyscrapers. "No trouble, no losses, easy; will teach business, the chance of a lifetime" . . . ran the advertisement.

Abadia, a carpenter, and his partner Brailleau, a cooming house keeper, found it far from easy. Bertrand they said, disappointed after paying them any lessons. He also took Louis Gauthier, their sole experienced employee, and Bertrand and started up again in the same business. Bertrand admitted in court he had neglected to tell the purchasers that it was only a business for six months of the year. Brailleau and Abadia said they made a total profit of $10 a week—and net losses of $50 a week.

Mr. Justice Beaulniers was sympathetic and ordered the contract annulled. Bertrand must also pay the pair $2,850.

Reddy Loses His Appetite

By Thornton W. Burgess

Some appetites so much may cost as an appetite for goose. And as usual they found that wise old Honker was in charge of the flock and quite aware of the hungry folk growing on hiding around the edge of the pond.

Reddy didn't remain long. "What is the use?" she demanded. "I will not be wasting time on one going hunting where there are no ducks. A couple of fat Mice in my stomach will be far more satisfying than an eyeful of Geese that I cannot catch."

Reddy would not give up so easily and Mrs. Reddy finally left him lying hidden where he could watch those Geese. All that night he remained there without once having a shadow of a chance of getting a Goose. Then, when it was almost time for Peter Rabbit down to stay for that day and another night, Reddy timed his leaps at one of those great birds Reddy's mouth watered, with the result that it was watering most of the next years when the Geese returned there on their long journey either way. They simply couldn't stay away. As usual they found that there were others on hand besides themselves had to catch one. But he didn't have much hope that this chance would come. By the first place there was wise old Honker at the head of the flock and on guard most of the time. Then, too, most of the flock were old with the wisdom of long experience.

However there was the young gander, whom Jerry Muskrat had warned Reddy to look out for before, and two or three others of about his size. None of these, though—just might, happen to make a mistake. It was then that he Reddy waited and watched and watched and waited and his mouth watered and his appetite grew and at last the very thing happened that he had hoped for but not expected. One of those same young ganders left the flock and quacked loudly, and then, with her head held high, proceeded to waddle all over. He quivered so with eagerness that it was a wonder he did not make some of the leaves rustle. He waited until he was sure that she intended to remain there. Then with a spring that carried him an inch at a time, pausing and holding his breath, he crept where Goose moved the least bit. Most birds would not give up so easily. It was too good to be true. It was too good to be true. That dinner of goose was already in his mouth. Anyway that is the way he felt about it.

And then for no apparent reason that Goose got to her feet, gave a loud quack and flapped her wings. It was now or never. Reddy leaped for that Goose. He missed her and knocked sprawling by a blow from one of those wings. Instantly he was on his feet, leaping for that long scaly neck and getting only a mouthful of stiff wing feathers for his pains. Instantly Honker was honking, half running, half flying, his long neck outstretched and hissing angrily. It was right then that Reddy almost lost his appetite.

On almost every home street—or business street, too, for that matter—there is an "eye sore." Where most houses and grounds are a good to look upon, ship-shape, and in perfect order, there squats a disgraceful "tramp"—Neglect.

Lawns are weedy and uncut, flowers are allowed to shift for themselves, the back yard, which might boast a truck garden, is a receptacle for everything, the fence needs painting, the house needs paint. Unconsciously, people say to themselves: "Somebody, who lives here, lacks civic pride," which, of course, when all is said and done, is painfully true.

There are no logical excuses inside of your home. You are. It is "all for one and one for throughout the entire city.

U. S. QUERIES BRITAIN ON WORLD PARLEY

World Senses Gradual Upward Trend, Bishop Lyons States

World Conditions Spur Church Bishop Lyons Tells Ontario Synod

Praise Given League of Nations For Preserving Peace Among Nations at Large in These Trying Times

FIRST CHARGE BY HIS LORDSHIP

No Reason to Believe Recovery From Depression is Just Around Corner is His View

Kingston, May 31 (By The Canadian Press)—"There is no reason to believe that better times are just around the corner. The world has witnessed a record fall in commodity prices, world wide unemployment, unprecedented world depression, and the abandonment by England of the Gold Standard, which has been regarded as something in the nature of the keystone of national and world prosperity. Yet in spite of all, we seem to sense an upward trend in many directions."

With these words Rt. Rev. Bishop John Lyons of the Anglican Diocese of Ontario this morning delivered his first charge as Bishop when the annual session opened here.

World Conditions Challenge.

"World conditions, instead of causing us to slacken our efforts, constitute a challenge to the church and an appeal to her members to keep in the varied demands of these days with the spirit of confidence," he said.

"The days in which the church is called upon to bear witness are far from being peaceful and prosperous. We have just emerged from a difficult year," he continued.

The economic conference which convenes in Ottawa in July should create a prayerful atmosphere. It is the beginning of a greater co-operation between the different units within the Empire, and it is to be hoped the ultimate results will not only benefit ourselves and the Empire, but the world at large."

League of Nations.

While the League of Nations may not have fulfilled the expectations of many, Bishop Lyons continued, "and to not a few may appear to have failed in some respects, yet we all acknowledge it has exercised a wholesome influence. Were the League to cease to exist and functioning, the world today might be in a state of war," he declared.

Bishop Lyons referred to the loss sustained by the diocese in the departure of Dr. C. A. Seager to become Bishop of the Diocese of Huron, and also expressed his keen regret that Most Rev. J. F. Sweeny, Metropolitan of Ontario, has resigned.

NEW ALL TIME LOW IS MADE

Stock Market Continues Dismal Downward Trend

Toronto, May 31.—Toronto Stock Exchange Market continued its dismal downward trend with the resumption of trading and at midday a number of stocks were down to new all time low, although these records were uncovered with only small fractional losses.

Losses this morning were nearly all in point and fraction. C.P.R., Bell Telephone, Montreal Power Levinigen were each off the 1-4 point, Pag-Hersey tubes lost a similar amount. There were small losses in Gypsum, Steel of Canada, Consolidated Bakeries, Dominion Steel, Canada Steamships and most of qla Canadian Canners all dipped off a point.

Ford of Canada, Brazilian, Canada Malting, Nickel were unchanged.

PRICES DECLINE UNDER PRESSURE

Market Has Poor Buying Support and Pressure Exerted

Toronto, May 31—Given poor buying support, and considerable pressure at times, the Toronto Stock and Mining Exchange Market, in forenoon today, more active interested and local stocks showed a decrease from last night's finals when taken at midday.

Higher priced golds lost from five to 25 cents. Teck Hughes dropping the smaller amount to $3.25, Wright Hargreaves nine to $13.50, Hollinger 17 to $4.35, McIntyre 25 to $74.75, Dome 45 to $10.05 and Lake Shore 65 to $25.35.

Macassa met renewed liquidation and sold off another four to 12, Sylvanite low six to 39, and Moss, Kirkland Lake gold and Sladen fell a cent or two apiece.

International Nickel was quiet and practically unchanged but Noranda slipped another 20 to $13.65 and Mackenzie five to 80, balance of the silver shares and the oil group steady.

Like all heroic ventures matrimony demands enthusiasm.

MOTHER SAYS PHOTOGRAPH IS TRICKERY

Believes She and Rector Are Victims of Trap Plot

CASES DROPPED

Bishop of London Speaks of Rector's Work Among Outcasts

London, May 31.—That much discussed photograph of an almost nude young woman, alleged to be Rev. H. F. Davidson, 62-year-old rector on trial before church authorities on immorality charges, was intended for publication in the United States it turned out today.

The mother of the young girl in question testified before the ecclesiastical court at church house, Westminster. Photographers had told her, the mother said, that publication in America might mean a lot for her daughter."

Plot in Trial.

The photograph's in issue in the trial because the prosecution contends it is proof that the rector was somewhat indiscreet, and he avers that he was trapped into posing—a belief which the girl's mother shares with him.

"It was just a disgusting trap well worked out from the beginning," the mother testified.

She had stipulated, she said that her daughter was not to be photographed in the nude, and to make sure the stipulation was obeyed she placed the girl in the rector's care.

Bishop On Stand.

Another witness today was the Bishop of London who told of Mr. Davidson's work for outcasts and said that until the present accusations he never heard an attack on the rector's moral character.

The prosecution announced that all charges against Mr. Davidson involving unknown women would be dropped.

TWO WILL FLY TO EMPYREAN TO GET FACTS

Prof. Auguste Piccard Last year ascended more than ten miles into the outer atmosphere yesterday told the press he may decide very shortly to make his next trip into the stratosphere with the Belgium physicist Cosins, Professor Piccard expressed a desire to go aloft from a North American point, possibly in Canada, to study the influence of the magnetic pole on Cosmic radiation. His balloon, carrying his metal gondola, would be driven by the wave wircas set, to report pressure or to aid in case of a forced landing.

20 MEN LEAVE BY AIR TO BATTLE FLAMES

Sharp Breeze Whips Blaze Mile an Hour

Winnipeg, May 31—Twenty men left here yesterday by plane when it was "town forest flames which had been under control for the past week had suddenly been driven by an east wind into a galloping menace to forest resources in the district of Eagle Lake, a few miles east of Lake Winnipeg.

The blaze had been watched by twenty men last week, but with no rain for three weeks in the district, the blaze burned through the timber three miles in three hours, and the blaze jumped the lake and started inroads on virgin timber which had not before been menaced.

Rain drops and snow flakes are usually charged with electricity.

Trees on Ontario Highways Inspected for Safety Traffic

Ottawa, May 31.—An examination of the trees on all highways in Ontario will be made, an aftermath of the recent tragedy near Chute A Blondeau through which six young persons lost their lives when a tree fell on a passing motor truck.

H. A. Smith, Deputy Minister of Highways for Ontario, who is here attending the inter-provincial roads conference, discussed the tragedy during an interview. The jury had found that had the tree been examined the tragedy might have been prevented.

"We are going to make an examination of the trees on all highways," Mr. Smith stated. "It was a terrible thing and it seems almost impossible to conceive of the tree falling at the exact that meant the loss of these lives."

Hot Air Currents Lift Plane Out of Crater

Glacier Priest Tells of Experiences Flying Within Crater of Aniakchak Volcano in Alaska

KANAKANAK, Alaska, May 31.—Father Bernard R. Hubbard, the Glacier Priest, said today hot currents from the erupting vents in the Aniakchak Volcano crater literally lifted Pilot Frank Dorbandt's plane out of the depths of the crater four days ago.

With Herb Larison, a mechanic, as the other occupant of the plane, the Santa Clara, (Calif.) University Professor said a landing was made inside the great volcano on a small lake and the party spent five hours on the crater's floor. No plane ever has been known to land inside an active volcano before.

Plane Is Lifted

After spending the time exploring amid the steam jets and erupting vents, the problem arose of getting into the air again and climbing above the crater walls.

"Taking off gracefully from the lake," Father Hubbard said, "Dorbandt piloted the plane close to the volcano's 2,000-foot wall, where the hot currents made a strong upward draft.

"He then climbed close to the precipitous cliff. On each turn, the current pushes the plane upward, and finally the last thrust shot our craft over the rim."

Fifty Minutes of Flying

The landing on the lake was made after 50 minutes of flying inside the crater's walls, Father Hubbard said.

A three mile area blown out of the crater a year ago was still erupting, he declared, and a fresh eruption about a mile in area was going on.

The volcano crater, the largest in the world, has been studied for three years by Father Hubbard during his exploration work.

NEW CABINET COMBINATION

French Administration Will Take Office on June 4

Paris, May 31—A general expectation that the new French Cabinet which is slated to take office on June 4 under the Premiership of former Premier Edouard Herriot, Radical Socialist leader, would be a combination of Radical Socialists and Republican Socialists was expressed today.

The prediction was made after the Socialist party committee on resolutions outlined a nine-point programme considering the condition on which they would agree to join with M. Herriot in the formation of a new ministry.

M. Herriot held a conference with President Lebrun before noon and went directly from Socialist to the Radical Socialists headquarters where a session of the party was to determine what the attitude of the party would be toward the Socialist demands.

REAL ESTATE LOST DIGGERS HAD GOT IT

Part of Lot Carried Away By Vandals

The man who once remarked: "Real estate is one thing you could never deteriorate, be lost, could stay, once be stolen', missed out by several parties. Several square yards of turf, to be exact. Lost: part of a lot on the north side of the river.

Yesterday a man who owns a building lot on that side of the river paid a small sum for the piece for the first time in several weeks. Vandals had entered the premises and wrecked havoc. The vandals merely began smooth level turf with the back of a steam shovel and now revealed as a yawning chasm excavated by the encroaching river left bare and gaping. Some person or persons with a pen for nice smooth turf for their backyard had dug up the grassy plot and carried it away piecemeal. The only clue left to the owner of the lot is the marks of a barrow wheel which crosses the sidewalk, but even it has lost itself on the hard road leading past the plot.

A stainless mineral oil has been found for knitting machines.

STOP-BOULEVARDS ON HIGHWAYS DISCUSSED

Historic Map of Canada to Be Prepared

Ottawa, May 31. — Dealing with matters relating to greater safety on the highways, the conference on highways and traffic, held under the auspices of the Canadian Good Roads Association, continued here yesterday. Among the many matters set up for study in the preparation of a historic map of Canada, which will show, not the roads, but the historic sites, was the question of attached to them.

The provincial and national organizations interested in tourist traffic, it is claimed, that the large investment in highways was justified.

Among the many matters presented today was the recent legislation on the question of stop boulevards. This idea has been popularized and was declared to be of benefit to traffic in view of the elimination of accidents.

Bishop Says Hard Times Are Challenge

Fredericton, N.B., May 31.—Hard times are a challenge to the church as well as to a people, Rt. Rev. J. A. Richardson, Bishop of Fredericton, said today in his charge to members of the clergy and laity assembled here.

ORWELL STILL BETTOR'S HOPE

All Britain in Throes of Pre-Derby Excitement

Epsom Downs, Eng., May 31.—(Canadian and Associated Press Cable) — All Britain was in the throes of its annual pre-derby excitement today.

Tomorrow afternoon at around 3 p.m. (8 a.m. E. S. T.) twenty-three of the best three-year-olds of the English turf, dominated by W. M. G. Singer's good colt Orwell, the warm favorite, will race the mile and a half of the historic derby course in the fifty-second running of the Blue Ribband.

Orwell has long been quoted in the betting odds at two to one against —the shortest priced choice in recent years. Lord Rosebery's Miracle is second choice at 100 to 9. Mr. Singer will not be able to see his colt, winner of the classic two thousand guineas a month ago, run. He is ill and under doctor's orders to remain home. If Orwell is victorious, he will be the first to finish line by Mrs. Singer.

Many available round in Epsom Downs was already occupied today and the hundreds of grazes, who annually flock to the Downs for derby day were setting up tents of picturesque variety and the aeroplane, motor car and the traditional color which is already much in evidence for the derby, thousands of people were starting the great trek. Tomorrow, however, will see the largest influx, bringing the derby spectators probably to around the million mark accompanied by London's police strength for which the endless traffic is controlled.

COURT MILLER PRES. Y'S MEN

Annual Reports Presented and Affairs in Healthy Condition

P. Courtland Miller was unanimously chosen as president of the local Y's Men's Club at their final meeting of the second semester held at the Y.M.C.A. last evening. Court Miller has served long and well on the board of directors of the Y's Men's Club and will follow Mel Blanchard who is retiring at the end of the semester which is June 30th this year.

Last night's meeting saw the annual election of officers of the club while the various chairmen of committees presented their year's reports, all of which were adopted and received with appreciation. The financial report showed the club in a very healthy condition and a new budget was proposed by Y's Man, George Paisley for the coming year. After considerable planning on the part of the board of directors the new budget was adopted and an intensive campaign was outlined for the purpose of adding new members to the club for the autumn semester. A special vote of thanks was tendered to George Paisley and Harry Foote for the very proficient financial statement which they presented and while a very hearty vote of thanks was also extended to Norman Ross, this work as secretary during the past few years, Norm having to resign his office due to business reasons.

Many Thousands Jobs.

It was also decided by the members to carry on their meetings throughout the month of June and next week's meeting will see the annual softball game between the married men and the single men of the club which will be followed by a special banquet at Dickens' and Sons restaurant. A delegation was also appointed to attend the annual Y's Men's division meeting to be held in Peterboro on Friday and Saturday of this week.

The election of officers found the slate presented by the nominating committee accepted in full when P. Court Miller was chosen as president; Vic White, 1st vice-president; John O'Gorman, secretary; Harry Foote, treasurer, and Wm. McEwan, Earl Boyce and Eric Sills were elected as the board of directors with Mel Blanchard, Sherriff and Past President Mel Blanchard added as ex-officio members, provided by the Y's Men's International.

Upon being elected to office President-elect Miller rose to his feet to express by thanking the members for the honor bestowed upon him and assured them that he would give the club his hearty support and asked for that same wholehearted support from each individual member. President Mel Blanchard also thanked the members for their support in the past and assured the president-elect of his person support in the future.

Before the meeting ended a vote of thanks was tendered the executive of 1931 for their splendid work. Johnnie O'Gorman acted as chairman for the evening, while Al Walters performed the duties of sergeant-at-arms, much to the chagrin of a few of the members who were called upon to pay various fines.

FISH EATS FISH WHICH EATS FISH

Elmer Lucas Has Best Fish Story of Season

You haven't heard any fish stories until Elmer Lucas gets through telling his. For he stands alone as the only fisherman of the Bay of Quinte to catch fish on the single hook at the same time.

Yesterday, at the height of the day, Mr. Lucas was trolling in the rough water east of the government dock. He had heard the pickerel were biting. Unlike other fishermen who trolled with the bright spinner, he stuck to the live bait and a small minnow swung along in the end of the line.

East of the dock some distance he felt a tug on the line. Then another and another, and then another. Wisely, thought Lucas, and continued to row. Came a vicious tug which made the handmade reel rattle and bounce on the floor of the boat. "I've got a fish, I have," remarked Mr. Lucas, and started to hand over hand the line in. A nine pound pickerel lay flopping in the bottom of the boat. A nice sized fish for any man's river. Elmer crashed it on the head and started for home.

Later that night he opened the fish. Inside the lucknit he found a four-inch fish which has not been named. Inside that one he found a smaller perch. Inside the perch he found a minnow. The minnow was full of eggs belonging to some other fish.

Doubters are reminded that Mr. Lucas had witnesses who watched him disembowel the pickerel.

Sheriff G.H. Stokes and Family Honored by Community at Farewell Function at Tweed

Home at Tweed En Fete as Old Friends Gather to Bid Goodbye

MOVE TO CITY

Worth of Family in Community Extolled By Many Speakers

Residents of Hungerford Township from every section, members of the County Council with whom he was associated for many years and representatives from every walk of life in the community were present last evening, when they gathered at the home of Sheriff George H. Stokes, near Tweed, to bid goodbye to the Stokes family, who are shortly to take up their residence in Belleville. To show here appreciation of the kindliness of this well beloved family, presentations were made to each member of the family. W. E. Tummon, M.P., reading an illuminated address and Richard Graham making the presentation. The Sheriff was given a comfortable chesterfield chair, Mrs. G. H. Stokes a beautiful floor lamp, and Miss Marion a pen and pencil set. Addresses of a complimentary nature were then given by those representing different sections of the community and later the ladies present, who provided all the good things, served a delightful buffet lunch. The gathering was in a nature of a surprise and it is needless to say the Stokes family were more than pleased with the kind thoughts expressed. It was the intention to hold the affair on the spacious lawn but cool weather militated against this procedure.

W. E. Tummon Chairman

W. E. Tummon acted as chairman for the presentation and in opening the programme apologized for taking possession of the home but hoped the evening would be one of enjoyment. He stated they had come to honor a family that had lived among them as one for over thirty years and in that time have endeared themselves to every section of the community. He referred to Mr. Stokes as a successful farmer, a man well filled in community affairs and also one who served his municipality with honesty and conviction in the Council and who is now filling a more important office as Sheriff of the County. Mrs. Stokes and Miss Marion were not forgotten and their worth was extolled as friends of the home and in the church and home life of the community.

"Sheriff Stokes and his family are moving from a home they have occupied for the past 35 years, being the last ones through the township for many generations," said Mr. Tummon. "At all times since coming to the community he has worked for the best interest of the whole and some years ago was honored by being elected Reeve of the municipality a position which he filled with dignity for four years until the more important call came. In the whole district he was held in very conspicuous and as a neighbor was always ready to help all." Mrs. Stokes and Miss Marion have shared with him all the trials and tribulations of making a successful home and they too came in for their share of the honors. Speakers who addressed the gathering, Mr. and Mrs. Dale gave two quartette numbers which were very much appreciated, Miss Lois Richardson being the accompanist. At the conclusion of the reading of the address, Mr. Tummon called upon Sheriff Stokes and Mrs. Stokes briefly to reply and it was with difficulty that they found words to express his thanks and that of the family for the beautiful gifts presented.

Expresses Thanks

"Friends and neighbors are one of the greatest assets a man has," said Sheriff Stokes and on this occasion I can only inadequately express the thanks of myself, Mrs. Stokes and Marion for this wonderful gathering. It is one thing to accumulate friends and another thing to retain that friendship, but in my 35 years in this community I have always tried to retain friends and at every opportunity do my small part in the building up of this community." The speaker referred to the home in which he had spent so many happy years and stated that the farm was standing on historic ground. The owner has the original title which at one time was Crown Land and the scroll is written on split sheep skin. In closing he said he was glad if he and his family had been of service to the community and if they had they were only doing their share. He intimated he would never back often to visit and hoped that all would come to see the family in their new home.

Father J. D. O'Riordan stated it was not a case of painting the rose as Mr. Stokes and his family were worthy of all the nice things that had been said about them. He referred to the fact that Mr. Stokes had made a success of farming and was a man of the people. "I have had occasion to have dealings with Sheriff Stokes and found him on behalf of my people, always fair and willing to serve in any capacity," said Father O'Riordan. "He was always a whole hearted man and a man that took off his coat when there was work to be done. His service for the Township at the County Council was always for the greatest good and memory for he served the whole community irrespective of politics or religion, always looking for one thing, the betterment of his own Township and community.

Sorry Occasion

Rev. E. B. Cook of the United Church expressed his pleasure at being present but was sorry it was made necessary owing to the removal of the Stokes family from the community. They have always been interested in our welfare," said the speaker, and they have filled a place in the home, in the church and in the community that will be hard to replace but Belleville will gain that loyalty and I have no doubt the family will be welcomed with open arms in the County seat. I could not think of Mr. Stokes and his family living anywhere else without some service to the community. Sheriff Stokes has a great heritage in his father and mother and this I know for I have gained knowledge of this wonderful and fine old couple with constant association in the home and it is a matter of much joy visit in their home and hear of things round about us. It is inevitable that he should go on to serve in another community. The sheriff has a fine combination of qualities, having a splendid christian influence, being a successful farmer, and a leader among men. His home has always had the open door with Mrs. Stokes and her daughter always ready and willing to assist in every good cause, and at the same time presiding gently over the household. The community has been favored by them having lived here and the appreciation of a community goes with them to their new home with the hope they will never forget the friendships made on the back concession."

Dr. H. S. Mather was surprised when called upon to say a few words but was glad to do so as the doctor had known the family for over 30 years and in all that time had acted as the family physician and in no home where one becomes intimately acquainted, does he learn all that has had been said was not exaggerated as George Stokes and his family had been true friends, good neighbors, he a good Reeve and no doubt a good sheriff and in the district and one which touched each sheriff to live up to it. He was glad if he had been of service to the community and if they had they were only doing their share. He intimated he would never back often to visit and hoped that all would come to see the family in their new home.

Ex-Warden Adds Praise

Harry Foster of Chapmans expressed the same views as the former speakers and hoped for his continued success. S. B. Rollins, ex-Warden of the County spoke in glowing terms and stated it was a gathering he was not over enthusiastic to attend as it meant the loss from a community of a family that had done much to serve and endear. He spoke of his association with Sheriff Stokes in the County Council for four years and intimated that none had gained the confidence of the members as had Sheriff Stokes done. "He spoke but little in the council chamber," said Ex-Warden Rollins, "but when he did speak his words were careful and his advice on all matters. Auld Lang Syne closed a most successful social and the remainder of the evening was spent in social enjoyment. The following address was read:

Address is Read

To Mr. and Mrs. George H. Stokes and Miss Marion:

"Those who have been intimately associated with you, as friends and neighbors, over a long term of years have assembled this evening, in a spirit of kindliness, that we might express to you, our sincere appreciation, before you move to another place of residence.

"We realize that not less; among the good things, with which Providence has blessed us, are Friends and we desire to assure you, that our hearts go out in grateful recognition of all that, your affection and companionship have meant to us in the past, and may we add—and for all they may still mean in the days to come.

"We are reminded that the entire years of your family and home life, have been spent in our midst. Yours has been a home made sweet and beautiful by love and tenderness, and a home life illuminated by example of spirit, that shone forth to brighten the lives of those around about. You have been interested in your neighbors—individually and collectively. You have ever been ready to take your place and play your part in the community, the church and the municipality, and your efforts in this regard have been an agent for good in the district and one which touched each life in a helpful way. All that has had been said was not exaggerated as George Stokes and his family had been true friends, good neighbors, he a good Reeve and no doubt a good sheriff and in the district and one which touched each citizen of the county. Musty Law May Bar All Anglers from Fishing on Sabbath Day Bathing Also Courts Arrest

Ontario Sportsmen up in Arms Over Enforcement of 1845 Act

TEST CASE WANTED

Angler Stopped as He Casts Line at Eugenia Falls

Toronto, May 31—Out of the misty past have come a few printed words to Ontario sportsmen prohibiting fishing on the Sabbath day, and if the 87 year old section of an Ontario Act were still further enforced, bathing or swimming on the Lord's Day would result in the arrest and fine of all offenders.

While there is little possibility of Toronto's police receiving instructions to arrest all thousands of bathers who disport themselves in the waters of Lake Ontario on the day of rest, the situation is full of danger, according to local club officers, or anglers finding themselves deprived of their Sunday recreation by the waiters' side.

John Sutton, a prominent member of the Toronto Anglers' Association, is the fisherman who found himself to be a victim of a "blue" law which antedates Confederation, and had forgotten was ever placed on the statute books. They also discovered while fishing at Eugenia Falls, Sutton was prosecuted, and as a result of the incident at Eugenia Falls, they will test the matter in the courts and make a test case of it to determine whether or not Sabbath fishing will be allowed to continue in the future.

As far as can be determined, the action of the two officers at Eugenia Falls was based solely on an Act entitled: "Ontario Lord's Day Act," which "Chapter 109 of the Act of 1845, Consolidated Statutes of Upper Canada, Relating to the Observance of the Lord's Day" is unlawful for any person to go out fishing, or to take, kill or destroy any fish, or to use any gun, fishing rod, net or other engine for that purpose."

And for one found swimming on the Lord's Day is declared illegal in the following words:

"And for any person, on that day to bathe in any exposed situation in any water within the limits of any incorporated city or town, or within view of any place of public worship, or private residence."

W. C. Bowman, the general secretary of the Lord's Day Alliance, stated that his organization's association seldom took action in such matters. The main object, he said was to protect workingmen from labor on Sunday.

"Musty law strange" to J. Barrington, assistant to the Deputy Minister of Game and Fisheries, that a game warden should attempt to stop Mr. Sutton fishing, on the grounds that it was against the law. The officer in the department personally enforced the regulations in the Game and Fisheries Act but not enforce the provisions of the Lord's Day Act, he declared.

It may all be a tempest in a teapot, but ardent anglers are marvelling the call to battle the ancient law which would deprive many of them of their one opportunity in the week to cast their lines in lake and stream.

NON-SWIMMER SAVES BOY FROM DROWNING

Jumps in and Grasps Child, Seizes Wharf Peg

Kingston, May 31—A brave act of J. Giguere saved Leslie Conrad, son of Bergen Conrad, Kingston, from drowning Monday. While playing with Anglican Hall the Conrad lad fell into the water, which is about eight feet deep at that point. Giguere, who was working on the railway tracks when he heard a splash. He ran over to the wharf and saw the little boy struggling in the water. Without delay he grabbed him by the coat, then seized a large peg in the wharf and held on until A. McDonald, who heard his cries for help, assisted in getting the boy out of the water. Giguere stated today his own life when he jumped in as he knew he himself could not swim a stroke.

The Red Deer in Their Own Haunts in North

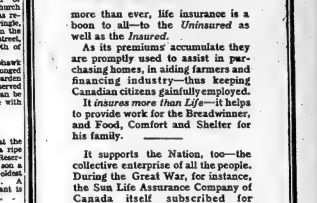
A setting sun slanted long shadows through the pines and poplars of a forest trail in the northland. A warm, lazy day was coming to a close, giving way by brightness to the purple haze of an early dusk. Only in the west a crimson sunset framed a setting sun which tipped the surrounding hills and trees with streets of fire. . . . A breeze rattled the dead leaves of an old birch and flickered in the ground, circling lastly. It shoop a clump of nearby Spinbark. A big chipmunk suddenly darted across the trail ahead, with a flick of his mischievous tail. Scolded of a nearby pine, and eyed the invader with little shoe button eyes while it scolded at the intruder. A partridge drummed in the distance, and the first lilting cadence of the evening from a whippoorwill, floated faintly behind. Then a small, unafraid, hobbled across in front with leisurely ease, a sleepy little chickadee murmured its last few evening chirps. Soft pine needles under foot, red dust on the ground where the going is easier. A tiny chipmunk darted off the path, to disappear under a rotting log. Frogs peeping, Nature is in a hush. Not a tall pine that was mercifully spared the woodsman's axe forty years ago.

Great Moose Lush

The path goes downward. Grass grows more lush. A damp breeze carrying with it the scent of the marsh. Soon past the path takes a bend in the now almost invisible trail. . . . and suddenly stand on open space fringed with drooping alders. Here the tall grass arching out of sight amongst a almost knee deep.

Something at one side of the clearing attracts your attention. A doem brown shape, with head down, calmly grase ..... Red deer! One of the grandest sights of in nature. You stop in your tracks. You are spellbound with the thrill of seeing them so close in their natural surroundings. The gentle breeze carries the scent of you to them; the soft path of dead pine needles no telltale footstep.

A vagrant current which has been eddying around you changes direction. A startled doe lifts her head backwards across the marsh as it strengthen.. The tall grass bends and sways. Another doe and fawn. The beautiful buck on the fringe lifts his head in the air from your left, tests the air with sensitive nostrils, sends a challenge ringing. Antlered heads fly up in alarm. Then with a graceful dignity alarm and rove hither and thither seeking the cause of the alarm. Thy fawns play on the edge of the marsh, another deer-prods them gently with her nose.



Separates from Herd

He separates from the herd and circles warily, with head up and nose high, testing the air with each step. While flags stand erect, and delicate hoofs ready to fly at the slightest sound. Fourteen beautiful deer and as many fawns. Your shrink closer to the tree trunks which you stand. Another current of air from your direct.. catches the buck as he slowly advances. Another whistle brings him in genuine alarm..... He wheels and . . . . With the signal of the buck the alarm is broadcast to the band. Heads lifted, white beards flicker, rippling forms of action..... hooves drum, in single file they fly towards the nearest cover. A solitary white green swallows them up; they melt into the deep woods.

Wives in winter..... flies and mosquitoes past the time of the time. Men with guns, or men just merely curious to see what is in the bush before them ..... but men with axes, saws, and carrying with them the hated scent. ..... all they want is to be left alone, to be let live their lives in peace. . . . . Year by year the woodsman's axe goes farther and farther into the bush; year by year the deer and the wild things of the woods gradually are forced backwards. Where will it all end. And when will become of the deer fifty years from now?

The above was an actual scene in the woods just a mile north of Hemmon Lake in Limerick township as seen by a reporter a week ago.

Bring Back Prosperity

In times like these...

more than ever, life insurance is a boon to all—to the Uninsured as well as the Insured.

As its premiums' accumulate they are promptly used to assist in purchasing homes, in aiding farmers and financing industry—thus keeping Canadian citizens gainfully employed.

It insures more than Life—it helps to provide work for the Breadwinner, and Food, Comfort and Shelter for his family.

It supports the Nation, too—the collective enterprise of all the people. During the Great War, for instance, the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada itself subscribed for $70,000,000 Canadian and allied government war loan bonds.

Last year the Sun Life subscribed $23,000,000 to Canadian government issues. A portion of the proceeds of these loans was to relieve unemployment. Even the jobless share indirectly in the benefits of life insurance.

The Sun Life is an important factor in restoring prosperity to Canada. For over sixty years it has been privileged to serve its policyholders and proud to serve the State. To-day, its world-wide organization and facilities make it more serviceable than ever to the whole community.

CAPT. JOHN SLATTER HONORED BY TORONTO

Bandmaster's 37 Years' Service Recognized

Toronto, May 31—Toronto's senior bandmaster, Capt. John Slatter, musical director of the 48th Highlanders, was yesterday honored for 37 years' continuous service by the city council.

Mayor Stephen Sousa informed him five times the money he was getting in Toronto, but he preferred to remain here and bring up his family under the British flag. Capt. Slatter declared after the mayor had presented to him an address recognizing his services.

"Terms of more musical city in the British Empire than Toronto," he went on. "We have 26 bands, 14 of which are military bands. What a glorious asset. I know of no other British city that has so many bands."

Capt. Slatter hoped the presentation would not be looked on as a farewell ceremony.

SEE LOWER TAX ERA

Members of the city council look forward to an era of lowering tax rates during the coming years, inaugurated this year with the cut of half a mill off the rate for public school supporters. All obligations have been floated, among them, a sale of bonds which cost the present year considerable to handle, for work completed before this year. With no such large undertakings to handle, and with what is believed to be ample provision which will prevent a deficit, the council, both mayor and aldermen feel that they have done well in starting the trend towards lower tax rates.

A SATISFACTORY LOW RECORD

In one of the strange combinations of circumstances which ever and anon occur, Belleville's death rate for the month of May stands at two, an unprecedently low figure. This total does not take into account deaths which took place outside of the city limits.

This speaks for health if anyone wishes to capitalize the low death rate.

THE SPEAKING FAULT

The reference of His Excellency the Governor General to the insatiable demand of Canadian audiences for speeches from visitors was timely. While it is a tribute to His Excellency and others to be called upon to make speeches and be quoted everywhere they go, it is a demand upon the time and energy of public men which ought not to be. It is not so in England where the national reserve accepts the view that public men should possess some time of their own.

But some Canadians do not seem to want any time of their own.

Canada has grown to be a country wherein banqueting associated with after-dinner speaking has become a mania. Gatherings about the hospitable board are never to be branded, even when business is to be discussed, but to have "set" speakers on every occasion of getting together is more than enough. What Canadian wives feel in regard to this everlasting function business to which Bellevillians have fallen victims like the residents of every other town and city of Canada can only be guessed. While it rids the wives of the presence of the husbands at home it interferes with the routine of the home to which the housewives are accustomed.

A speechless banquet where enjoyment prevails, stories are told, and a good time had, is possible in Canada? Canadians may reach this ideal state some day, but the time is not yet.

His Excellency by a little gentle banter can lead the way to the correction of some of these speech gatherings, he will have served the people well. Really it sometimes takes one from another country to show us our faults, and this dinner-speaking fault is one of them. Perhaps the radios will help to cure the people of this obsession of "gabbing."

IN EUROPE

How susceptible to every movement in the world today nations are, is evidenced in Germany where the Government has fallen and there is a possibility that German Fascism may come to the helm of the state. The peculiar situation which came suddenly upon Germany has startled France which does not know what to think upon the attitude of the Hitler party. The further announcement that Germany may default part of the war debts is another interesting development.

In the time approaching where some solution may be reached, whether final or not? Only the future can tell. In three years many series of developments began which forced upon a reckless world retrenchment and the facing of issues which had been shelved. Only in that sense the world must be three years closer to the change than it was three years ago.

Meantime the world speaks to Washington where the battle, political and financial is going on and to Europe where the situation is acute in many countries.

Standing over all is the picture of Britain which has evidently got her feet under her and is taking steps towards rehabilitation of national and international importance.

FLOWERS AND SHRUBS

Spring flowers have been blooming in many gardens of Belleville for weeks, doing their best to brighten the outward world with the deep purples, reds and golds, set in a world of intensifying green, and in a chorus of musical notes from the feathered songsters in trees and on roof-tops. The early blooms are passing into the more fragrant odors of late spring, or early summer.

Spring has been backward ever since the first week of March. Warmth of winter which prevented the mercury going down to zero during the entire season was succeeded by tardy lethargic spring, the results of which are yet felt.

Flowers have been the bright spot in a slow spring season.

Those who have given their time to the development of the lawns and gardens which have since such a wealth of color upon the city streets deserve commendation so that they will continue their efforts from year to year.

MASQUERADERS
By Aline Michaelis

All men have alien moods they sometimes don
When they are shaken by life's hours of stress,
Like robes a masquerader might put on
To hide his sober and accustomed dress.
A gay and laughing front, a cynic's air,
Indifferent, aloof and very wise;
These are the makeshift garments one may wear
When he would shield his soul from prying eyes.

And strangers look thereon and are misled;
They criticize the hard, sardonic way,
Quite certain they a being's depths have read
In the strange testaments chosen for a day.

The eyes of love alone are not betrayed;
They find the truth behind the masquerade.

THAR'S GOLD IN THEM THAR HILLS, said the old prospector, in one of Bret Harte's pen pictures of the days of '49, thereby coining an expression which has survived many years and is still going strong. Everybody knows that Canada is rich in iron and almost every other kind of mineral in the Hills and Valleys of Hastings. Recently copper discoveries have been made leading to the opening up of the copper coins cast up by the plough in the fields. Late-t discovery in this line seems to be a half -enny token, dated 1811, found by Leo Parr-r on the farm of William Waterhouse, 3rd concession of Sidney. Keep on finding the pennys, my lads, and the pounds will take care of you bimeby, maybe, perhaps.

TULIPS, TALL, STATELY and beautiful in their many shades and tints of marvellous coloring, hundreds of them, have made a show place of the private park of C. J. Symons, Commissioners, for more than a week and many citizens have visited this bower of beauty and feasted their eyes upon the sight. It is eminently fitting that the head of the Parks Board should have a private park of his own, and fortunate for the citizens of Belleville she is such a lover and authority on flowers of all kinds. Fortunate for him, also, is the fact that he has a wife who is also possessed of fond of flowers, and can share with him this labor of love, this walk and talk with Nature in her most sublime mood. Just now it's tulips, but soon the list of specialties will come with another riot of color, and the time of roses, most beautiful of the great Master Gardener's masterpieces, will be upon us. Many and varied are the plantain exhibitions. Their garden might well be called an international, one for they have imported bulbs and seeds and shoots from Holland and other European countries, and seldom fail to produce as good or better a bloom than the original—and best thing about this private park garden is the fact that Mr. and Mrs. Symons are not one bit selfish about their treasures. They like to have others share with them their admiration of the beautiful. Mr. and Mrs. Symons live at 32 Sinclair street and their beautiful garden is close by.

CONSTANT DRIPPING wears away the stoutest stone, says a philosopher, and constant pecking wears away the strongest nerves, according to a Brockville man who was being annoyed and driven to distraction by the pecking of a woodpecker near his home telephoned the police to see if something could be done about it, arresting the woodpecker for disturbing the peace, or somefin. Thus is industry and philanthropy discouraged and the woodpecker trying to peck a peck or two of insects out of the trees around the peevish man's domicile gets the hook.

Other Papers' Opinions

A THRILLING DISCOVERY.

Travellers through the Laurentian have been struck by the forests of balsam and jack pine which nobody seemed to want. An enormous waste was apparent to the non-technical observer. It is now announced from Sault Ste. Marie that these trees are unsuitable for pulpwood because of the heavy content of pitch, which could not be removed. Mr. Otto Brauns, technical engineer of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, is reported to have developed a system by which the pitch content will be eliminated and a much greater percentage of balsam and jack pine can be used than formerly.

Canada's investment in the paper industry runs into hundreds of millions, and the export of newsprint is one of the main props of our foreign trade. Hence any process which will increase the raw material at the disposal of this industry, and thus prolong its life, is of the greatest importance.—Toronto Globe.

SALT-WATER FISH.

Hudson Bay and James Bay make a better showing as fishing resorts after a discussion in the House of Commons a few days ago. One report presented fish in more than its own ordinary degree as fish, but Mr. Bredette claimed that it was unfair, because the commissioner was only about a fortnight to cover an area of the extent of that of Lake Superior. He showed from a departmental report of 1930 that 1,000 tons of fresh water and salt water fish in Hudson Bay. Moreover, there are great numbers of whales, white whales and walrus which live exclusively in the bay. Their commercial value would not be there if there were no fish. From Dr. Bruce, Minister of Railways, recorded that when he was in Churchill last summer he enjoyed eating caught that same fish taken from Hudson Bay and presented to him by the Indian chief member for Nelson.

Mr. Bredette said that he did not depend entirely on documentary evidence. He had lived in that country for eighteen years and thought he knew something of its resources. He had a canoe on the bay and went out in a small boat, cruised up and down the bay and found there a lot of fish they could possibly bring in. Some fishermen from Ontario with a small boat caught 250 pounds of salmon in the harbor on June 18. After that there was a splendid run. Bay almost as far as Chesterfield Inlet. On the way down Lake Lyall 150 pounds of salmon, 3,430 pounds of salmon trout and 1,000 pounds of cisco, which is a type of herring. They also caught a few cod. All along the coast of the bay it would be full of capling, a species of the herring family. Mr. Bird stated that the east side of Hudson Bay, which is Ontario territory, was rich in 1,200 miles, and that fish are reported to be even more plentiful on the west side of the coast. The captain of one of the grain boats last fall told him that he had seen the fish man vessels were fishing outside the bay. It is not likely they would come all the way from France and Newfoundland merely for the scenery.—Mail and Empire.

HUNGER FOR SPEECHES.

Our mania for speeches from distinguished visitors was given full vent last week. In the short compass of a day's visit to that city the Governor-General made no fewer than five addresses, all of which he delivered with good grace and to excellent taste. But in the middle of his speech to the Canadian Club Lord Tweedsmuir was himself interpolated the following protest:

"Governors-General have been barking under the fair flower of this generous country long enough. Governor-General having eaten an agreeable luncheon, having enjoyed the agreeable company of one of the intimate neighbors, is then expected to get up and talk for an hour of an address to his assembled hosts. Now, that is nonsense. It is what it seems to me an exact reversal of what ought properly to happen. I am not addressing you on the other foot. I have come here today to learn about London, and not to tell you about it. thinking and what London is doing for the Dominion, and how the Empire I am here to be educated, not to instruct, and I hope that I may be allowed to sit and impart information to you. If I had the organization of the members of the club would be called upon to tell me all they know about this busy city of theirs, each from his own particular angle."

The Governor-General, as he remarked, has taken the advice and has proceeded with his address. But the organization of arrangements receive distinguished visitors, well take some account of the protest ed on this occasion and give guests more opportunity both to tender and to receive necessary information.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

HOW MUCH DO YOU KNOW OF YOURSELF?

Knowledge of Psychology Essential to Self-Knowledge

By Louis E. Bisch, M.D., Ph.D., Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

LOUIS E. BISCH

Most of us know a lot about many things. Perhaps we even know something about ourselves. But how much do we know about ourselves? Are we as familiar with ourselves as we should?

Until twenty or thirty years ago, we, as a rule, paid little attention to the mind and its functions. We neglected study. Why this should be so is not easy to understand, unless its intangibility, hence its difficulties, was the reason. Yet can any group be more important than the mind, which is the directing organ of the entire body? Without the mind that directs it, what would all other parts be to do with or for it?

Within this day and age at least we are living in times where knowledge is expanding by leaps and bounds and in all fields; and of late years as never before, scientific and practical knowledge of the mind has been found breaking through the veil of mystery that has for ages enshrouded it, but thousands of popular books are available on this understandable English.

Psychology, the mind and a scientific paper or journal on the mind, are no longer terms limited to the realm of the intellect and the emotions of professors and students. It is not more so, than any work on physiology or chemistry.

Per, actually, the mind is a physiology, for it is the organ that governs its action, and besides, it is also! And even more important and thrilling is the fact that psychology, the mind, takes places one in the best possible position to change and train thought and behavior, so that it will bring the highest and most rewarding results.

Therefore I would counsel each and every one of my readers to take up the study of psychology. Even children should appreciate the marvels of their own mind, and their parents will find the study is infinitely interesting. Many readers, I feel confident, have experienced much satisfaction from my articles, but know not only how to get a perfect reflection of them, but also appreciate the advantages to be gained thereby.

Do you, for instance, know the difference between the faculty and attributes a faculty such as memory, reasoning, imagination, and will power? Do you know what a nerve habit is? Do you know what purposes for all the world like an organized habit is?

Have you ever thought over the difference between the conscious, unconscious or subconscious mind, and the importance of each? Or experiences from the cradle up? Have you ever heard of a "complex"? What psychologists term mental and nervous "complexes"? Are you prepared to cope with or to suit your fellowmen?

These are only a few questions, the answers to which any book on psychology can supply. Once you have mastered it, you will surely find it more fascinating than a detective story.

STABILIZATION OF EMPIRE CURRENCY

Official Statement Issued at Regina

Regina May 31—Investigation into the possibilities of a stabilized Empire currency is the first recommendation of a number presented to the Saskatchewan government by representatives of approximately 30 farmers organizations here in session from time to time to frame such outline as Saskatchewan will recommendation to the Imperial conference at Ottawa in July. The first official statement on the deliberations was issued by John McFarlane, Provincial Treasurer, yesterday. Mr. MacPherson stated that the government would give the recommendation the most careful consideration. The organizations' representatives sat as a large committee under the chairmanship of Hon. W. C. Buchanan, Minister of Agriculture.

Last year Nova Scotia exported about 85 per cent of her total commercial yield of 1,426,147 barrels of apples.

About 440,000 barrels, or more than one third of Nova Scotia's apple exports last season, went to London, England.

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 31, 1912.

The meeting of the city council was in session until four o'clock in the morning. Some eventful things happened during the long seance. Ald. Robinson resigned the chairmanship of public works, the new by-law and many other by-laws were read and a large part of the time was taken up with the reading of them. A deputation from the Board of Trade headed by Mr. John Gillespie and Mr. H. F. Ketchenon addressed the council regarding a grant of money to be expended in advertising the city and district in Great Britain. Mr. Arthur Gaul spoke in support of a petition asking for a sewer on West Bridge street. Those present were Mayor Vermilyea, Aldermen Robinson, Canning, Wallace, Alford, Bogle, Lott, Ketcurdy, Slater, Parks, Panter, Woodley, Chown, Wilde and Clarke.

At the banquet which was given at the Hotel Quinte in honor of Sir Sam Hughes, K.C.B., the Law Association of Hastings County, the Bench, Bar, county president, occupied the chair and Mr. M. Meagher, K.C., vice chair. Many excellent speeches were delivered and interesting facts of past years were recealed. The evening was voted by all present to have been most enjoyable.

Among the toasts proposed, mentioned, the following were present: Judge Deroche, Col. S. Hughes, K.C.B., Lieut.-Col. H. A. O'Rourke, James Pratt, O.T.R., Inspector Greig, Belleville; Conways, A. A. McDonald, W. Carnew, Ald. Canning, Ald. Ketcurdy, Herriott Morrison, E. D. O'Flynn, R. D. Fonton and Charles Payne, last speaker.

An Anglican Mission Chapel has been opened at Deseronto, Rev. Mr. Napanee. Sir Richard Cartwright gave the site for it. Cartwright gave the site for it. Rev. Mr. Cooke, rector of the first school house in Napanee, preached the opening sermon. Rev. John A. Macdonald used to act in old days as Mr. Cooke's curate for the first missionary, Rev. Saltern Givens.

Two policemen have been placed in the central school at Kingston and the boys are afraid to call an hour each day practising. It is a good idea and worth imitating in Belleville.

Messrs. L. R. Terwilligar, W. W. Power, James Brown and W. Deshane went up the steamer North King to Rochester Sunday night to spend Decoration Day there.

HEARD ON THE STREET

(By Jay, Dee.)

AROUND THE TOWN—

Throughout the city the glorious tulips which have been brightening up the old corners have now finished their blooming, and only the memory of their beauty will remain. A riot of color formerly held away. Now the tulips are over and the blooms, the peonies and other harder varieties of flowers are coming into bloom and striking perhaps than the tulips but with a stronger perfume. Down in the north end of the city on Dundas Street east, considerable repairing of houses has been noticed. Along near the tourist camp in the north end of the city a lar is being excavated for a house which will soon be commenced to be structured. Lower down another home is being readied for a new house which will soon be built in front of it. Not long ago, on another street, in the north end, which a local contractor bought and commenced to build, there existed one perfectly good bottle of rum which had been stored away in the boards a long long time ago. The age of the contents was plainly marked on it, and was given as 1870, and those who have observed the character remarked "filled with the best."

A local young man, after being given permission by the mayor, has built himself a summer cottage on Bayshore. Sometimes he goes there bodily with thoughts of escaping the summer heat, but when he arrives, and proceeded to pitch it on the north shore of the bay, he found himself, some distance west of Rossmore. After he had built it, he found it returned back home to Belleville for some more articles, and when he got back found everything else gone. One cottager who owns a cabin back of the city has also fixed up with so many ingenious devices that a couple of extra woods ever happened to so much as look at it. Some time ago the front windows, he'd be scared out of five years' growth, a couple of extra shot guns, plus a lot of other loaded guns and extra fittings start to make the inmate the cottage be meddled with.

The strangest spectacle of a cylinder head of a motorcar engine blown out through the hood of the machine was witnessed in a local garage the other day. The young man who owned the car took the cylinder head to a machine shop and had a one-eighth of an inch ground off it to give it higher compression. He got it back and proceeded to put the head on. The next day he was seen speed five times last evening between the city and Trenton. Before he translens looking for "admeforsuppesoffret." A young man who lives a shady trail from one of the local boatstand for the swift-speed of the old tub. He was content to step up the speed of the old tub, and then set out for a tour of the upper waters of the bay. Before he reached the vibration of the large engine in the small hull shook it to pieces, and left him with the bottom of the boat, and the whole thing sank. He was soon in shore, but drowned, and hitchhiked the way home. He has since had the engine contegy with an outboard on a punt.

In May 28 issue of the Oshawa Times an editorial note declares: "Prohibition is dead." Perhaps it is, but without a newspaper after having been published for a good weekly for over 60 years." All of which will be read with interest by Mr. Dorer, present, owner and publisher of the Times, on the recent occasion of the local restaurants the other evening. The customers disappeared in the direction of the swinging doors leading to the kitchen after the proprietor had just come he had given her his order for a bowl of "Dinner Stew" and a cup of tea. "One up, chef, for that pie-faced waitress," remarked one of the party. "Bring plenty of hot water in it." Possibly she didn't like the customer's way to another restaurant, evidently written by some wit who frequents the place, and "Dinner Stew" was brought in.

IN BED WITH BACKACHE

"Two years ago I suffered with severe pains in the small of my back, and could with difficulty hold myself erect. At times I had to go to bed for a week at a time. I went to and from hospital for 6 months, and they certainly did me good, but they told me they could do no more. I took medicine, but that I needed complete rest for 6 months away from the children. I could not bring myself to leave them, but finally I did so. I did not go to hospital any more. I started using Kruschen Salts and have had no troubles with my back since."—Mrs. W. Kruschen contains vital salts that help the kidneys to the root cause of backache. Soon after you start Kruschen, the sharpest pains of backache cease. As you persevere with the "little daily dose" the twinges become less and less frequent, until finally you hardly know what an ache or pain is. Then, if you're wise, you'll prevent the possibility of a relapse by continuing the tiny, tasteless pinch of Kruschen every morning.

"Duke." He was accompanied by several of his henchmen and a strong alcoholic smell. To them everything seemed too tame. As a result they had motored to the next village point, Consecon, and from some outside point had brought in a bottle of refreshments, which, nevertheless a large number of people assembled to greatly to the assembly the fact that the town had not had that thrill in many years. The yea men with him agreed perfectly with Duke that it was extremely rank. Further than that he could lick anybody in the town and that he had licked his hands behind his back. The local boys smiled but said nothing. Failing to get a rise out of them, the Duke, in his turn became disgusted. They offered to fight the quiet locals. They declined with thanks. Then they tried to start a fight. They were brandished and the Duke and his gang left. Under the arm of one of the boys the Duke screwed up a newspaper. It was a local large sized bundle. The little chap he wrestled down to very small bundle. "What's in them apples?" asked him.

"How would you like a punch in the nose—just for luck?" he asked the little lad.

"Huh! I was in dry response from the little lad. "On your way back to the locals before I get a grip too rough for you."

The Duke swung first but he never connected. Something hard and fast jolted off his button and sent electric shocks down into his legs.

"Who was that guy? He asked as he came to outside of the gang-way ten minutes later.

"Search me, but one of them boxin' guys they have in this town. He was only havin' a little fun.... Come on, let's get home...."

Legion Advocates Fund For Jobless

Toronto, May 31—Dominion-wide unemployment relief and insurance was endorsed by unanimous resolution at the close of a special meeting of the executives of 43 posts of the Canadian Legion in Toronto and district.

Controller James Simpson was the principal speaker, outlining forms of health and unemployment insurance legislation in force in other countries. He dilated particularly upon the system adopted in Wisconsin, where the entire burden of unemployment relief is borne by employers, and no share is borne by employees or the state, as in other cases.

Judging by the delay in disposing of many claims, the Canadian Pensions Board is more concerned with saving money than with the humanity of getting relief where relief is needed, said D. M. Turley, provincial secretary-treasurer of the organization.

TWO MEN DROWN.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 31—Two men, of unknown identity, have lost their lives by drowning at Copper Lake, according to advices received from that point. Finding of a canoe, a man's cap and supplies floating on the surface of the lake, and then with the humanity of getting relief where relief is needed, said D. M. Turley, provincial secretary-treasurer of the organization.

HARRIS' CREW WIN EIGHT OF LAST 9 GAMES

Tigers - Show Fighting Qualities and Are to Be Feared

SENATORS SLUMP

Boston Braves Are Also Taking The Skids in National Loop

BY GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Detroit Tigers, still getting better pitching and hitting than any of their western neighbors, had slipped back into second place in the American League today, a half game ahead of the faltering Washington Senators.

The fact, almost unnoticed in the turmoil of yesterday's Memorial Day doubleheaders, is eloquent of the fighting qualities of Manager Harris' team.

Off to a flying start the Tigers set a hot pace in the opening weeks of the campaign and were leading the league until they made their first trip east.

Unable to maintain their fast clip the Bengals tumbled down to fourth place and the consensus was they had shot their bolt. But they started another drive a week ago and have won seven of their last eight games, and today Harris' crew looks like anything but a false alarm.

Heavy hitting won yesterday's first game from the Athletics, 11-8, and tight pitching by Tom Bridges took the second, 4-0.

Senators Beaten Twice

It took the assistance of the Philadelphia Athletics to plant the Tigers in second place. The Mackmen trimmed Washington twice, 12-3 and 8-6, before 40,000 fans at Shibe Park. Jimmy Foxx's 30th home run with two on beat Alvin Crowder in the nightcap.

The Yankees dedicated a memorial to their late leader, Miller Huggins, and fattened their league lead with another of victories over the Red Sox, 7-4 and 13-5. The Sox climbed on Herb Pennock for 10 hits in the first game, but the veteran stuck it out to win.

Completing a series of clean sweep in the American League, the Cleveland Indians beat Chicago twice, 12-6 and 12-11. A four run rally in the last inning put over the latter in the nightcap and stirred up a round of fisticuffs between several of the White Sox and Umpire Geo. Moriarty.

National League

The Boston Braves' pennant aspirations received a severe jolt as they dropped two decisions to the Brooklyn Dodgers. Watson Clark evened them into submission 6-2, in the opener and a two-run single by Lindstrom in the tenth decided the nightcap 4-2.

Rogers Hornsby helped the Chicago Cubs climb their double bill with St. Louis. After the Cardinals had driven Burleigh Grimes from the box in the first game, 7-1, 6-4, the Cubs' pilot hit a home run and a double off Clyde Shoun to help take the nightcap 6-2.

Two Brooklyn pitchers, Watson Clarke and young Van Mungo, turned in identical 4-2 wins as the Dodgers swept their bill with the Phillies, 4-2 and 5-3. Both allowed but four hits and Mungo struck out twelve.

Cincinnati and Pittsburgh broke even, the Reds taking the morning game behind Lee Meadows' tight pitching and the Pirates grabbing the second 5-2, as Bill Swift allowed but five hits.

Frothblower Wins at First Asking

Toronto, May 31. - Frothblower, carrying the silks of the R. W. R. Smith Stable, scored his first victory yesterday in the running of the Dashrolls purse, feature event of the opening day's program at Thorncliffe Park. The two-year-old son of Cudgel-Clayboerti, making his initial start of the season, finished strongly under careful handling of Jockey Frankie Mann and beat Young Billy of the Seagram stable to the wire by a length with Aymond in third position.

The victory netted last year's King's Plate winner $1,050.

MANAGER MONTREAL ROYALS KNOWS BASEBALL

The Montreal Ball Club, under the management of Ed Hanlon, has been going great guns and is a real threat for the pennant of the International League this season. Recently this team won a nice winning streak and it looked as if nothing could stop them. Then came their thirteenth game on Friday the thirteenth after twelve straight wins and it was too much even for this stellar aggregation of ball players and they dropped it. Montreal fans have taken him and his team to their hearts and turn out in their genuine ball.

thousands for the home games. The record so far is some 20,000 paid admittances for one day. BIG BATS OF BISONS BLAST MAPLE LEAFS

Games Are Lop-Sided and Homers Like Singles

REST SPLIT

Rochester Comes From Behind to Split Twin Bill

(By the Associated Press)

Ray Schalk's Buffalo Bisons registered the International League's only gain on the Memorial Day and they did it with a fence-shattering barrage for which there hardly seems to be any precedent.

Drawing the Toronto Maple Leafs as their holiday playmates, the Bisons scored 44 runs on 58 hits, including eight home runs, one triple and seven doubles. Had the second game not been limited to seven innings there's no telling what further damage the Big Bison bats might have done.

With Fred Fussell pitching fourhit ball in the opener, Buffalo won as it pleased, 14-1.

Toronto's standpoat as the Bisons made 34 hits good for a 29-7 victory. Miller, Winsett, Ryan and Crouse hit home runs in the first game for Buffalo and George Detore contributed three and Earl Carnegie one in the nightcap. Detore got six straight hits in the second game and clouted two of his three homers in the sixth inning, when the Bisons scored 20 runs.

The pet result of all this firing was to give Buffalo undisputed possession of first place in the standing. All other clubs divided double headers.

Homers Helped

Frank Packard's two home runs helped Baltimore wallop Reading 12-4 in the first game of the Keys' game back to take the second 6-4, as Miller held the Indians to seven hits.

Newark really won the first game from Jersey City 9-4, scoring five runs in the eighth. Dutch Ehrhardt's arm turned the tables behind Art Herbert effective relief job in the second 7-2. Bota Nekola started this battle for the Bears but walked the first three batters he faced and he was promptly benched.

After losing their first to Montreal, 4-2, Rochester pulled the second out of the fire in the closing frame and last frame by an eight to seven count. George Puccinelli helped with two on settled the affair after Montreal apparently had the game won.

Metzler Modernize Method in Church Finance

Toronto, May 31.—The Anglican Synod of the Province of Ontario could take no action regarding the resignation of Archbishop A. U. Dewdney Sweeny until the House of Bishops of the Ecclesiastical Province of Ontario had met to consider it, R. W. Allin, Diocesan Secretary, explained to the Synod delegates present at a dinner here last night preliminary to the sessions which begin today.

Several speakers participated in a discussion of the use of modernized methods in handling church finances and a strong plea was made for the adoption by the Synod of the new pension scheme for the clergy.

INTER CITY DAY FOR ROTARIANS IS ENJOYED

Golf at Country Club With Luncheon Proves Decided Hit

PRESENTATION

Rev. G. A. Leichliter Gives Address of Evening

Monday was Inter-city Day with Belleville Rotary Club when the members entertained large delegations from Rotary clubs in surrounding communities. Trenton and Campbellford were represented by almost one hundred per cent. of their membership, while Napanee, Port Hope, Cobourg and Bowmanville sent large delegations. Golf at the Country Club in the afternoon proved very acceptable entertainment for many of the visitors while others explored the many beauties of Belleville. Golf prizes were awarded Dr. Drury, of Trenton; Dr. Hagerman, of Cobourg and Aubrey Pringle, of Napanee.

In the evening dinner was served at the Country Club to more than two hundred and an evening of drama and lively sport with President Gerry Ketcheson in the chair; Jamieson Bone, sergeant-at-arms; Bert Hagerman, pianist, Bert Mahaffy and his splendid orchestra supplying a splendid program of music and the Rotary Minstrels adding a quaint touch of rollicking numbers. Harold Barrett and Tunes Bailey were the vocal soloists. Aubrey Pringle, also sang several songs in his customary fine style.

A very pleasing feature of the evening was the presentation of a handsome silver water jug to Ketcheson, retiring president of the city, having served his connection with the C. J. Cash Company, to accept a position with a firm in Galt. Rotary esteem for Ketcheson's work was shown by the leaving the city was ably expressed by Past President Ed. Hanlon, who in feeling terms expressed the appreciation of Rotarians for his services. A suitable reply was made by Mr. Ketcheson. Mr. and Mrs. Ketcheson were also presented with a gift by the members of the various clubs represented.

No Rotary program would be complete without the songs contributed with Irish wit and philosophy by Past President Charlie Dolan, and as usual Charlie was equal to the occasion and his talk on the "Ancient Order of the Krunses and misfortunes of the members of the Rotary Club" was rounded up a very pleasant evening of song, food, fun and good cheer.

The guest speaker of the evening was Rev. G. A. Leichliter, of the College street Baptist Church, "Footballer" of Kingston Rotary Club. A. Beauchamp Payne, Fresh from the U.S. Grand Assembly, the speaker was a genuine surprise party. In his usual clear and forceful style and his choice of subject and the way he handled it.

"Truths that Lie" was the subject of the address and in a semi-whimsical manner the speaker showed that truth could be stranger than fiction, and sometimes truths, though axiomatic, were not always accepted on a strange, fanatastic way under the circumstances, but always with a humor as manifested by the speaker, was appreciated.

A soft Southern drawl, rapid changes from wit to wisdom, genuine humor combined with a very attractive personality and a delightful personality, won the speaker admiration as the address proceeded. His grip on the minds of many of Allegheny mountains and night the haunting mysteries of the Great Americans, and many beautiful poems of infinite delight. The description of the Kentucky hills, Kentucky hills, boyhood with its fishing, hunting, swimming, neighborhood, and the girl of his dreams was delightful. The story of the old bronco in the shiny new car—and the place where the old broncos and home lights and memories were permanently into the shadows of the little cemetery where the two marble slabs awakened memories and a real grip of the long ago.

Rotary appreciation for Rev. Mr. Leichliter's splendid address was ably expressed by C. A. Cameron.

GLASS CUTS BOY'S EYE.

Peterboro, May 31. — A bottle thrown through the rear window of his father's automobile, scattering splinters of glass, blinded the eye of James H. Smith, 5-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Smith, 1000 Aylmer street, the sight of his right eye. Mr. Smith was motoring on the road between West Trent and Campbellford accompanied by his wife and son. Without warning, from the interior of the car, a bottle was hurled through the window downward and interior with glass. The right eye-ball of the boy was cut through, and according to a statement by Dr. D. Buchanan, who attended him at St. Joseph's Hospital, there is little hope of the sight being saved.

Beauty..... BY HELEN JAMIESON

Develop Mouth Contour By Massage

Mouths start out well enough. Practically every child has a mouth worthy of lovely fullness and ripe, red freshness. We might say that life does something to those little rosebuds, but that wouldn't be strictly true since the wrecking business is brought about by bad facial habits, emotional storms, lip biting and goodness knows what else.

The mouth that is soft and relaxed belongs by right of cultivation to the girl who is a lazy, thoughtless little pig. There are such. The hard-as-nails mouth is the punishment of the eager. Even so, they needn't stay that way. A change of mind and heart will restore beauty to a mouth that hasn't been given a fair break. A radiant smile does the business. For the moment any way.

The muscles around the mouth are small and delicate. Pull down the lip corners and thereby make muscles conform. Lines creep from lip corners down into the chin. Over lips relax and they thicken; muscles aren't used so they soften under the job. The mouth should, at all times carry an expression of good nature and animation. The inside surfaces of the lips held closely to the teeth, emit slightly lifted.

Facial gestures are pretty terrible on the tongue. Nothing looking is more revealing in surprise, chin drawn in—all these tricks get in their dirty work. Looking in the portrait. Smiles and eyeshine supply expression.

If damages have been done and the muscles refuse to follow a system of repairs, she can do a lot for herself by means of a few simple massage movements. No stop-and-go methods. But faithful treatment every night for the week. Five or five weeks. If a mouth has been going down hill for thirty years or so, it can't be made to ascend to a standard of pulchritude in a few days. It will improve. There is hope for all.

Apply a heavy cream or muscle oil. A light cosmetic isn't good for massaging. It doesn't afford sufficient resistance. Tap in with the finger tips. Might as well go over the entire complexion and neck while you're at it. Skin loves fun, like Mrs. Jack Spratt, it lives and thrives on oils, laps 'em up.

Slap across the outer line of the lips with a quick, gentle pinching movement, working with both hands from lip ends to the centre of the mouth. Be sure that the lips themselves are not laden with the emollient.

Place the thumb at one lip end, second finger at the other, first finger in centre. Keep the finger in the centre stationary, draw the upper lip into a Cupid's bow. This movement is excellent when fine lines have formed on the upper lip, as sometimes happens after birthdays have banked up in frightening style.

Another movement is the fluting motion, lip edges being pulled out with a finger tip. Yet another; place thumbs at lip corners, first fingers at either side of the nose, and work upwards with the thumbs. This is the process that is used in a famous beauty salon.

"For Light, Flaky Biscuits use Magic Baking Powder," says Miss M. McFarlane, dietitian of St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto

"I RECOMMEND Magic because I know it is pure, and free from harmful ingredients."

Miss McFarlane's opinion is based on a thorough knowledge of food chemistry, and on close study of food effects upon the body. On practical cooking experience, too.

Most dietitians in public institutions, like Miss McFarlane, use Magic exclusively. Because it is always uniform, dependable, and gives consistently better baking results.

And Magic is the favorite of Canadian housewives. It outsells all other baking powders combined.

You'll find Magic makes all your baked foods unusually light and tender . . . and gives you the same perfect results every time.

MUSICAL CONCERT HELD BY SCHOOLS

Value of Music and Singing Stressed in Programme

WEST HUNTINGDON— Trustee meeting was held during last week end to once again consider the engagement of a teacher for the ensuing year.

The balance of favour is shown for keeping the same teacher, Mr. Fraser. The interested public are quite ready to endorse Mr. Fraser for another year, for the evidence certainly points that way.

Mr. and Mrs. S. McCurdy spent Saturday last in Belleville on business.

Saturday the 28th was Alex's 6th birthday and a day in Belleville would be quite a celebration for him.

These are the days when the farmer is taking his half holiday and they are mostly filling in the time with a fishing rod & one hand and a plug of Old Chum in the other.

The "Million Dollar" rain about which the farmers have been dreaming and perhaps praying, has actually taken place. It is indeed a fact, that nothing has caused more real satisfaction to one and all than this bountiful rain. The meadows and fields are simply leaping into vigorous growth and the promise is verdant with great expectation.

All are glad to hear that our friend, James Wilson, is rapidly improving in every way and is able to write home a very encouraging account of his progress.

Mr. E. Snider is not improving in health. He is still suffering acutely from that old ailment, gout.

Mr. and Mrs. J. English also Mr. and Mrs. J. Fogey were at church again after several months of prolonged sickness.

A special musical concert was given in the Springstead Hall on Friday and Saturday to demonstrate the value of music. Singing by the pupils of the public schools in this section.

The senior pupils of W. Hunting-don school were well represented. Ten schools in all attended, each taking part and the program easily demonstrated the value of the Visiting Music Supervisor's efforts which appealed to all.

At the Cheese Board in Belleville on Saturday Cheese took another upward turn.

Mr. George Cook is the president for this factory.

Miss E. McInroy lost her pocket book at the school concert on Friday and fortunately it was found by honest people and safely returned.

Mrs. George Post visited at the parsonage on Saturday evening and is quite interested in seeing that repairs etc., are looked after by the board.

Mr. George Dafoe is suffering from a bad attack of rheumatism in his legs and he finds it seriously handicapping him in his work.

Two young men of this neighborhood, John Ashley and Bernard Truscott, both on the Bank of Montreal staff, the former at Picton and latter at Belleville, are home on the old farm.

The ball game between West Huntingdon and Ivanhoe last week end resulted in a serious whipping for West Huntingdon.

Little Mary Lanigan, who has been laid up with a bad attack of scarlet fever, is beginning to pick up a little.

Mrs. Sarah Stapley, one of Ridge Road's oldest and most respected ladies, has been laid up with a very bad cold, which at her age might have been serious. All are relieved to know that it has somewhat subsided.

Mrs. H. Ashley now in the Belleville Hospital, is beginning to pick up. Grave fears were entertained for her recovery, but things have changed for the better.

Rev. W. H. Truscott had good news from the Old Country on Friday last. Both his father and mother are ill in bed and both are in a serious condition. His father is 83 and the mother 81.

Pastor Truscott had a telephone message from his daughter in New York, Miss Phyllis Truscott, Reg. N. and she regretfully informed her father that conditions forbade her leaving on holidays this year, for evidently nurses are having a hard time in New York.

Much improvement is being made in the Little Red School. The rural school has been very unfortunate in having several changes of teacher but Miss Turnwood, the present teacher, has put new life in the school and all its pupils. Her improvement is very gratefully recognized.

Rev. W. H. and Mrs. Truscott visited at Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Hagerman's on Saturday evening.

Mrs. W. Pitchell presided at the piano for Sunday services and the church in the absence of the regular organist who is away.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dafoe of Carmel were Sunday visitors at Mr. and Mrs. W. Pitchell's.

There was an attendance of eighty-five at Sunday School.

Mrs. A. Ashley was on the sick list on Sunday last.

Mrs. Bush of Wellington, was visiting her daughter, Mrs. George Mcmurdy over the week end.

A good attendance at Church on Sunday night when the pastor gave the third sermon of the series on "The Needs of the Church". The points stressed: the need for regeneration of heart rather than reformation of manners.

Gents—J. Bunnell first; C. Bunnell, second; H. A. Hogan, third. Mr. Hogan was also winner of the lucky chair prize.

The door prize a twenty-four pound bag of flour was won by Miss Marjorie Mossman.

After the distribution of prizes, refreshments were served, dancing was then indulged in for some time, suitable music for same being provided by Miss H. Darrah's orchestra.

Prizes were donated by Chas. L. Hyde, A. E. Woonacott, S. Llomoe, F. Ward, F. Mossman, W. Bamford, A. Gray and R. Simpson. The boys composing the ball team were small stated at the success of the event.

Steel and Other Stocks Recover Some Points

New York, May 31.—After one of the sharpest declines of recent months, the stock market recovered partially today. Comment with President Hoover's message to Congress, urging balancing of the budget through adoption of the manufacturers sales tax and government economies.

The list slumped one to more than three points in the morning trading, but financial quarters manifested considerable disappointment over the apparent shelving of the sales tax in the message. Relief that the Bruening government in Germany, and war debt trade advices, particularly those from the steel industry.

Steel's Recovery.

U. S. Steel recovered most of a decline of 1¼ points, which had carried it down to 39. American Telephone, after declining two to three points, pared Allied Chemical, American Can, American Tobacco B, Consolidated Gas, and Union Pacific, recovered about a point, after selling off one to more than two points. Westinghouse, Allied Chemicals and Utilities bore the brunt of the early selling. Declines of two to three points appeared in such issues as Borden, Corn Products, People's Gas, Dupont, Drug, Hudson & Manhattan, Kennecott, Penney, Norfolk and Western and others. Trading was one to nearly two points had included General Electric, Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Secony-Vacuum, Loew's, Liggett and Myers, Reynolds, Johnson and many others.

The selling was again in fairly modest volume, but buyers remained extremely cautious, in view of the uncertainties surrounding so many aspects of the financial outlook.

SHAMROCKS ON TOP IN LOOP

Defeat C. P. R. 16 to 15 and Have Yet to Lose Game

Trenton, May 31 (Special)—The Shamrock ball team continued their winning streak by taking the C.P.R. team by a score of 16 to 5. Up until last night, the railroaders were thought to be real contenders for first place but after the Shamrocks got through with them that thing don't look quite so rosy. Les Johnson at short had repeated his Vimy, who had been filling in the position to perfection. Vic has been very lucky in the summer but it is to be hoped, that he will return to his usual form before long, soon. An error by Filion in centre field cost them another two runs. Coughlin in the box for the Shamrocks was as cool and collected as ever holding the C.P.R. until the last inning, when they found him for four hits, resulting in five runs, the smart team work back of him were able to collect three more third before any damage was done. Line-up:

C.P.R.—Sternberg c; Burtt p; Regin 1st; Bernard 2nd; Johnson ss; Doyle 3rd; Filion lf; Johnson cf; Jack Smith rf.

Umpires: Plate Lewis; base Purdy.

$500,000 FOR WAR VETERANS

This Estimate to Take Care of War Prisoners' Aid

Ottawa, May 30 (By The Canadian Press)—Reports have reached veterans' organizations in various centres that there is no money in the reparations treasury for Canadian veterans who suffered ill-treatment in German prison camps whereas the sum of $500,000 was granted to naturalized Armenians who lost relatives and properties in the Turkish massacres. It was explained at the Secretary of State Department today that these reports are not accurate. A vote of $500,000 was put in the estimates last session to look after Canadian veterans who suffered in German prison camps. That amount is available.

Massacre of Armenians

In 1915 there was a massacre of Armenians by the Turks. Under the Lausanne treaty it was arranged by Great Britain, France Italy, and Spain that the $300,000 in Turkish bonds, credit of Turkey in Germany be used to reimburse the Armenians who suffered, in the massacre. A commission sat in Paris and adjudicated on these claims.

GOLD OUTPUT WILL BE OVER 60 MILLION

Statement is Made By Member of Institute

Sudbury, Ont., May 30 (CP)—Canada's gold output for 1932 will have a value of more than $60,000,000, E. J. Carlyle, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy predicted in an address to the Sudbury branch of the organization Saturday.

Mr. Carlyle pointed out the Dominion has increased the value of her mineral products from $177,000,000 in 1892, to $311,000,000 in 1929, an 18-fold expansion; and even in 1931, notwithstanding the depressed condition of markets output of Canadian metals had a value of $220,000,000. Gold production alone last year was $55,000,000, he said, and in 1932 will reach a total of $60,000,000.

MINIMUM LEVY ON STOCK SALES LOST

Controversial Provision is Eliminated

Washington, May 30 (AP)—The U. S. Senate upheld its finance committee today in eliminating the controversial House of Representatives provision for a minimum tax rate of one fourth of one per cent. on stock transfers, as it closed the way for the sales tax test.

Senator Reed (Democrat, Washington) sought to restore to the bill a minimum rate of one eighth of one per cent; on the sales values of stocks, but lost by 47 to 34.

The minimum levy was then completely eliminated, leaving the flat tax of four cents a share on stocks.

BROKER DIES IN HIS SUMMER HOME

Montreal, May 30—Walter E. J. Luther, partner of the Brokerage Firm of Craig and Luther, and former member of the Montreal Stock Exchange, was found dead early today in the garage attached to his summer home at Hudson Heights, Que., cause of death was not at once determined, but Dr. F. O. Wallace, the first physician to examine the body, gave his opinion it was heart trouble. As the engine of an automobile was running in the closed garage it was at first assumed carbon monoxide poisoning was the cause, but Dr. Wallace said there was no evidence of that.

Rheumatic PAINS

QUICKLY DESTROYED!

And who at all times is free from twinges of rheumatism? Ordinary liniments are useless, because they are not strong enough. Nerviline exerts an immediate influence upon rheumatic pains, because it is immensely stronger than any other liniment. Nerviline is composed of the most active, pain-subduing remedies known. There's not a case of rheumatism, lumbago or sciatica but will be very quickly helped by the use of Nerviline.

Pain Relieved Quickly.

From White Cove, N.B., comes the statement of Mrs. Mary McAfee. She used this powerful Liniment and knows just how helpful it can be, "I want to say I was completely restored by Nerviline. It has rid me of rheumatism. I will always praise Nerviline for what it has done for me."

"THREE WOMEN"

"What they don't know won't hurt them," Sheila advised her sagely. "Leave them to their ignorance. Had I explained myself, she how, she asked, could she gain wisdom?"

"How indeed — this knowledge worth? At the end of the summer she was little more, Sheila Hardin decided, than a child with her hair still plaited in pigtails, her big blue eyes unshadowed by the headaches, while, as for herself, she was — Sheila smiled wisely, and go away from me and I'll never bother you. I'll never leave me, a stranger."

Marriage? But she's a child! Sheila decided.

She said, aloud, "I have never approved of early marriages. I was thirty when I married your grandfather."

"But mother—"

"Your mother was twenty," Louise acknowledged, indifferently.

Joyce turned her eyes from her mother's fleeting face. She thought, as she had thought a hundred times, each time with the same measure of astonishment... only—only—when I'm eighteen that fall she will be forty.

She wondered, not for the first time, how old Louise was; her mother had not remarried.

Some days later she spoke to Yvonne.

"You know you said I might tell the family about Reginald?"

"Yes. But please don't call him that."

"Reggie, then?"

"Reggie in the heavens—are you Wodehouse?"

"Not that you'll call him?"

"That's no go either,' said Yvonne, swiftly.

They laughed a little, walking home to Joyces' from the uptown school. It was a long walk in the crisp air, reddening their cheeks, blowing fresh color into their eyes.

"Well, what about your family?"

"Not much. But they've begun to fuss over me. Mother came to my room the other night, like a little Nemesis, nervous, and afraid of being caught. She talked to me."

"About what?"

"Oh, love and girls and boys and how one must be very, very careful and something about innocence and youth and not being carried off your feet by something that looked like the real thing and was not."

"More cabbage-stork business?"

"I suppose so. When she left I think—I'm not sure—but I think she was crying."

"It was a sentimental generation, as I said," Yvonne remarked with her I-am-older-than-the moon-air.

"And grandmother—"

"What about her? Surely, she didn't—heavens above, she's forgotten all she ever knew! I'll lay my new hat to your last year's galoshes that she's at the set where she believes in-cabbage-leaves!"

Joyce chuckled.

"Well, she wasn't sentimental at all, evenin. She called me to her room, made me sit down on a hassock. I learned my prayers and my letters from that same perch, Yvonne, and she talked for an hour. It was all about purity and traditions and decency and how terrible the times are and I must keep myself unspoiled from the world."

"And how to live — but of it then!"

After a minute during which they negotiated a crossing, Joyce said, "I've had two proposals."

"Who?"

"Did you say 'Hugh?' For one was Hugh. It was a letter, very repentant— about the show girl — but I guess he has to. I would forgive and make him—good and happy? He—well, actually, I don't want to make any man good and happy. Can't they be it by themselves?" asked Joyce, irritably.

"The other —I don't think you know him—I met him this summer, he's from Cleveland. Clever, some and nice. I don't want him. If Grandmother and Mother knew about all this they'd swoon."

"What do you want?"

Joyce stopped dead in the middle of Fifth Avenue to the horror of a traffic policeman who had been blown his whistle. Yvonne dragged her from the path of an advancing truck and three screaming cars and they arrived on the other side, breathless, laughing.

"Idiot!"

"Well, you asked me. I wanted to answer. I don't want anything—uncertain. You understand that—

"And before I want anything like that, marriage I mean—households —children—Yvonne, does that ever occur to you when you're thinking of The Honorable—I want to discover myself, Work. Know things. Get out and come to grips with something—heaven knows what."

"Provided you do get out—your grandmother—"

"Grandmother?"

"Gripe!"

They understood this abridged language perfectly. Joyce shrugged the slim shoulders under the beaver coat.

Perhaps. Does she think I'm going to sit in that house for another hundred years, with my feet on a footstool and some sewing in my flat, waiting for an entirely suitable young man to walk in, attended by his mother, his cousins and his aunts and ask me to ask for my hand in holy matt?

"Joyce, you're invaluable! Yes, I imagine that is about the line of her reasoning. However, don't you ask Miss Cora? She's seen more than one girl married in her time and she's done her little bit to help 'em."

"Miss Cora," as the girls always called her, was principal of the school Yvonne and Joyce attended It was a very good school It really believed in education. It was a school so careful of its reputation that admission to it was not easy. It had been called a snobbish school for years by those not admitted to it, and it had for its guidance one of the gentlest and wisest of living women.

Miss Cora was always within reach of her pupils. Day scholars and boarders, they knew where to find her, in the white panelled office that was not like an office at all. At tea time, an hour especially sacred to the girls, there was a steaming samovar and muffins and the sort of sticky cakes girls like. Every day. And every day there were girls in the room, to balance fragile cups on their knees, to lick their little fingers forgetfully, so ask their eager questions, bestow their confidences—oh, Miss Cora, I'm so miserable! Dear Miss Cora, what shall I do now?

Miss Cora was alone the day Joyce went in to see her. She heard her pupil out, in smiling silence, her long fingers busy with the tea things, her eyes kindly and intent under the beautiful, white hair.

"So you wanted to study medicine?"

McAuliffe.

"It is not too late—if you're willing to work a great many years. There'll be college first, you know."

"I'd be willing. But they wouldn't let me. I've tried again and again, ever since I was quite little, Grandmother doesn't approve. She'd never let me go away from home, she's said so."

Miss Cora knew Louise Sheldon. Joyce had been entered on the school lists when she was a baby, and when she reached the requisite age Mrs. Sheldon had put Miss Cora through a remarkable cross-examination. Miss Cora smiled, remembering.

"No, I suppose it is out of the question, my dear." She added thoughtfully: "Your best work here has been done in biology and chemistry."

"I love it."

"Now, why—exactly?"

"Oh—finding out—experimenting —seeing things come right—the mystery of it all, the delicacy, the accuracy of work almost without breathing, keeping your mind fixed, undistracted—"

"Barnard offers courses." Miss Cora said, thinking, "in histology, for instance. You'd like that. In the Zoological Department. There's a biology course that—would come first. You'd live at hime. There are other subjects open to you, also —you could get a B.S. if you worked for it. You'd have to work, my dear."

"Oh, but I would, Miss Cora!"

"I'll find out for you. You could start with those I have mentioned. See how it work out. You can speak to your grandmother, and I will talk to Mrs. Sheldon too, if you like." She looked affectionately at the slight, vibrant figure. "You have to find a work outlet for all that energy, Joyce," she said.

With acute misgivings Joyce presented her plan to her grandmother. She garnished it with appeals and served it up on a silver platter of enthusiasm. What if she should say no? That was the ultimatums stood. It was worse than useless. Joyce knew; his endeavor to enlist her mother as an ally.

Mrs. Sheldon heard her granddaughter out, in an unbetraying silence. She then remarked, "I had planned your debut for the autumn following your graduation."

"But I don't want to come out," Joyce cried. "I'd hate it—lace and ruffles and smiles and all the rest of it. I want to do something really worth while."

"And you feel these courses would be worth while?" asked Louisa. She was extremely hazy on the subjects in which Joyce had shown an interest. In her day young women took no note of such things. It would have been considered very unfeminine. Joyce had never heard the word before. What were the structural intricacies of tissues to her?

"Yes. I'm so awfully keen, Grandmother."

Louisa considered. After all, it was not such an impossible solution. Twenty years ago a debut was a dignified affair. A girl made her little shuttlecock bow to an ordered society and then waited for some solid citizen to come along and marry her. After which, she had children. It was unfortunate that Nature argued from cause to effect, but a wise woman overlooked that fact.

"THE STRANGE CASE OF CLARA DEANE" BRINGS NEW GLORY TO SCREEN

Wynne Gibson, the talented young actress who stepped from the musical comedy stage to success in the talkies by way of "Nothing But the Truth," "Ladies of the Big House," and "Two Kinds of Women", has her first big starring role with Paramount in "The Strange Case of Clara Deane" at the Belle today and Wednesday, matinee daily.

In this talkie version of Arthur M. Berlanti's brilliant stage play, Miss Gibson attains to heights that will bring her great fame in the annals of the photoplay.

The story takes the audience over a span of about twenty years, and the gruelling metamorphosis of the hapless Clara Deane through the years of trying circumstances is shown with all the production value, all the skill of advanced artistry in the use of make-up for which Paramount is famous.

Married to a worthless man, on the eve of his sentence for embezzlement, she struggles valiantly during the next five years to bring happiness to the life of their little daughter. Power over him, her child and her husband gets into a series of "jams" and she finally he is discaught, Clara Deane is accused and sentenced as his accomplice. Her daughter is adopted by the detective chief of the city, who brings her up as his own into elegant young womanhood. Released from prison, Clara Deane finds a job as a seamstress. She reads with a twinge of pride of what her daughter is about to be married to a worthy young man, and then begins her fight for making herself known to the young woman. Meanwhile her husband has one of the daughter's happy position in society—and threatens a blackmail suit unless he will ruin the happiness of the young bride-to-be.

The climax packs a terrific heartwallop in a series of melodramatic incidents, with Miss Gibson as the heroine. The ending is not the customary happy ending, but one more satisfying medium of happiness.

Supporting Miss Gibson are Sari Gall Kornfeld, Joe Hachey, Rita La Roy, Lucille Powers, Dickie Jackson, William Pawley and Clarence Wilson.

WARNER BAXTER IN "AMATEUR DADDY"

Thrills, action, excitement and romance are part of the daily existence of Jim Hart, but now and again a story comes along that intermingles these qualities so closely and so rapidly that even a veteran player must call upon every faculty at his command to handle the role. "Such a story is "Amateur Daddy", Warner Baxter's latest picture opening Wednesday at the Capitol Theatre. During its filming, Baxter was called upon to perform no less than eight dramatic episodes, each of which was attended with extreme personal danger.

Jim Hart, a construction engineer, Baxter is seen in an accident which sweeps him from a steel girder high above the floor of a mountain canyon.

Following the accident, in which his best friend is killed, Baxter goes to the little town of Scotch Valley, in California, to care for the orphaned children of his friend. There he finds their little ranch the object of a fierce neighbor's greed, and his arrival leads inevitably to a fight in which he demonstrates his fists ability.

As a reprisal for his physical defeat, David Landau, the rancher's neighbor, next resorts to a bomb to blow up the rancher's irrigation canal. The filming of this scene called for Baxter to be within range of the falling debris, a ticklish enough spot for anyone despite the precautions which the movie technicians employ in the use of explosives.

Landau then stirs up mob hatred against Baxter with a charge of unasked group of infuriated neighbors taking Baxter to a near-by field where by him to a tree and proceed to horsewhip him.

This brings to the tense dramatic climax of the picture, which includes a stirring fist fight with the lumbering affray in which Baxter is involved.

John Blystone directed "Amateur Daddy," in which Marian Nixon is featured in the leading feminine role. The large supporting cast includes Frankie Darro, Joan Peers, Gail Kornfeld, Joe Hachey, Rita La Roy, Lucille Powers, Dickie Jackson, William Pawley and Clarence Wilson.

HITLER PARTY MAY CONTROL GERMAN STATE

Lack of Army's Loyalty to Bruening Cause of German Collapse

EARLY ELECTION

Hitlerites Count Upon Triumph at Polls

By Frederick Kuh
United Press Staff Correspondent

Berlin, May 31.—The moderate government of Chancellor Heinrich Bruening fell Monday before the rising tide of German Fascism.

There were many reasons assigned by the tottering Bruening Cabinet for its downfall, but the immediate cause was Hindenburg's refusal to back Bruening's drastic condition of Bruening no longer having the confidence of the people, and his reported conviction that a coalition of the Right could mind the present Government in power.

The Fascists hailed the resignation with the triumphant slogan: "Our hour has come."

Hindenburg, after accepting the resignation the President began negotiations with party leaders which appeared certain to forestall the fall of the Cabinet. The regime dominated by Adolph Hitler's Nazi Party.

The Hitlerite Government, which would be a coalition of the German political development, would be a coalition of the Nazis and Nationalist parties, supported by Chancellor Hitler's right-wing factions.

The belief in most authoritative political circles last night was that the Hitlerites would accept the designate either a Fascist or a Nationalist Cabinet, but would control it.

The new cabinet would then face the Reichstag with the promise of support of Bruening's Catholic Centrist Party, which would be defeated shortly. Then Hitler's demand for dissolution of the Reichstag and calling of new elections, which would be granted, certain to give him a strong right-wing Parliament, which, in turn, would be met. The long-heralded Fascist-Nazi battle would then begin in earnest.

Berlin, May 31.—The possibility that the Bruening Government's partial moratorium on private debts, shortly in force in Great Britain and the United States, appeared to be the underlying cause of German fears that the Lausanne reparations conference would fail.

To a certain extent these indirect causes were given by the Berliner Tageblatt, one newspaper concluded the foreign creditors would lose some 40,000,000,000 marks—about the money they invested in German.

This conclusion was based on estimates that Germans saved abroad totalling 6,500,000,000 marks, compared with 22,500,000,000 marks in liabilities.

130 YEAR OLD PEW IN OSHAWA CHURCH

In 1792 a colony of German settlers from Pennsylvania, who had formed one of the first settlements in Markham Township. Here a modern church was built by the Lutheran congregation in Unionville. Some years ago the old church furniture became scattered, but by the efforts of the historical researches Dr. Kaiser came upon one of the pews. It is now being repaired, while A. J. H. Cobourg Hen Mothers Family of Cat

Cobourg, May 30.—Miss Mae Mulholland, Grafton, owns a hen of the "believe-it-or-not" variety. Miss Mulholland's cat had kittens, four of them, and the old hen being without family decided to adopt them. Every day she hands the fluffy kittens under her expansive wings and refuses to let the mother cat come near. The kittens know where their milk is, but as soon as they have fed and the old hen clucks, back they go to her in spite of the appealing moans of their mother. The cat now lies down beside the hen.

TOKIO FLIGHT ENDS IN SEA PAIR ESCAPE

PARACHUTES USED

Flier Slightly Injured, is Picked up With Companion

Seattle, May 31.—Nat G. Browne, Texas corpuncher, leaped to safety in a parachute Monday when his heavily loaded monoplane, "Lone Star," crashed into Puget Sound at the start of his second attempted non-stop flight to Tokio across the Pacific in quest of $25,000 in prizes.

Frank Brower, professional parachute jumper and stunt man, who was in the "Lone Star" with him likewise took to his parachute, and together the aliators fell into the water. Both parachutes failed to open until the fliers were dangerously near the surface.

Browne, victim of a series of jinxes, was attempting to refuel over the sound when a weighted hose from the refueling ship, piloted by Frank Whaley, struck the "Lone Star's" ailerons.

The big crimson Fokker dived crazily, out of control. Browne desperately tried to right it, but collapsed. Then the ship seemed to fall in pieces.

Seeing all hope of saving the plane gone, the two men jumped. The refueling motorboat picked them up and they were taken to Whidbed General Hospital for examination.

Browne had a dislocated left shoulder. Brower was uninjured. The latter had planned to descend in a parachute after refueling the "Lone Star".

Crowds Saved from Runaway Team But Montreal Man Gives His Life

Montreal, May 31—A 50 year old man, escaping a tank from which a man 20 years his junior might well have shrunk, yesterday laid down his life to save scores of pedestrians from possible serious injury. His name: Matthews, an electrician employed by the Public Works Commission, whose attempt to stop a pair of maddened horses, hitched to a delivery wagon, was successful but who was killed when one of the wheels passed over his head when he slipped and fell. Death was instantaneous.

Scores of men and women, on their way to work, crowded McGill Street when the team broke away and while the driver, Ovila Deaudlin, was loading the wagon. They ran madly through the crowd which broke and scattered to doorways and sidewalks. The heavy wagon swayed from side to side of the street as the horses bolted up Bleury.

Matheus was about to turn into his office in the customs house when he saw the team coming towards him. He ran out, grabbed the reins which were tied to the driver's seat. He succeeded in checking the horses almost down to a walk and spectators were just beginning to cheer him when he lost his grip, staggered and fell to the pavement. The wagon passed over him. The horses trotted a few yards and came to a stop.

Eyewitnesses were convinced that but for Matheus' effort a number of persons would almost certainly have been injured.
